 Callyd Albyen, fyrst from them rennyng,
 Wyth grevous throwys afore ther chyldyng.

And

16. And truly that ys the cause pryncypall,
Why Phylosophers chargyd us to be pacyent
Tyll tyme the Water were dryed to powder all,
Wyth nurryshyng hete contynuall but not vyolent,
For qualytes be contrarious of every element,
Tyll after Black in Whyte be made a unyon,
And then forever congelyd wythout dyvyfyon.
17. And furthermore the preparacion of thys conversyon
Fro thyng to thyng, fro one state to another,
Ys done only by kyndly and descrete operacion
Of Nature, as ys of Sperme wythin the Mother:
For Sperme and Hete as Syster be and Brother,
Whych be converted wythin themself as Nature can
By accion, and passyon, and at the last to parfyt Man.
18. For as the bodely part by Nature whych ys consumate
Into Man, ys such as the begynner was,
Whych though yt thus fro thyng to thyng was alterat,
Not owte of kynd to minge with other kynds dyd yt pas;
And so our Mater spermatycall wythin one Glas,
Wythin hyt selfe must turne fro thyng to thyng,
By here most temperate only hyt noryshyng.
19. Another example naturall I may thee tell,
How the substance of an Egg by nature ys wrought
Into a Chyk, not pasyng out of the shell,
A playner example coud I not have thought,
And there conversions be made tyll forth be brought Fro state to state the lyke by lyke yn kynd,
Wyth nurryshyng hete: only bere thys yn mynd.

20. Another example here may you also rede,
 Of Vegetable thyngs takyng consyderacyon;
 How every Plant growyth of hys owne seede,
 Thorow Hete and Moysture by naturall operacyon,
 And therefore Mineralls be nurryshyd by mynystracyon;
 Of Moysture radycall, whych theyr begynnyng was,
 Not passyng theyer kynd wythin one Glas.
21. There we them turne fro thyng to thyng agayne,
 Into ther Moder the Water when they go;
 Whych pryncyple unknowen thou labourest in vayne:
 Then ys all Sperme, and thyngs ther be no mo,
 But kynd wyth kynd in number two;
 Male and Female, Agent and Pacyent,
 Wythin the matryce of the Erth most oryent.
22. And these be turnyd by Hete fro thyng to thyng
 Wythin one Glas, and so fro state to state,
 Tyll tyme that Nature do them bryng
 Into one substance of the Water regenerate,
 And so the Sperme wythin hys kynde ys alterate,
 Abyll in lykenes hys kynde for to Mulpteple,
 As doth in kynde all other thyngs naturally.
23. In the tyme of thys seyde proceffe naturall,
 Whyle that the Sperme consevyd ys growyng;
 The substance ys nurryshed wyth hys owne Menstruall, Whych Water only out of the Erth dyd bryng,
 Whose colour ys Greene in the fyrst showing,
 And for that tyme the Son hydyth hys lyght,
 Taking hys course thorow owte the North by nyght.
 The

24. The seyde Menstrue ys, (I say to the in counsell)
The blod of our Greene Lyon, and not of Vytrioll,
Dame Venus can the trewth of thys the tell,
At thy begynnyng to counsell and yf thou her call :
Thys secret ys hyd by Phylosophers grete and small ;
Whych blode drawn owte of the seyde Lyon,
For lac of Hete had not perfyte Dygestyon.
25. But thys blode our secret Menstruall,
Wherewyth our Sperme ys nurryshed temperatly,
When it ys turnyd into the fecys Corporall,
And becom Whyte perfytly and very Dry,
Congelyd and Fyxyd into hys owne body ;
Then brustyn blod to syght yt may well seme,
Of thys warke namyd the mylke whyte Dyademe.
26. Understonde now that our fyery Water thus acuate,
Is called our Menstruall water, wherein
Our Erth ys losyd and naturally Calcenat
By Congelacyon that they may never twyne :
Yet to Congele more water thou may not blyn
Into thre parts of the acuate water seyde afore,
Wyth the 4th part of the Erth congelyd & no more.
27. Unto that substance therefore so congelat,
The fowerth part put of water Crystallyn
And make them then together to be Dysponsat
By Congelacyon into a myner metallyne,
Whych lyke a sworde new slypyd then wyll shyne,
After the Blacknes whych fyrst wyll showe,
The fowerth parte geve yt them of water new.

28. Mo Inbybycyons many must we have yett;
 Geve yt the second, and after the thyrd also,
 The seyde proportyon kepe well in thy wyt;
 Then to another the fowerth tyme loke thou go,
 The fyfth tyme and the sixth, passe not there fro:
 But put two parts at eche tyme of them three,
 And at the seventh tyme fyve parts let there bee.
29. When thou hast made thus seven tymes Inbybycion,
 Ageyne then must thou turne thy Whele,
 And Putrefy all that Matter wythowte addycyon:
 Fyrst Blacknesse abydyng yf thou wylt do well,
 Then into Whytenes congele yt up eche dele,
 And by Rednes into the Sowth assend,
 Then hast thou brought thy Base unto an end.
30. Thus ys thy Water then devydyd in partyes two,
 Wyth the fyrst party the Bodys be Putryfycat,
 And to thyn Inbybycyons the second part must go,
 Wyth whych the Matter ys afterwards Denygrat,
 And sone uppon by esy Decoccyon Albyfycate:
 Then yt ys namyd by Phylosophers our Sterry Stone,
 Bryng that to Rednes, then ys the sixth Gate woon.

Of

OF CIBATION.

The seventh Gate.

1. NOW of Cibacion I turne my pen to wryte,
 Syth yt must here the seventh place occupye;
 But in few words yt wylbe expedyte,
 Take tent therto, and understond me wyttyly;
Cibacion ys callyd a fedying of our Matter dry
 Wyth Mylke, and Mete, whych moderatly they do,
 Tyll yt be brought the thyrd order unto.
2. But geve yt not so much that thou hyt glut,
 Beware of the Dropsey, and also of Noyes Flood;
 By lyttyll and lyttyll therfore thou to hyt put
 Of Mete and Drynke as femyth to do hyt good,
 That watry humors not overgrow the blood:
 The Drynke therfore let hyt be mesuryd so,
 That kyndly appetyte thou never quench therfro.
3. For yf yt drynke to much, then must yt have
 A Vomyte, ells wyll yt be syk to long;
 Fro the Dropsey therfore thy Wombe thou save,
 And fro the Flux, ells wyll hyt be wrong,
 Whych rather lat yt thyrst for drynke amonge:
 Then thou shold geve yt overmuch at ons
 Whych must in youth be dyattyd for the nons.

4. And yf thou dyatt hyt (as Nature doth requyre)
Moderatly tyll hyt be growen to age,
Fro Cold hyt kepyng and nurryshyng wyth moyst Fyre;
Than shall yt grow and wax full of corrage,
And do to thee both plesure and advauntage :
For he shall make darke Bodys hole and bryght,
Clenfying theyer Leprosenes thorow hys myght.
5. Thre tymes thus must thou turne about thy Whele
Abowte kepyng the rewle of the seyd Cibacyon,
And then as sone as yt the Fyre doth fele,
Lyke Wax yt wylbe redy unto Lyquacyon;
Thys Chapter nedyth not longer protestacion :
For I have told thee the dyatory most convenyent
After thyne Elements be made equypolent.
6. And also how thou to Whytnes shalt bryng thy Gold;
Most lyke in fygure to the lenys of an hawthorn tre,
Callyd Magnessya afore as I have told ;
And our Whyte Sulfur wythowte conbustebyllte,
Whych fro the fyre away wyll never fle :
And thus the seventh Gate as thou desyred
In the upspring of the Son ys conqueryd.

OF SUBLIMATION.

The eight Gate.

1. Here of our Sublimacion a word or two,
 I have to speke, whych the eyghth Gate ys
 Folys do Sublyme, but Sublyme thou not so,
 For we Sublyme not lyke as they do I wys;
 To Sublyme trewly therfore thou shall not mys:
 If thou can make thy Bodys first spirituall,
 And then thy Spyryts as I have tought the corporall.
2. Som do Mercury from Vitriall and Salt sublyme,
 And other spryts fro Scales of Yern or Steele,
 Fro Eggshells calcynynd and quyk lyme,
 And on theyer manner hyt they Sublyme ryght well,
 But such Sublymyng accordyth never adele
 To our entent, for we Sublyme not so,
 To trewe Sublymyng therfore now wyll I go.
3. In Sublymacyon fyrst beware of one thyng,
 That thou Sublyme not to the top of thy Vessell,
 For without vyolence thou shalt yt not downe bryng
 Ageyne, but there yt wyll abyde and dwell;
 So hyt rejoyfyth wyth refrygeracion I the tell:
 Kepe hyt therfore wyth temperat hete adowne
 Full forty dayes, tyll hyt wex black abowen.

4. For then the Sowle begynnyth for to com owte,
 Fro hys owne vaynys ; for all that subtyll ys,
 Wyll wyth the Spryts assend withouten dowte:
 Bere in thy mynde therfore and thynkeon thys,
 How here eclypsyd byn thy Bodys:
 As they do Putrify Sublymyng more and more,
 Into the Water tyll they be all up bore.

5. And thus ther venom when they have spowtyd out
 Into the water, than Black yt doth appeare,
 And become spirituall every dele withoute dowte,
 Sublymyng esyly on our manner
 Into the water which doth hym bere:
 For in the Ayre one Chyld thus must be bore
 Of the Water ageyne as I have seyde before.

6. But when these to Sublimacyon continuall
 Be laboryd so, wyth hete both moyst and temperate,
 That all ys Whyte and purely made spirituall;
 Than Hevyn uppon Erth must be reiterate,
 Unto the Sowle wyth the Body be reincorporate:
 That Erth becom all that afore was Hevyn,
 Whych wyll be done in Sublimacyons sevyn.

7. And Sublimacyon we make for causys thre,
 The fyrst cause ys to make the Body Spirituall;
 The second that the Spryt may Corporall be,
 And becom fyx wyth hyt and substancyall:
 The Thyrd cause ys that fro hys fylth orygynall
 He may be clenzyd, and hys farnys sulphuryose
 Be mynyshyd in hym whych ys infectuose.

Then

8. Then when they thus togeder depuryd be,
 They wyll Sublyme up whyter then Snow;
 That syght wyll gretly comfort the;
 For than anon parfytylly shalt thou know
 Thy Sprytts shall so be a downe I throw:
 That thys Gate to the shalbe unlockyd,
 Out of thys Gate many one be shyd and mockyd.

OF FERMENTATION.

The ninth Gate.

1. Trew Fermentacyon few Workers do understond,
 That secrett therfore I wyll expounde to the,
 I travelyd trewly thorow many a Lond:
 Or ever I myght fynde any that cold tell hyt me;
 Yet as God wolde, (evermore blessed he be,)
 At the last I cum to knowledge therof parfyte,
 Take heede therfore, therof what I do wryte.
2. *Fermentyn*g in dyvers maners ys don,
 By whych our Medcyns must be perpetuate,
 Into a clere Water, som lesyth *So*n and Mone;
 And wyth ther Medcyns makyth them to be Congelate;
 Whych in the Fyer what tyme they be examynate,
 May not abyde nor alter wyth Complement,
 For such Ferments ys not to our intent.

3. But yet more kyndly som other men don
 Fermentyng theyer Medcynes in thys wyse,
 In Mercury dyssolvynge both Son and Mone,
 Up wyth the Sprys tyll tyme wyll aryse,
 Sublymyng them together twyse or thryse:
 Then Fermentacyon therof they make,
 That ys a way, but yet we hyt forsake.
4. Som other ther be whych hath more hap
 To touch the trothe in parte of Fermentyng;
 They Amalgam ther Bodys wyth Mercury lyke papp;
 Then theruppon ther Medcyns relentyng,
 These of our Secretts have som hentyng;
 But not the trewth wyth parfyt Complement,
 Because they nether Putrefy nor alter ther Ferment.
5. That poynt therfore I wyll dysclose to thee,
 Looke how thou dydyst wyth thy unparfyt Body,
 And do so wyth thy parfyt Bodys in every degre;
 That ys to sey fyrst thou them Putrefye
 Her prymary qualytes destroying utterly:
 For thys ys wholely to our entent,
 That fyrst thou alter before thou Ferment.
6. To thy Compound make Ferment the fowerth parte,
 Whych Ferments be only of Son and Mone;
 If thou therfore be Master of thys Arte,
 Thy Fermentacion lat thys be done,
 Fyx Water and Erth together sone:
 And when the Medcyn as wax doth flowe,
 Than uppon Malgams loke thou hyt throw.

And

7. And when all that together ys myxyd
Above thy Glasse well closyd make thy fyre,
And so conteneu hyt tyll all be fyxid,
And well Fermented to desyre;
Than make Proceccyon after thy pleasure:
For that ys Medcyn than ech dele parfyrt,
Thus must you Ferment both Red and Whyte.
8. For lyke as flower of Where made into Past,
Requyreth Ferment whych Leven we call
Of Bred that yt may have the kyndly tast,
And becom Fode to Man and Woman most cordyall;
Ryght so thy Medcyn Ferment thou shall,
That yt may tast wyth the Ferment pure,
And all assays evermore endure.
9. And understond that ther be Ferments three,
Two be of Bodys in nature clene,
Whych must be altryd as I have told thee;
The thyrd most secret of whych I mene,
Ys the fyrst Erth to hys owne Water grene:
And therefore when the Lyon doth thirst,
Make hym drynke tyll hys Belly burst.
10. Of thys a Questyon yf I shold meve,
And aske of Workers what ys thys thyng,
Anon therby I sholde them preve;
Yf they had knowledge of our Fermentyng,
For many man spekyth wyth wondreng:
Of Robyn Hode, and of his Bow,
Whych never shot therin I trow.

But

11. But Fermentacion trew as I the tell
 Ys of the Sowle wyth the Bodys incorporacyon,
 Restoryng to hyt the kyndly smell;
 Wyth tast and color by naturall conspylacyon
 Of thyngs dysseveryd, a dew redynte-gracyon:
 Werby the Body of the Spryte takyth impressiō,
 That eyther other may helpe to have ingressiō.
12. For lyke as the Bodys in ther compaccyon corporall
 May not shew out ther qualytes effectually
 Untyll the tyme that they becom spyrituall:
 No more may Spryts abyde wyth the Bodys stedfastly,
 But they wyth them be fyrst confyxt proportionably:
 For then the Body techyth the Spryt to suffer Fyer,
 And the Spryt the Body to endure to thy desyre.
13. Therefore thy Gold wyth Gold thou must Ferment,
 Wyth hys owne Water thyne Erth cleniyd I mene
 Not ells to say but Element wyth Element;
 The Spryts of Lyfe only goyng betweene,
 For lyke as an Adamand as thow hast sene:
 Yern to hym draw, so doth our Erth by kynde
 Draw downe to hym hys Sowle borne up wyth Wynd.
14. Wyth mynd therefore thy Sowle lede out and in,
 Meng Gold wyth Gold, that is to say
 Make Elements wyth Elements together ryn;
 To tyme all Fyre they suffer may,
 For Erth ys Ferment wythouten nay
 To Water, and Water the Erth unto;
 Our Fermentacion in thys wyse must be do.

15. Erth ys Gold, so ys the Sowle also,
Not Comyn but Owers thus Elementate,
And yet the Son thereto must go,
That by our Whele yt may be alterate,
For so to Ferment yt must be preparat :
That hyt profoundly may joynyd be
Wyth other natures as I seyde to thee.
16. And whatsoever I have here seyde of Gold,
The same of Sylver I wyll thou understond,
That thou them Putrefye and alter as I have told;
Ere thou thy Medcyn to Ferment take in hond,
Forsooth I cowde never fynde hym wythin England:
whych on thys wyse to Ferment cowde me teche
Wythout errour, by practyse or by speche.
17. Now of thys Chapter me nedyth to trete no more,
Syth I intend prolixite to eschew;
Remember well my words therfore,
Whych thou shalt preve by practys trew,
And son and none loke thou renew :
That they may hold of the fyfth nature,
Then shall theyr Tynctures ever endure.
18. And yet a way there ys most excellent,
Belongyng unto another workyng,
A Water we make most redolent :
All Bodys to Oyle wherwyth we bryng,
Wyth whych our Medcyn we make floyng :
A Quynceffens thys Water we call
In man, whych helyth Dysefys all.

19. But wyth thy Bace after my Doctryne preperat,
 Whych ys our Calx, thys must be don;
 For when our Bodys be so Calcenat,
 That Water wyll to Oyle dyssolve them sone;
 Make therefore Oyle of Son and Mone
 Which ys Ferment most fragrant for to smell,
 And so the 9th Gate ys Conquered of thys Castell.

OF EXALTATION.

The tenth Gate.

1. PROcede we now to the Chapter of Exaltacion,
 Of whych truly thou must have knowledge pure,
 Full lyttyll yt ys dyfferent from Sublymacyon,
 Yf thou conceve hym ryght I thee ensure:
 Herto accordyth the holy Scrypture:
 Chryste seyng thus, If I exalted be,
Then shall I draw all thyngs unto me.
2. Ower Medycyn yf we Exalt ryght so,
 Hyt shall therby be Nobylizate,
 That must be done in manners two;
 Fro tyme the parts be dysponsate,
 Whych must be Crusyfyed and examynat:
 And then contumulate both Man and Wyfe,
 And after revyvyd by the Spyritys of Lyfe.

Than

3. Than up to Hevyn they must Exaltyd be,
Ther to be in Body and Sowle gloryfycate;
For thou must bryng them to such subtylyte,
That they assend together to be intronyzate,
In Clowds of clerenesse, to Angells consociate:
Then shall they draw as thou shalt se
All other Bodys to ther owne dygnyte.
4. Yf thou therfore thy Bodys wyll Exaltat,
Fyrst wyth the Sprys of Lyfe thou them augment,
Tyll tyme thy Erth be well subtylyate,
By naturall rectyfying of eche Element;
Hym up exalting into the Fyrmament:
Than much more presyose shall they be than Gold,
Because they of the Quyn tessence do hold.
5. For when the Cold hath overcum the Hete,
Then into Water the Ayre shall turnyd be;
And so two contrarys together shall mete,
Tyll ether wyth other ryght well agre,
So into Ayre thy Water as I tell the;
When Hete of Cold hath gott domynacyon,
Shalbe convertyd by craft of Cyrculacyon.
6. And of the Fyer then Ayer have thou shall,
By losyng Putrefyyng and Sublymyng;
And Fyer thou hast of the Erth materyall:
Thyne Elements by craft thus dysseveryng,
Most specyally the Erth well Calcenyng:
And when they be eche on made pure,
Then do they hold all of the fyfth nature.

7. On thys wyse therfore make them to be Cyrculat,
 Ech unto other exalting by and by,
 And in one Glas do all thys surely sygylate,
 Not wyth thy honds, but as I teche the naturally,
 Fyer into Water then turne fyrst hardely;
 For Fyer ys in Ayer wych ys in Water exyſtent,
 And thys Conuerſyon accordyth to our entent.
8. Than ferthermore turne on thy Whele,
 That into Erth thy Ayre conuertyd be,
 Whych wylbe don alſo ryght well:
 For Ayre ys in Water beyng in the Erth truſt me,
 Then Water into Fyre contraryoſe in ther qualyte:
 Sone turne thou may, for Water in Erth ys,
 Whych ys in Fyer conuerſyon, true ys thys.
9. Thy Whele ys now nygh turnyd abowte,
 Into Ayre turne Erth, whych ys the proper neſt
 Of other Elements ther ys no dowte,
 For Erth in Fyre ys, whych in Ayre takyth reſt,
 Thys Cyrculacyon thou begyn muſt in the Weſt:
 Then forth into the Sowth tyll they exaltyd be,
 Procede dewly as in the Fygyre I have towght the.
10. In whych proces thou may clerly ſe,
 From an extreame how to another thou may not go.
 But by a mene, ſyth they in qualyte contraryoſe be;
 And reſon wyll forſoth that hyt be ſo,
 As hete into cold wyth other contraryoſe mo:
 Wythout theyr menys as moyſt to hete and cold,
 Examples ſufficyent afore thys have I told.

Thus

17. Thus have I tawght the how for to make,
Of all thy Elements a parfyt Cyrculacyon,
And at thy Fygure example for to take,
How thou shalt make thys foresayd Exaltacyon,
And of thy Medcyn in the Elements trew graduacyon:
Tyll hyt be brought to a quynaryte temperat,
And then thou hast conqueryd the Tenth Gate.

OF MULTIPLICATION.

The eleventh Gate.

1. Multiplycacyon now to declare I procede,
Whych ys by Phylosophers in thys wyse dyfynyd,
Augmentacyon yt ys of that Elixer indede,
In goodnes, in quantyte, both for Whyt and Rede,
Multiplycacyon ys therfore as they have seyde: (degre,
That thyng that doth Augment the Medcyns in ech
In Color, in Odor, in Vertue, and also in Quantyte.
2. And why thou may thy Medcyn multeply,
Infynytylly the cause forsoth ys thys.
For yt ys Fyer whych tynded wyll never dye:
Dwellyng wyth the as Fyer doth in housys,
Of whych one sparke may make more Fyers-I wys;
As musk in Pygmments, and other spycys mo,
In vertue multiplyeth and our Medcyn ryght so.

Of Multiplication.

3. So he ys ryche the whych Fyer hath les or more,
Because he may so gretly Multepley;
And ryght so ryche ys he whych any parte hath in store
Of our Elixers whych be augmentable infynytly:
One way yf thou dyssolve our Powders dry,
And oft tymes of them make Congelacyon,
Of hyt in goodnes thou makyst then Augmentacyon.
4. The second way both in goodnes and in quantyte,
Hyt Multyplyeth by Iterat Fermentacion,
As in that Chapter I showyd playnly unto the,
By dyvers manners of naturall Operacyon,
And also in the Chapter of our Cybacyon:
Where thou may know how thou shalt Multepley
Thy Medycyn wyth Mercury Infynytly.
5. But and thou bothe wyll Loose and also Ferment,
Both more in quantyte and better wyll hyt be;
And in such wyse thou may that so augment,
That in thy Glas yt wyll grow lyke a Tre,
The Tre of Hermes namyd, seemly to se:
Of whych one Pepyn a thousand wyll Multyply,
Yf thou can make thy Projeccyon wyttyly.
6. And lyke as Saffron when yt ys pulveryzate,
By lyttyll and lyttyll yf hyt in Lycour be
Temperyd, and then wyth mykyll more Lycour dylate;
Tyngyth much more of Lycour in quantyte, (se
Than beyng hole in hys owne grose nature: so shall thou
That our Elixers the more they be made thyn,
The farther in Tyncture sothfastly wyll renne.

Kepe

7. Kepe in thy Fyer therfore both evyn and morow,
 Fro house to house that thou nede not to renne
 Amonge thy Neyghbors, thy Fyer to sech or borrow,
 The more thou kepyst the more good shall thou wyn,
 Multyplying ey more and morethy Glas wythin:
 By fedyng wyth Mercury to thy lyvys end,
 So shall thou have more than thou nedyst to spend.

8. Thys mater ys playne, I wyll no more
 Wryte now therof, lat Reson the guyde;
 Be never the bolder to Syn therfore,
 But serve thy God the better at ech tyde;
 And whylls that thou shall in thys lyfe abyde,
 Bere thys in mynde, forget not I the pray,
 As thou shalt apere before thy God at domys day.

9. Hys owne gret Gyfts thefore and hys Trefure;
 Dyspose thou vertuofely, helping the poore at nede,
 That in thys World to the thou may procure
 Mercy and Grace with Heavenly blys to mede,
 And pray devoutly to God that he the lede
 In at thys eleventh Gate as he can best,
 Sone after then thou shalt end thy conquest.

Of

OF PROJECTION.

The twelfth Gate.

1. IN Projeccyon hyt shalbe provyd yf our practyse be profy-
Of wch yt behovyth me the secrets here to meve; (table
Therefore yf thy Tyncture be sure and not varyable,
By a lyttyll of thy Medcyn thus shall thou preve
Wyth Mettall or wyth Mercury as Pyche yt wyll cleve :
And Tynct in Projeccyon all Fyers to abyde,
And sone yt wyll enter and spred hym full wyde.
2. But many for Ignorans doth mar that they made,
When on Mettalls unclensyd Projeccyon they make,
For be cause of corrupcyon theyr Tynctures must vade ;
Whych they wold not away fyrst fro the Bodys take,
Whych after Projeccyon be bryttil, bloe, and blacke :
That thy Tyncture therfore may evermore last,
Uppon Ferment thy Medcyn loke fyrst that thou cast.
3. Then brottyl wyll thy Ferment as any glas be,
Uppon Bodys clenfyd and made very pure,
Cast thy brottyll substance and sone shall thou se,
That they shalbe curyosely coleryd wyth Tyncture,
Whych at all assays for ever shall endure :
But at the Psalmys of the Sawter example thou take Profytable Projeccyon parfytyl to make.

On

4. On Fundamenta cast fyrst thys Psalme Nunc Dimittis,
 Uppon Verba mea then cast Fundamenta blyve;
 Than Verba mea uppon Diligam, conseve me wyth thy wytts;
 And Diligam on Attende yf thou lyst to thryve:
 Thus make thou Projeccyons thre fowre or fyve,
 Tyll the Tyncture of thy Medcyn begyn to decrese,
 And then yt-ys tyme of Projeccyon to cese.

5. By thys mysty talkyng I mene nothyng ells,
 But that thou must cast fyrst the lesse on the more,
 Incresyng ever the Number as wyse men the tells,
 And kepe thou thys Secrett to thy selfe in store,
 Be covetuose of connyng yt ys no burden sore:
 For who that joyneth not the Elixers wyth Bodys made clene,
 He wot not what sykerly Projeccyon doth mene.

6. Ten yf thou Multiply fyrst into ten,
 One hundreth, that number wyll make sykerly;
 Yf one hundreth into an hundreth be Multiplied then,
 Ten thousand ys that number counte hyt wyttyly,
 Then into as much more ten thousand multiply:
 That ys a thousand thousand, whych multiplyeth I wys,
 Into as much more as a hundred myllyons ys.

7. That hundred myllyons beyng multiplyed lykewys,
 Into ten thousand myllyons, that ys for to sey,
 Makyth so grete a number I wote not what yt ys,
 Thy number in Projeccyon thus Multiply alwey:
 Now Chyld of thy curtesy for me thou pray;
 Syth that I have told the our secretts all and some,
 To whych I besече God by Grace thou may com.

8. Now thou hast conqueryd the twelve Gates,
 And all the Castell thou holdyft at wyll,
 Kepe thy Secretts in store unto thy ſelſe;
 And the comaundements of God looke thou fullfull:
 In ſyer continue thy glas ſtyll,
 And Mulptely thy Medcyns ay more and more,
 For wyſe men done ſey ſtore ys no ſore.

The end of the Twelve Gates.

THE RECAPITULATION.

1. FOR to bryng thys Tretys to a ſynall end,
 And brevely here for to conclude theſe Secretts all,
 Dylygently loke thou, and to thy Fygure attend:
 Whych doth in hyt conteyne theſe ſecrets grete & ſmall,
 And yf thou conceive both Theorycall and Practycall:
 By Fygures, and by Colors, and by Scrypture playne,
 Whych wyttrely conſeveyd thou mayſt not work in vayn.
2. Conſyder fyrſt the Larytude of thy Precyous Stone,
 Begynnyng in the fyrſt ſyde notyd in the Weſt,
 Where the Red Man and the Whyte Woman be made one,
 Spowſyd wyth the Sprys of lyfe to lyve in love and reſt,
 Erth and Water equally proportyond that ys beſt;
 And one of the Erth ys good and of the Sprys thre, Whych twelve to fowre alſo of the Erth may be.

Three

3. Thre of the Wyfe and one of the Man then must thou take,
And the lesse of the Sprys there be in thys dysponfation,
The rather thy Calcynatyon for certereyne shall thou make,
Then forth into the North procede by obscuratyon;
Of the Red Man and hys Whyte Wyfe callyd Eclypsation:
Lofyng them and alteryng betyxt Wynter and Vere,
Into Water turnyng Erth darke and nothyng clere.
4. Fro thens by colors many one into the Est assends,
There shall the Mone be full apperyng by day lyght;
Then ys she passyd her Purgatory and course at an end;
There ys the uprysyng of the Son apperyng whyt and bryght,
There ys Somer after Vere, and day after nyght: (Ayre;
Than Erth and Water whych were so black be turnyd into
Than clouds of darknes be overblowyn & all aperyth faire.
5. And lyke as the West begynnyng was of the Practyse,
And the North the parfyte mene of profound Alteratyon,
So the Est after them the begynnyng of Speculacyon ys; (tion

Then to wyn to thy desyre thou needst not be in dowe,
For the Whele of our Phylosophy thou hast turnyd abowte.

In whych be comprehendyd all the Secretts of our Phylosophy,
In Chapters 12 made playne to the if thou conseve them well;
And all the Secretts by and by of our lower Astronomye,
How thou Calcin thy Bodys, parfit, dissolve, deuide & putrefie:
Wyth parfyte knowledge of all the polys whych in our Hevyn

7. And thys one Secrett conclusyonal know thou wythouten fayle,
 Our Red Mant teyneth not tyll he teynyed be;
 Therfore yf thou lyst thy ielse by thy craft to avayle,
 The Altytude of thy Bodys hyde & show out theyr profundyte,
 In every of thy Materyalls dystroyng the fyrst qualyte:
 And secundary qualytes more gloryose repare in them anon
 And in one Glas wyth one governaunce 4 Naturs turne into one.
8. Pale, and Black, wyth falce Citryne, unparfyt Whyte & Red,
 Pekoks fethers in color gay, the Raynbow whych shall overgoe
 The Spottyd Panther wyth the Lyon greene, the Crowys byll (bloec as lede;
 These shall appere before the parfyt Whyte, & many other moe
 Colors, and after the parfyt Whyt, Grey, and falce Citrine also:
 And after all thys shall appere the blod Red invaryable,
 Then hast thou a Medcyn of the thyrd order of hys owne (kynde Multyplycable.
6. Thow must devyde thy Elixer whyte into partyes two,
 After thou rubify and into Glassys let hym be don,
 If thou wylt have the Elixers both for Sen and Mone do so;
 Wyth Mercury then hem Multeply unto gret quantyte sone:
 Yf thou at the begynnyng had not as much as wold into aspone:
 Yet moght thou them so Multeply both the Whyte & Red,
 That yf thou levyd a thousand yere they shold the stond in

10. Have thou recourse to thy Whele I counsell the unto,
 And stody tyll thou understond eche Chapter by and by,
 Medyll with no falce Fantesys, Multepliers, let them go, (phye,
 Which wyll the flatter & falcely sey they are connyng in Phylsoso-
 Do as I byd the and then dyssolve these forescyd Baces wyttely;
 And turne hym into parfyt Oyls with our trew water ardent,
 By Cyrculacion that must be don accordyng to our entent.

These

11. These Oyls wyll fyx crude Mercury and convert Bodys all,
 Into parfyt Sol and Lune when thou shalt make Projeccyon,
 That Oyllysh substance pure and fyx Raymond Lilly dyd call
Hys Bafylske, of whych he made never so playne deteccyon,
 Pray for me to God that I may be of hys eleccyon:
 And that he wyll for one of hys on Domys Day me kene,
 And graunt me in hys blys to reygne for ever wyth hym, Amen.

Gloria tibi Domine.

*An Admonition, wherein the Author

1. After all thys I wyll thou understonde,
 For thy savegarde what I have done,
 Many Experiments I have had in hond;
 As I found wryten for Son and Mone,
 Whych I wyll tell the reherfing sone:
 Begynnyng wyth Vermylion whych provyd nought,
 And Mercury sublymyd whych I dere bought.
2. I made Solucyons full many a one,
 Of Spyrytts, Ferments, Salts, Yerne and Steele;
 Wenying so to make the Phylosophers Stone:
 But fynally I lost eche dele,
 After my Boks yet wrought I well;
 Whych evermore untrew I provyd,
 That made me oft full fore agrevyd.

3. Waters corrosyve and waters Ardent,
 With which I wrought in divers wyse,
 Many one I made but all was shent;
 Eggs shells I calcenyd twise or thryse,
 Oyls fro Calcys I made up ryse;
 And every Element fro other I did twyne,
 But profyt found I ryght none therein.
4. Also I wrought in Sulphur and in Vitriall,
 Whych folys doe call the Grene Lyon,
 In Arsenike, in Orpement, fowle mot them fall;
In debili principio was myne Incepcyon:
 Therefore was frawde in fyne the Conclusyon;
 And I blew my thryft at the Cole,
 My Clothys were bawdy, my Stomache was never hole.
5. Sal Armonyake and Sandever,
 Sal Alkaly, sal Alembroke, sal Attinckarr,
 Sal Tarter, sal Comyn, sal Geme most clere;
 Sal Peter, sal Sode, of these beware;
 Fro the odor of Quycksylver kepe the fare:
 Medyll not wyth Mercury precipitate,
 Nether wyth imparfyt Bodys rubyfycate.
6. I provyd Uryns, Eggs, Here, and Blod,
 The Scalys of Yern whych Smethys do of smyte,
 Æs Ust, and Crokefer whych dyd me never good:
 The fowle of Saturne and also Marchasyte,
 Lythage and Antemony not worth a myte:
 Of whych gey Tyntures I made to shew,
 Both Red and Whyte whych were untrew.

7. Oyle of Lune and water wyth labour grett,
I made Calcynnyng yt with salt precipytate,
And by hyt selfe with vyolent hett
Gryndyng with Vynegar tyll I was farygate:
And also with a quantyte of Spyces acuate;
 Uppon a Marble whych stode me oft in cost,
 And Oyles with Corrosyues I made; but all was lost.
8. Many Amalgame dyd I make,
Wenyng to fix these to grett avayle,
And thereto Sulphur dyd I take;
Tarter Egges whyts, and the Oyle of the Snayle,
But ever of my purpose dyd I fayle:
 For what for the more and what for the lesse,
 Evermore somethyng wantyng there was.
9. Wyne, Mylke, Oyles, and Runnett,
The Slyme of Sterrs that falleth to the grownde,
Celydony and Secundynes wyth many moe yett,
In these I practysyd as in my books I found,
I wan ryght nought, but lost many a pownde;
 Of Mercury and Mettalls I made, Chrystall stones,
 Wenyng that hyt had ben a worke for the nonys.
10. Thus I rostyd and boylyd as one of Gebers Cooks,
And oft tymes my wynnyng in the Asks I sought;
For I was dyscevyd wyth many falce Books
Wherby untrue thus truly I wrought:
But all such Experyments awaylyd me nought;
 But brought me in danger and in combraunce,
 By losse of my goods and other grevaunce.

11. For the love of our Lady such lewdnes eschue,
 Medyll wyth no falshood whych never prevyd well;
 Assay when thou wilt and thou shalt fynde me treue;
 Wynn shalt thou nought but lose every dele,
 Pence in thy Pauwkner fewe shalt thou feele:
 In smokes and smells thou shalt have myckle wo,
 That unnethe for syknes on Erth shalt thou go.
12. I never saw true worke treuly but one,
 Of whych in thys tretys the trewth I have told.
 Stody only therfore to make our Stone:
 For therby may thou wyn both Sylver and Gold,
 Uppon my wrytynge therfore to ground the be bold:
 So shalt thou lose nought yf God be thy gyde,
 Trust to my Doctryne and therby abyde.
13. Remember how Man ys most noble Creature,
 In erths Composycyon that ever God wrought,
 In whom are the fowre Elements proportyonyd by nature:
 A naturall Mercuryalyte whych cost ryght nought,
 Out of hys myner by Arte yt must be brought;
 For our Mettalls be nought ells but myners too,
 Of our Soon and our Moone, wyse Reymond seyde so.
14. The clerenes of the Moone and of the Soone, bryght,
 Into these two Myners desendyth secretly,
 Howbeyt the cleernes be hyd fro thy syght:
 By craft thou shalt make ytt to appere openly,
 Thys hyd Stone, thys one thyng therfore putrefye:
 Wash hym wyth hys owne broth tyll whyte he becoom,
 Then Ferment hym wyttely, nowe here ys all and soom.

Now

Now to God Almyghty I thee Recommend,
 Whych graunte the by Grace to knowe thys one thing,
 For now ys thys Treatys brought to an end:
 And God of hys Mercy to hys blyffe us bryng,
Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus, where Angells do syng:
 Praysyng without ceasyng hys gloriose Magestye,
 Whych he in hys Kyngdome graunte us for to see.

LIBER PATRIS SAPIENTIAE.

THow that in thys Boke beginneth to rede, (spede:
Keepe well thys Councell the better schalt thou
Be thou in a place secret by thy selfe alone, (done.
That noe man see or here what thou schalt say or

2. Yet ere thou begun to rede much, take thou good hede,
Wyth whom thou kepest company I counsell thee indede;
Trust not thy freind too much, wherefoere thou goe,
For he that thou trustest best sometyme may be thye Foe.

3. And take hede to the words of the Fader of Wyfdom,
How he techeth hys Sonne how he schould done;
To kepe hys precepts of bodely governance
And wyth hys Conyng he wyll the gretly advance.

4. And yf thou wilt not to hys wordys take hede,
Thow schalt stand here oft in gret feare and dred.
For he that hath a fore wytt he nedes not do amysse,
And he that doth Folly the Folly schalbe hys.

5. Now my dere Sonne be thou not a know
To Lerner nor to Leud, to Hygh nor to Low:
Neyther to Young nor Old, Rych nor Poore,
Unto them thou tech nothing my Lore.

6. Also to scache men that hold themselves wyse,
And so forth to the foolys that glyde on the Ice :
They weene in grete Bokes schould be the Art
Of the Science of Alchemy, but they be not worth a fart.

7. Therefor my Sonn to thee thys Science I may well teach,
And yf thou wylt upon thy enemy be wreach;
Or to purchase or build any good thyng,
It schalbe to thy gret furtheryng.

8. Thys worthy Science of Alchemy if thou wylt it leare,
A lyttle mony out of thy purse thou must forbear ;
To buy therewyth Flos Florum it is most worthiest,
And to build well her Cabyn and her Nest.

9. And if thou put out mony for any other thing,
It is to thy losse ; and to thy great hindring :
Except yt be for thy workes naturall Foode,
Which is had out of Stone, Ayre and Wood.

10. And if thou have all thyngs wythin the growing,
Then thou needest not to buy any manner of thing,
That schould be to thys Science belonging,
But beware of thy selfe for feare of hanging.

11. For then thou and thys Science were for ever lost,
If thou make thereof any manner of boast,
To any Man or Woman, Old or Young,
Beware of thy selfe for feare of discovering.

12. For if thou make any man privie
Of thy Councell, Rich or Needy,
Thou must so beware Sleeping or Waking,
For once ymaging of Money making.

13. For yf God sends thee grace and understanding,
Wyth thys Science thou mayst have good lyving :
But beware of speach of Women liberall,
And of the voice and sight of Children generall.

14. Sonne in thyne owne howse thou maist well gett
A good Morfell of meat thy mouth to sweet,
Both Pheasant, Partridge, Plover and Leveret,
Though thou cry yt not owte in the common Market.

15. Therefore kepe close of thy Tongue and of thy Hand,
From the Officers and Governours of the Land ;
And from other men that they of thy Craft nothing know,
For in wytnes thereof they wyll thee hang and draw.

16. And thereof the People will the at Sessions indight,
And great Treason against the they wyll write;
Wythout that the Kings grace be to thee more,
Thou schalt for ever in thys world be forlore.

17. Alsoe wythout thou be sure of another thyng,
To purchase the Lycence of thy King :
For all manner of doubts thee schall betide,
The better thou maiste Worke, and both goe and ride.

18. Also another thing I schall thee lere,
The poore People take thou nothing deare,
But ever serve thy God alway at the begynnyng,
And among the poore People the better schalbe thy living.

19. Now my Chylde to my precepts looke thou take hede,
Whatsoever fall after the better schall thou spede.
Better it ys to have a thyng, then for it to wish,
For when thou feelt a Sore tis hard for thee to get a Leech.

20. Now my deare Son to the I wyll declare,
More of thys Warke which schalbe thy welfaire ;
If thou canst consider all my sayings,
For therewyth thou mayest finde a full precious thing.

21. And Son though thys Writing be made in Ryme,
Yet take thou thereat noe greate disdaine.
Till thou hast proved my words in deede and in thought,
I watt it well it schalbe set at nought.

22. Therefor of all Bodyes and Spyrits more or lesse,
Mercury is called Flos Florum and worthiest Pryncesse :
 For her Birth and marvelous dealing,
 Sche ys most worthiest to have byne King.

23. For sche ys Erth and Water most heviest,
 And sche will conjoyne wyth Fire and Aire most lyghtest ;
 And so forth wyth her love sche will run and flee,
 For sche delighteth noe other game or glee.

24. Some say that of Sulphur and Mercury all Bodyes minerrall Ingendered in the Erth with divers Colours cladd : (are made,
 By the vertue of Decoccion before Preperacion,
 To the lykenes of every body Mynerall in ther fashion.

25. I will first begin wyth Saturne after other mens sayings,
 How he ys ingendered in the Erth wyth unclene Mercury flying :
 And of Mercury he ys most heviest wyth black Sulphury Erth
 Save he ys soft of fusion, and hys Sulphur nothing fixed. (mixed,

26. Iupiter is a whyte Body made of pure Mercury outward,
 And of clere Sulphur somewhat Erthly and white inward ;
 He ys in kynde softest and well in his fixation,
 For he is almost fixt, but he lacketh Decocction.

27. Mars ys a white Body most of unclene & in the Erth y'made,
 And he ys hardest of fusion with Sulphur Erthly cladd ;
 To blacknes and rednes he will soonest consume,
 By heate or by corrosive when the Spirit beginneth to fume.

28. Sol is the purest somewhat red, & is made of clene & & Sulphur
 Ingendered with clere red Sulphur, in the Erth well mixed, (fixed,
 And therefor he ys without defalt and lacketh no degree ;
 For he ys almost hardest of Fusion and heviest in ponderosity.

29. Venus ys a Body more red of pure & made in hys substance,
 Most of red Sulphur and greene and therein is greate variance :
 In the Erth ingendered with Corrosive and bitter substance,
 Well fixed and hard of fusion, rude in governance.

30. Mercury ys a Body if he be with a Substance moved,
Mixing one kinde with his kinde, so schall he be loved ;
One Spirit received wyth another, the which of them be maine,
Is cause of ingeneration of every body Mettalyne.

31. Luna ys a pure white Body of cleane Mercury & Sulphur white
And sche is a litle hard of fusion & almost well fixed, (ingenerated
And sche is next cleaneft in Tincture of whitenes,
Of Ponderosity light, of Iupiter bearing his whitenes.

32. And soe after the Colour of that Erth ys Sulphuri and re-
Some men do say ys engenerated every Mettall ; (ceptuall,
But my Son the perfect worke of thys alteration,
I schall informe the true way of another fashion.

33. Now have I declared the working of the Bodies Mynerall,
Whereof they be ingenerated after other mens sayings over all ;
And as in place of the Erth one Body was fully wrought,
Soe must the artificiall Medicine, be or else it ys nought.

34. Now will I declare the worthines of Mercury in speciall,
How sche ys the notablest Spirit that ys mynerall,
Most marvelous in working and in degree,
Sche ys called the Matter principallest of the three

35. Also sche ys very subtile in many things artificiall,
Sche will both give and take Tincture most speciall,
To hym or of hym that sche loveth most best,
In speciall when sche ys warmed in her Nest.

36. My Son Mercury ys called the mightiest Flos florum,
And most royall, and richest of all Singularum ;
Sche ys very Patron and Princes most royall,
And sche ys very Mother of every Mettall.

37. Sche ys Vegitable, Animalle and Minerall,
Sche ys Foure in kinde, and One in generall:
Sche ys Erth, Aire, Water and Fyre,
Among all other sche hath no Peere.

38. Sche kylleth and slayeth, and also doth calcine,
Sche dyeth, and also doth sche live againe ;
Sche giveth lyfe and also ingression,
For joyntly sche ys three in one.

39. Sche ys a very frendly mixar,
The progeneration of a greate Elixir :
Sche ys both Body Soule and Spirite,
In Colour very red, black and white.

40. Many be the wooers that hang on her tayle,
But sche will not with them I'deale;
They would her wedd against her will,
With foemen that liken her full ill.

41. Sche will deale with no manner of wight,
But with her Husband as it ys greate right :
With him sche will beare much fruite,
For he ys by nature of her selfe same sure.

42. My Son of hem Fooles have much dispight,
And therin such Fooles loose their light :
For sometymes he ys darke, and sometymes bright,
For he ys lyke no other wight.

43. For if they have their kynde ingendering,
Their naturall foode and good keeping,
They schall increase frute by dene,
Very red and white, King and Queene.

44. My Son in thys Science I doe deny,
All things that be discording truly,
All manner of Salts I doe desie,
And all manner of Sulphurs in waters of Corrosie.

45. Also Alloome, Vitriall, Auripigmentum and Haire,
Gold, Silver, Alkaly and Sandiver ;
Honey, Wax, and Oyles or Calx else,
Gumms, Galls, and also Egg shells.

46. Also

46. Also I defie Antimony, Berrall, and Christall,
Rosin, Pitch, also Amber, Jett and Corral ;
Hearbs, Dated Stones, Marble, or Tinglas,
If there come any of all these it ys the worse.

47. Also Berrills, Gotts Hornes, and Alome plome,
Good with them will none be done ;
All things that discordeth from Mettall,
It ys contrary to thys worke in generall.

48. My Son many fooles to me have sought,
But they and I accord right nought ;
I leave them there as I them finde,
And as Fooles I make them blinde.

49. For whych Mercury they have erred full sore
And then when they had they could doe no more,
Therefor in Phylosophers sche beareth the flower,
For sche ys King, Prince, and Emperour.

50. Yet my deare Son be thou not a knowne
To Learned, nor to Lewde, to High, nor to Low ;
That thys worke standeth by Mercury and in her fire,
Her owne speciall Love both life and deare.

51. For he ys her Son, sche ys hys Fright,
In whome sche worketh all her myght :
He ys her Son, sche ys hys Mother,
Sche loveth him peramore and no other.

52. In Sol, and Lune, in her meeting ys all love,
For of Mercury only ys all her bebove,
And with them sche worketh all her might,
But they may never increase on fright.

53. Therefor it ys possible to cast a Projection pure,
Upon a Million to make a perfect Body of tincture :
Wyth Medicine of Spirits well joyned and fixed,
It schall not be perceived where it ys well mixed.

54. And therefor if there com Silver or Gold in at thy Gate,
The which men use in Aoyne or in common Plate;
I sweare by God that all thys world hath wrought,
All thy labour and warke schall turne to nought.

55. For with what Mettall soever that Mercury be joyned,
Because of her Coldnes and Moistnes sche ys acloyd:
Put them never so close togeder sche will fume anon,
And when they come into the fire sche wil sone be gone.

56. Therefore Mercury hath a Lover that passeth them
A thousandfold, who so will him ken
And he ys her Lover and her Leman sweete,
And so hys Councell sche will keepe.

57. Both in hys Chamber and also in hys Bedd,
Also alive and when they byne dead;
Seeke yee forth fooles as he have fought,
For in all other things finde yee right nought.

58. Now my deare Son to thee I will indight,
The truth in word and deede I will write:
How that a precious Stone shalbe made,
Thee to rejoyce and make thee full glad.

59. As I said in the 32. Chapter unto my Conclusion,
How I schould informe the truth after another fashon,
And to performe thys Science both in word and deede,
In making of our Medicine God must us speede.

60. The which ys called the greate Elixer,
And ys verily made with a stronge mixar;
The which is a Stone very Minerall,
And thow maist him well gett ever all.

61. My Son thow schalt take to Mercury no other thing,
But Erth that's heavy and hard and stiff standing:
The which in himselfe ys derke bright dry and cold,
To joyne them togeder thow maist be full bold.

62. One of them to 10 parts of that Water running most heaviest
And they schalbe both one, and to thy warke most mightiest:
Then hast thou Man and Woman togeder brought,
The which ys done by greate love in a thought.

63. The which two be both Spirits, & one Body most heaviest,
When they be in your Chamber and bed joynted in the Element
The which ys more bigger, and bigger hott and dry, (lightest,
And therein they will both kifs togeder & neither weepe nor cry.

64. For when Erth and Water ys well mixed,
By the vertue of the lightest Element well hardned and fixed:
For before that time they be Water running both,
And then schall turne to fix body be they never so loath.

65. For in their bed they schall make a perpetuall Conjunction,
After the feeding of the light Element and of their proportion;
Soe schould they be decoct, having the parfekt fixacion,
In the likenes of a body in fusion having hys fashon.

66. But at the first in their Bed they may indure no greate heate,
Soe as they may well labour in their Bed for sweate:
Att the first if there be in their Chamber overmuch red Colour,
Hastily going thereto will cause greate Dolour.

67. For in their first Nest they schould be both water running,
And because of heate they schould be ever drying,
And so therein become a subtile dry Substance,
The which warke schall thee greatly avauce.

68. Therefor their Nest must be made of a strong kinde,
Of the most hardest and clearest Body, that they not out winde;
For if it so be that their Chamber or Nest begin to breake,
Anon out thereof they will begin to Creak.

69. And then ys all thy warke and thy greate labour lost,
Then thou maist begin againe upon a new cost,
And so thou mayst not be negligent and hasty; but of the bed be Without it be hard stuff and cleere it will not indure. (sure,

70. And if thou wil at the first hand give suddaine heate,
It will unto thy Warke be nothing meete;
And if thou let him have any suddaine greate Cold,
All thys schall breke thy warke, then art thou to bold.

71. Let their Nest be somewhat large with a broade rouse,
And therein they schall abide if it be strong and close above;
And in proportion put thereto nothing more nor lesse,
But as ys sayd before if thou doe yt ys the worse.

72. Also from the beds head there must rise a highe Spoute,
And another almost downe to the bottome that the Spirit go not
For thou must save the flyers that swim into the upper place, (out;
For they may hereafter ingender a body as well as the other in

73. Also be sure that thou put in their Bed no other thing,
Then thereof thou schalt have no greate winnyng,
If thou do thys it schall be to thee for the best
To keepe them close from flying and warme in their Nest.

74. First with soft fyre her Nest must be warmed,
With a litle bigger Fyre with overmuch they schalbe harmed,
Under thy Chamber flowre measure thy Fyre with tyme,
Then commeth the reward, Gold and Silver fine.

75. After the quantity space and tyme must be had,
For to deale togeder they be in their dealing glad.
And how long space and tyme I cannot well say,
That they in their Chamber and Nest wilbe in sport and play.

76. Behold the uppermost of their Nest what there commeth
The sweting of their Bodys labouring round aboute, (out,
And when they have played and sweate and laboured so sore,
They wilbe still, and neither labour nor sweate any more.

77. Then let them coole easily, and draw their breath,
And then there schalbe some above and some beneath:
There thou schalt see a Stone as it were grey poulder,
Which schalbe to the a ryght greate wonder.

78. Then take them out of their Chamber and Bed anon,
And lay them upon a Marble stone and breake them thereon :
And looke what thow hast in of Colour and Ponderosity,
Put to him as much of Flos florum greatest in dignity.

79. That ys the same Spirit that thow hadst before,
And so medle them togeder and leare them the same lore ;
A ltogeder in another Bed and in their Chamber they must be ;
For a marvelous warke thereof thow schalt understand and see.

80. And thus so oft thow must Multiplie thy Warke,
To ascend and descend into the Aire as doth the Larke ;
For when the Larke ys weary above in hys stound,
Anon he falleth right downe to the ground.

81. Behold well their Body, and to their head lay thine Eare,
And harken thow well what warke they make there :
If they begin to sing any manner of voyce,
Give them more heate till thow heare no noyce.

82. And thus give them more heate in their Chamber and Bed Till thou hearest no manner of noyse rumbling to nor fro: (also,
And thus continue in their Bed in their sporting playes,
After the quantity thereof continue so many dayes.

83. When their play and wrestling ys all well done,
In their voyce singing and crying and sweating up and downe ;
Give their Chamber bigger heate till their Nest be red,
And so bring them downe low and have no feare nor dread.

84. For thus with heate they schalbe brought full low,
That they schall in their Bed ne cry nor crow,
But as a Body lye still downe in their Bed,
In their owne liknes as they were bodyes dead.

85. Of Grey and White ys all hys cheife Colour,
For then he ys past all hys greate Dolour :
I sweare by Almighty God that all hath wrought,
Thow hast found out that many other Men hath sought.

86. Then

86. Then take thou hym out of hys Chamber and Bed,
And thou shalt then finde a fixt Body as he were dead ;
Keepe thou hym close and secretly within thy place,
And thanke Almighty God of hys grace.

87. Now my Son before thys, after thys Science I have right well
And thus to thee I have the White Elixer perfectly wrought ;
And if thou wilt of the Red Elixer perfectly understand,
Thou must take such another warke in hand.

88. My Son whan thou hast wrought more upon more,
Dubling each time as I said before ;
Make thou what thou wilt of Red substance,
As I did the White warke in manner of Governance.

89. Then thou must take the Red Stone that ys all ponder,
And lay on a Mable Stone and breake him asunder ;
And to medle him with the white Spirit and Water cleere,
And so put him in hys Bed and Chamber in the Fire.

90. And so in hys Chamb. & in hys Bed, he must all thys while be Till thou hast turn'd and brought him to another manner of glee :
Thys Red Elixer if thou wilt open worke heare,
Thys manner of Schoole thou must right well leare.

91. Thou must hang him in his Chamber with red Colour,
Till he be fixed and brought from hys great Dolour :
Then of thys worthy warke be not thou agast,
For in the warke all the worst ys past.

92. And so in hys fiery Nest and Chamber let him be sure,
For the longer he be in, the better schal be hys tincture ;
Soe that he runn not like blood overcoming hys fusion,
Then hast thou perfectly thys worke in conclusion.

93. Thus he must continue in thys greate heate of Firing,
Till he be full fixed that he be not running nor flying :
Then he will give tincture without Number running like wax,
Unto hys like of fusion he will both joyne and mix.

94. And yf thy Warke be thus well guided and so forth led,
Then hast thou in thy Warke right well and wittily sped :
For if thou do otherwise then I have thee tould,
In the adventure of thy warke thou maist be to bold.

95. For if thou warke by good measure and perfect tyme,
Thou shalt have very good Gold and Silver fine ;
Than shalt thou be richer in thy self than any King,
Withowt he labour the Science and have the same thing.

96. Now my deare Son I schall teach thee how to cast a Projecti-Therein lyeth all the greate prafetnes with the Conclusion: (on,
To leade an imperfect Body to hys greate perfectnesse,
In joyning that like to hys like thou standest in no distres.

97. For when thou hast joyned the milke to the Bodyes dry,
Than hast thou the White and Red Elixer truly :
The which ys a Marvilous and very precious Stone,
For therein lieth in thys Science all the worke upon.

98. In thys Science these Stones be in themselves so precious,
That in their working and nature they be marvelous :
To schew thee the greate vertue furthermore I will declare,
That if thou canst with thys manner of working well fare.

99. First thou must take of that Body which ys next Sol in per-
And of his colour toward in ponderosity & proportion: (section,
Being soluble as it were cleere blood running,
In the hot Element yt ys alwayes lightest and fleeting.

100. Then take parte of the Red Elixer that ys the precious
And cast him upon that body that ys blood running anon: (Stone
And whan thou hast thus perfectly thys warke wrought,
It schalbe turned into perfect Sol with litle labour or nought.

101. On the same wise do for Luna that is in the Colour so white,
In joyning with that body that is schining and somewhat light :
In the same proportion cast him the very white Stone,
And then ys all thy greatest warke both made and done.

102. Than hast thou both the Red warke and the White,
Therefor blessed be that tyme both day and night :
For thys warke that standeth by greate vertue and love,
Thow must thanke Almighty God in heaven above.

103. Sonn in the 21. Chapter there write I a full true Rime,
That ys to say unto thys warke thou have no greate disdaine ;
Till thou have proved my words in deede and thought,
I know it well thys Science schalbe set at nought.

104. My Son to these last precepts looke thou take good hede
For better 'tys to have then to wish for in time of neede :
For who so ys bold in time to a Freind to breake,
He that ys thy Freind may be thy Fo and hys emnyty wreake.

105. And therefor my Son I schall give thee a greate charge,
In uttering of speech be thou not to large ;
To tell every man what thou hast in Silver or Gold,
For to have it from thee many men wilbe right bold.

106. Also use not to revill or ryott that schould exceede
To thy bodily health, the better schalt thou speede ;
Use temperate dyet and temperate travell,
For when Physitian thee sayleth thys schall thee availle.

(Conclusions

107. And leave all blind warkes that thou hast seene or heard of
Or proved by Sublimations, Preperations, Distillations, or Disso-
Of such manner of things greate Bokes do greatly specifie lutions ;
And all those contrary sayings in this Craft I do plainly deny .

108. Also my Son remember how thou art mortall,
Abiding but a while in thys World which ys terrestriall :
Thow wottest not how long nor hence how soone ;
That death schall thee visitt and unto thee Come.

109. And remember thee well at thy departing,
Whome thou lovedst and trustedst best old and young :
Make him thine Heire and most of thy Councell,
And give him thy Cunning or thy Boke every deale.

110. But

110 But beware of flattering and glosing People,
Of Boasters and Crackers for they will thee beguile :
Of thy precious Cunning behinde or beforne,
And when they have their intent they will give thee a scorne.

111. Therefor make no Man of thy Councell rude nor rustie,
But him that thou knowest both true and trustie ;
In ryding and going sleeping and waking,
Both in word and deede and in hys disposing.

112. Also in thy owne Chamber looke thou be secret,
That thy dores and windowes be close shet ;
For some wyll come and looke in every Corner,
And anon they will aske what thou makest there.

113. And therefore a good excuse must soone be had,
Or else thou schalt verily wine for to run madd ;
Say thou labourest sore both sleeping and waking,
To the perfect way of strange Colours making.

114. As yt be sure Bice, Vermillion, Aurum Musicum, & others
Or else with some people thou schalt never have a doe ; (mo
Also thereof thou must have many samples to schew,
Or else they that harmes thinke will say so.

115. Also furthermore I give thee right good warning,
Beware of thy warking and also of thy uttering,
For the examination of the People better or worse,
Ere thou have for thy warke thy mony in thy purse.

116. Therefor take heede my Sen unto these Chapters sixscore
And all manner of things said what schould be don before :
For in Astronomy thou must have right good feeling,
Or else in thys Boke thou schalt have simple believing.

117. For thou must know well of seaven principle Characters,
To what Bodyes in heaven moving that they be likned in those
And to understand their properties and their Conditions, (figures
In Colours, qualities, softnes, hardnes, & in their proper fashions.

118. Now

118. Now Son to thee that understandest perfection & Sciences
Whether it be Speculative or Pracktick to my sentences :
In thys Science and labour I thinke it greate ruthe,
Therefore I write to thee very truth.

119. And to thee that understandest no perfection nor practike
In no conclusion proved that schould be to hys warke like,
By Almighty God that all thys world hath wrought,
I have said and performed to thee right nought.

120. Therefore my Son before that thow thys Boke begin,
Understand wisely in thys what ys written therein :
For if thow canst not finde by thys Boke neither Sol nor Moyn,
Then go forth and seeke thow further as other fooles have done.

Explicit Liber dictus Pater Sapientia.

Ef

IN the name of the holy Trinitie,
 Now send us grase, so hit be :
 Fyrst God made both Angel and Heaven,
 Na alle so the World wyth Planets seaven ;
 Man and Woman wyth gret sensewalite,
 Sum of estate, and other in hyr degree ;
 Both Best and Worme for in the grown crepe,
 Everyech in hys kynd to receve hys mete.
 Egles and Fowles in the Eyre don fle,
 And swemyng of Fycheys also in the See :
 Wyth vygital moyster and of the red Grap,
 And alle so of the why e hos can hym take :
 Alle menneral thyng that growyth in grownd,
 Sum to encrese and sum to make an end :
 Alle thes bryngeth now to owre howse,
 The mightti Ston that ys so precius,
 Thys ryche Reby, that sto n of pryce,
 The whych wesse send out of Paradyce :
 Thus made the gret God of heven,
 Whych alle ben rewled under Planets seaven :
 God send us parte of thys secrete,
 And of that heven that ys sweet.

A M E N.

If thou wilt thys warke begyn,
 Than schrevy the clene of alle thy Seyne :
 Contryte in hert wyth alle thy thought,
 And ever thenke on hym that the der bowght.
 Satisfaction thou make wyth alle thy myght,
 Than thre fayre flowers thou hast in syght ;
 Yet nedeth the mor to thy conclesyon,
 Take thou good hede now to thys lessen ;
 Thou must have Grase, Nature, and Resen,
 Spekelatif, and Coning, wyth good Condition :
 Yet thou must have more now herto,
 Experience, wyth Pracktik, Prudent also ;
 Patient that thou be, and Holi in Lysyngs,
 Thenke thou on thys in thy beginings ;
 Thes fowrtyn Hestys as I the saye,
 Ever kepe thou man both nyght and day,
 Of thy desyres thou mayst not mysse,
 And alle so of heven that swezt bleß.

HERMES BIRD.

Roblemis of olde likenes and fuguris,
 Wych proved byn fructuos of sentens ;
 And have auctorite grounded in Scripture,
 By resemblance of notabil apperence ;
 Wych moralites concludyng on prudence :
 Lyke as the Bibel reherfeth be wryting,

How Trees sum tyme chese hemselve a Kyng.

2. Firſt in theyre choiſe they namyd the Olyve
 To regne among hem, Indicſum doth expreſs ;
 But he hymſelfe can excuſe hym blyve,
 He myght not forſake hys fatnes :
 Nor the Fig-tree hys amorus ſwetnes :
 Nor the Vyne hys holſum freſche terrage :
 Wych gyveth comfort to all manner of age.

Ff 3

3. And

3. And sembleabil Poyetes laureat,
 By derke parables full convenient ;
 Feynein that Birdis and Bests of estate
 As rial Egeles and Lyons by assent,
 Sent owte writtes to holde a Parlement ;
 And made degrees brevely for to fey,
 Sum to have Lordschip and sum to Obey.

4. Egeles in the Eyre hygheft take theyre flyght,
 Power of Lyons on the grownde ys sene ;
 Cedre amonge Trees highest ys of sight,
 And the Laurer of nature ys ever grene,
 Of flowris all Florra Goddes and Quene :
 Thus of all thyng ther byn diversites,
 Sum of estate and sum of lower degres.

5. Poyetys write wonderfull lyknes,
 And Covert kepe hemselfe full clos ;
 They take Bestes and Fowles to witnes :
 Of whos feynyng Fabelis furst a ros,
 And here I cast unto my purpos,
 Owte of the Frensche a tale to transcelate,
 Whych in a Pamphlet I red and saw as I sate.

6. Thys Tale wych y make of mencion,
 In gros reherfeth playnely to declare ,
Thre Proverbys payed for raunsome
 Of a fayre Byrde that was take in a snare,
 Wonder desirus to scape owte of hir care :
 Of myne Auctor followyng the proffes,
 So as it fel in Order y schall expres.

7. Whilom ther was in a small vilage,
 As my Auctor maketh reherfal ;
 A Chorle the wich had lust and gret corage,
 Within hymselfe by hys deligent travel,
 To aray hys Garden with notabil reparel :
 Oflenght and brede y lyche square and long,
 Heggyd and dychyd to make yt sure and strong.

8. All the Aleys made playne with Sande,
Benches coverid with new Turves grene,
Set Erbes with Conditcs at the ende ;
That wellid up agen the Sun schene,
Lyke Silver stremys as any cristal clene :
The burbely Waves up ther on boylyng,
Rownde as Beral theyr bemys owte chedyng.

9. Mides the Garden stode a fresh Lawrer,
Ther on a Byrde syngyng both day and nyght ;
With shynyng federis brighter then Gold weer,
Wych wyth hir song made hevy hertis lyght ;
For to behold hit was an heavenly syght :
How towerd evyn and in the dawning,
Sche dyd her payne most ameus to syng.

10. Esperus enforced hyr corage,
Towerd evyn when Phebus went to nest ;
Amonges the braunches to hir avauntage :
To syng hir complyn as yt was best,
And at the rysyng to the Quene Alcest
To syng ageyne as hit was to hir dew,
Erly on the morow the day-ster to salew.

11. Hit was a very heavenly melody,
Evyn and Morne to her the Byrd song ;
And the sote sugeryd Armony :
Of uncoud Warbelis and twenes drew along ;
That al the Garden of the noyse rong :
Tyll on a morow that Tytan schone ful cler,
The Byrd was trapped and cawt in a Panter.

12. The Chorle was glad that he thys Byrd hath take Mere of cher loke and of visage :
And in all hast he cast for to make
Within hys howse a lytil prati Cage,
And with hir song to rejoyce hys corage :
And at the last the fely Byrd abrayde,
And sobirly to the Chorle sche fayde :

13. I am now take and stond under daunger,
 Hold streyte that y may not fle;
 Adew my song and al my notes clér,
 Now that y have lost my liberte,
 Now y am thrall and sumtyme was fre:
 And trust wel y stand in distres,
 Y can nat syng ne make no gladnes.

14. And thogh my Cage forged were of Gold
 And the penacles of Beral and Cristal:
 Y remember a Proverbe sayde of olde;
Who list his freedom in sooth he ys in thral,
 For me had laver upon a branche smale,
 Merle to syng amonge the wodis grene,
 Than in a Cage of Golde bryght and chene.

15. Songe and Presun have non acordaunce,
 Trowys thow y wyl syng in Presun,
 Song procedet of joy and plesaunce;
 And Presun causeth deth and destruction,
 Ryngeyng of Peteris maketh no mere sown;
 Or how schoulde he be glad and jocownde,
 Ageyn his wil that lyth in cheynys bownde.

16. What avayleth a Lyon to be a Kyng of Bestes
 Fast schut in a Tower of ston alone;
 Or an Egell under stryte cheynys,
 Called also the Kyng of Fowlys everichon,
 Fy on Lordschyp whan Liberte ys gon:
 Answer herto and hit nat a start,
 Who syngeth mere that syngeth not with hert.

17. If thow wilt rejoyce the of my syngyng,
 Let me go fleen fre fro dawnger:
 And every day in the mornyng
 Y wyll repayre to thy Lawrer,
 And freselly to syng with notis clér;
 Under thi Chaumber or afore thy Hal,
 Every season when thow lyst me cal.

18. To be schut and pyned under drede,
 No thyng acording to my nature:
 Though I were fed with Mylke and Wastelbrede;
 And swete Crudis brought to my pasture,
 Yet had y lever do my bese cure:

Erly in the morow to shrape in the Vale,
 To fynde my dener amongs the Wormys smale.

19. The Laborer ys gladder at hys Plough,
 Erly on the morow to fede hym on bakon:
 Then sum ben that have trefour y nowgh;
 And of al deyntes plente and foyson;
 And no fredom with hys pocession;

To go at large but as Bere at the stake,
 To pas hys bondes but yf he leve take.

20. Take thys answer ful for conclusion,
 To syng in prifon thow schalt not me constreyne:
 Tyll y have fredom in woddis up and downe:
 To fle at large on bowys both rough and plaine,
 And of reson thow schuldest not disdeyn:

Of my desyre but laugh and have good game,
 But who ys a Chorle wold every man wer the same.

21. Well quod the Chorle sith hit wold not be,
 That y desyre by my talkyng;
 Magre thy wyll thow schalt chese on of thre:
 Within a Cage merele to syng,
 Or to the Kychyn y schall thy bode brynge:

Pul thy federis that byn so bryght and clere,
 And after rost or bake the to my dynere.

22. Then quod the Byrde to resson y sey not ney,
 Towchyng my song a ful answer thow hast:
 And when my federis pulled byn away,
 If y be rosted or bake in a past,
 Thow schalt of me have a smal repaste:

But yf thow wilt werke by my counsel,
 Thow mayst by me have a gret awayle,

23. If thou wilt to my rede assent,
 And suffer me go frele fro Preson :
 Witowte raunsom or any oder rent ;
 Y schall the gyf a notabil grete gwerdon,
The thre grete Wysdomys acording to reson ;
 Mor of valew, take hede what y profer,
 Than al the Gold that ys shet in thy Cofer.

24. Trust me wel y schal the not deceyve.
 Well quod the Chorle tel and let se :
 Nay quod the Byrde a forne confeyve ;
 Who schal teche of Reson he most go fre,
 Hit fitteth a Master to have hys Liberte :
 And at large to teche hys lesson,
 Hafe me not suspecte y mene no trefon.

25. Wel quod the Chorle y holde me content,
 Y trust the promys which thou hast made to me ;
 The Byrde fle forth the Chorle was of sent :
 And toke hys flight up to the Lawrer tre,
 Then thought sche thus now that y stand fre :
 With snaris panteris y cast not al my lyve,
 Nor wyth no lyme twygges no mor to strive.

26. He ys a Fole that schaped ys daungere,
 That broke hys feteris and fled ys fro Preson,
 For to resort agene : for brente childe dreds fyre :
 Eche man bewar of Wisdom and reson,
 Of suger strawed that hideth false poyson ;
 Ther ys no venom so perilus in scherpnys,
 As whan yt hath triakle of lyknes.

27. Who dredeth no perell in perell he schal falle,
 Smothe Watres byn of fithes depe :
 The Quayle pipe can most falsely calle ;
 Tyl the Quayle under the net doth crepe ;
 A bleryed Fowler trust not thogh he wepe :
 Exchew hys thumbe, of weping take no hede,
 That smale Byrdys can nyp by the hede.

28. And now that y such daunger am scaped,
Y wyl bewar and afore provide:
That of no Fowlar y wil no more be Japed,
From theyre lyme twygges to fly far asyde,
There perel ys perel to abyde:

Com ner thow Chorle, take hede to my speche;
Of thre Wysdomys that y schal the teche.

29. Yef not of Wysdom to hasty credens,
To every Take nor eche tydyng:
But consyder of Reson and Prudens;
Among Talys ys many a grete lesyng,
Hasty credens hath cawfed grete hynderyng:

Report of talis and tydyngys brought up new,
Maketh many a man ful on trew.

30. For on party take thys for my Raunsom,
Lerne the second grownded of scripture:
Desyre thow not by no condicion
Thyng that ys ympossybyl to recure,
Worldly desyres stante alle in a venture:

And who desyreth to soare hygh a losfe,
Oft tyme by soden turne he falleth on softe.

31. The thyrd is thys, bewar both even and morrow,
Forget yt nought but lerne thys of me:
For Tresor lost, make never to grete Sorrow;
Wych in no wyse may not recovered be,
For who that taketh sorrow for loss in that degree:

Reken fyrst hys losse, and after reken hys payne;
Of one sorrow he maketh Sorrowys tweyne.

32. Aftur thys Lesson the Byrde began a songe,
Of hyr ascape gretely rejoycyng:
And sche remembred hyr alle so of the wronge
Don by the Chorle, fyrst at hyr takyng,
And of the affray, and of hyr impresonyng:

Glad that sche was at large and owte of drede,
Seyde unto hym, hoveryng above hys hede,

33. Thow were quod sche a very natural Fole
 To suffer me departe of thy lewdnes :
 Thow owthtys of right to complaine and make dole,
 And in thy hert have grete hevenes,
 That thow hast lost so passyng grete riches :
 Wych myght suffice by vawew in rekeyng
 To pay the raunfom of a myghty Kyng.

34. Ther ys a Stone wych ys called Jagownce,
 Of olde engendered within myne entrayle :
 Wych of fyne Golde poyseth a grete unce ;
 Setryne of Colors lyke Garnetis of entayle,
 Wych makyth men victorius in batayle ;
 And who that bereth on hym thys Stone,
 Ys ful asured ageyne hys mortal Fone.

35. Who that hath thys in posceffion,
 Schal suffer no Poverth ne non Indygens :
 But of Tresour have plente and foyson,
 And every Man schal don hym reverence,
 And non Enemy schal don hym non offence ;
 But fro thi hondes now that I am gone,
 Pleyne gyf thow wilt for thy parte ys none.

36. As y the abrayde her before,
 Of a stone now that I had
 The wych now thow hast forlore ;
 Be alle reson thow schuldys ben sad,
 And in thi hert nothyng glad :
 Now Chorle y the tel in my device,
 I was eyred and bred in swire Paradyce.

37. Now mo namys y schal the tel,
 Of my stone that y cal Jagownce :
 And of hys vertuis with hys smel ;
 That ben so swete and so odeferus,
 Wyth Ennock and Ely hath be my servis :
 My swete songe that sowndeth so scherpe,
 Wyth Angelles voyse that passeth eny harpe.

38. The nigrum deamond that ys in Morienis fees
And the white Charbonkkel that rolleth in wave ;

The setryne Reby of ryche degrees :

That passeth the stonys of comen sawe,
In the Lapidery ys grown by olde lawe ;

He passeth all stonys that ys under hevyn,
After the cownse of kynde by the Planets sevyn.

39. Hyt ys for none Chorle to have schuch tresour,

That exsedeth alle Stonys in the lapidery :

And of alle vertuis he bereth the flour,

Wyth all joy and grace yt maketh man mery,

That in this worlde schal never byn sory ;

Now very Chorle thow passeth thy gras,

Y am at my leberte even as I was.

40. As Clerkys fyndeth in the Bybell,

At Paradys yatis whan he was cast ;

By an Angel both fayr and styll,

A downe Kyng Elysawnder ther I threst,

And of all stonys yt was y lest ;

Soche stonys in place few ben y brought,

Soroful ys the Chorle and hevyn in hys thowte.

41. Now more Chorle yt tel y can,

And thow wolt to me take hede :

The Byrde of Ermes ys my name,

In all the worlde that ys so wyde,

Wyth gletering of grace by every syde,

Hose n.e myght have in hys covertowr,

He wer rychcher than eny Emperowr.

42. Elysawnder the conquerowr my Ston smot downe

Upon hys helme whan hyt pyght :

No mor then a pese that ys so rownde,

Hyt was ther to no manys syght,

That leyde so pleyne the manly Knyght ;

Now y tel the wyth melde Stevyn,

Thys myghty grace cam owte fro Hevyn.

43. Hit cawfeth Love and maketh men Gracius,
 And favorabel in ever mannes syght :
 Hit maketh acorde of two Folks esvyus ;
 Comforteth Sorowful and maketh hevy herts lyght,
 Lyke passyng of colour Sunny bryght :
 Y am a sole to tel the at onys,
 Or to teche a Chorle the pryce of precious Stonys.

44. Men schalle not put a precius Margareyt,
 As Rubeyes, Saferys, and odther Stonys ynde ;
 Emeraldys, nor rownde Perlys whyte,
 Byfore rude Swyne that love draffe of kynde :
 For a Sowe delyteth hyr as y fynde
 Mor in fowle draffe hyr Pygges for to glad,
 Than al the Perry that comes owte of Granad.

45. Heche thyng drawes to hys semblable,
 Fyfishes in the See, Bestys on the Stronde ;
 The Eyr for Fowlis ys commendabyl,
 To the Plowghman for to tyll hys Londe,
 And to a Chorle a Muk-forke in hys honde.
 Y lese my tyme eny more to tare
 To tell the bewar of the Lapidare.

46. That thow haddest thow getyst no more,
 Thi Lyme twygges and Panters y desie ;
 To let me gon thow were fowle over seen,
 To lese the richches only of folye :
 Y am now fre to syng and to fle
 VVher that my lyst : and he is a Fole at all
 That goth at large, and maketh hymselfe thrall.

47. To here of VVisdome thi neres be halfe dese,
 Like a Nasse that lysteth upon an Harpe ;
 Thow must go pype in a Ive lesse :
 Better ys to me to syng on Thornes scharpe,
 Than in a Cage wyth a Chorle to carpe :
 For hyt was seyde of Folkes many yere agoe,
 A Charles Chorle ys oft woe be gone.

48. Now Chorle y have the her tolde,
My vertuys her wyth grete experience ;
Hyt were to fume man better than Golde ;
To the yt ys no fructius a sentence,
A Chepys Croke to the ys better than a Launce :
Adew now Globbe wyth herte sore,
In Charles clowchys com y never more.

49. The Chorle felt hys herte part in tweyne,
For very sorow and in sunder ryve :
Alas quod he y may wel wepe and pleyne ;
As a wreche never lyke to thryve,
But for to indure in povert all my lyve :
For of foly and of wylfulnes,
Y have now lost all holy my ryches.

50. I was a Lorde y crye owte on Fortune,
And had grete Tresor late in my keepyng ;
Wych myght have made me long to contune ;
Wyth that ilke Stone to have levyd a Kyng,
Yf y had set hyt in a Ryng :
Borne it upon me y had gode y nowe,
Than schuld y no mor have gon to the plowe.

51. Whan the Byrde saw the Chorle thus morne,
That he was hevy of hys chere,
Sche take her flyght and agayne returne :
Toward hym and sayd as ye schal here,
O dull Chorle wisdom for to lere ;
That y the taute all ys lese byhynde,
Reysed away and clene owte of thy meynde.

52. Taw tey the not thys Wysdome in sentens,
To every tale brought up of new,
Not to hastyte gyf not ther to credens ;
Unto tyme thow know hit be trew,
All ys not Gold that scheweth Goldys hew :
Nor stonys all by nature as y fynde,
Byn not Saferus that schewyth colour ynde.

53. In thys Doctryne y lost my labour,
 To teche the such Proverbys of substaunce;
 Now mayst thou see thy lewd Blynde error;
 For all my body poyسد in Balans,
 Weyth not a nounce lewde ys thi remembraunce;
 Yet have y mor poyse closyd in mayne entrayle,
 Than all my Body set for Countervayle.

54. All my Body weyth not an unce,
 How myght y have then in me a ston:
 That poyseth mor than doth a grete Jagounce:
 Thy brayne ys dull thi witte almost gon,
 Of hre Wysdomys thou hast lost on;
 Thou schulds not after my sentence,
 To every tale gefe to hasty credence.

55. I badde also bewar both even and morowe,
 For thyng lost by suden adventur;
 Thou schulds not make to moche sorow;
 Whan thou seyest thou mayst not hit recover,
 Her thou faylest wych doth thy besy cure;
 In the snare to catch me agayne,
 Thou art a Fole thy labor ys in vayne.

56. In the thyerde also thou dost rave,
 Y bad thou schulds in no maner wyse
 Covet thyng the wych thou mayst not have,
 In wych thou hast fogetyn myne empyse,
 Thaty may say playnly to devyse,
 Thou hast in madnes fogetyn all thre,
 Notabyl Wysdomys that y taute the.

57. Hit wer but foly mor wych the to carpe,
 Or to teche of Wysdomys mor or lesse;
 Y holde hym madde that bryngs forth hys Harpe;
 Theron to teche a rode for doilyd Asse,
 And mad ys he that syngyth a Fole a Masse:
 And he ys most madd that doth hys besynesse;
 To teche a Charle the termys of Gentleness.

Hermes Bird.

58. And semeblably in Apryll and in May,
Whan gentyl Byrds most make melody ;
But the Cockow can syng butoo lay ;
In odthir rewnys sche hath no fantesy :
Thus every thyng as Clerks do specify ;
As Frute on the Trees, and Folke of every age,
Fro whense they come they have a tallage.

59. The Wynter trectyth of hys Welsom wyndys,
Of the gentyll Frute boslys the Gardener ;
The Fysher castyth hys hokys and hys lynys,
To catche Fysshe in the fresh Revyr,
Of tyllyth of Londe trectyth the powre ;
The Gentyلمان trectyth of Gentry,
The Chorle delytith to speke rebawdry.

60. All on to a Faucon and a Kyte,,
As good an Owle as a Popyngay ;
A dunghyll Douke as deyntieth as a Snyte,
Who servys a Chorle hase many a wofull day ,
Y cast me never her after mor with the play ;
To fore a Chorle any more to syng,
Of Wysdome to carpe in my lyfyng.

61. The Folke that schall thys Fabyll se and rede,
New Forged Talys y councel them to fle
For lesse of Good take not to grete hede,
Be not to Sorowfull for noon adverfyte ;
Covet not thyng that may not be,
And remember wher ye goan,
A Chorlys Chorle ys ofte wo begon.

62. Unto purpose thys Proverbe ys ful ryve,
Redde and reported by olde remembraunce :
A Chyldys Byrde, and a Chorlys Wyfe ,
Hath ofte sythys sorow and mischaunce.
VWho hath fredom hath sufficiance :
Better ys Fredom wyth lytle in gladnes,
Than to be a Chorle wyth all worldly rychches.]

63. Go lytyl Quiar and icommaunde me
 To my Mayster wyth humbyl affeccyon,
 Be sekynge hym lowly of mersy and pete
 Of thys rude makynge to ha compassion:
 And as towchyng thys Translacyon
 Owte of the Frenshe, how so ever the Englysh be,
 All thyng ys sayd under correccyon,
 VVyth supportation of yowr benygnte.

THE TALE OF THE CHANONS YEOMAN.

Written by our Ancient and famous English Poet, Geoffry Chaucer.

THE PROLOGUE OF The Chanons Yeoman.

When ended was the Lyfe of Saint Cecyle,
Er we fully had rydden fyve myle :
At Boughton under the blee us gan a take
A Man that clothed was in clothes blake ;
And under that he had a whyte Surplyse,
His hakeny that was all pomely gryse ;
So swete that itt wonder was to see ;
It seemed that he had precked myles three.
The horse eke that his Yoman rode uppon,
So Swete, that vimeth migh he gon :
About the paytrell stode the fowle full hye,
He was of fowle as flecked as a pye :
A Male twyfolde on his croper lay ;
It semed that he carryed letel Aray ;
All fight for somer rode this worthy Man,
And in my heart wondren I began,

H h 2

What

What that he was, till I understode,
 How that his cloke was sewed to his hode:
 For which whan I had long avysed me;
 I demyd him some Chanon for to be:
 His hatt hynged att his backe by a Lace,
 For he had rydden more then trot or pace.
 He rode aye pryckying as he were wode,
 A Clote leafe he had layd under his hode,
 For Swett and for to keepe his heede from hete,
 But itt was joy for to se him swete:
 His foreheed dropped as a Stillatorie,
 But full of Playntaine or of Peritorie:
 And when he was come he gan crye,
 God save (quod he) this Iolly company:
 Fast have I pricked (quod he) for your sake,
 Bycause that I wold you overtake,
 To ryden in this mery company.

His Yoman was eke full of curtesy,
 And sayd, Syrs, now in the morowe tyde,
 Out of your hostrye I saw you ride,
 And warned here my Lord and Soverayne,
 Which that to ryden with you is full fayne:
 For his disparte, he loveth dalyance.

Frede for thy warning God yewe thee good chance.
 Then sayd our Host, certayne itt wold seme
 Thy Lord were wyse, and so I may well deme:
 He is full locunde, alsoe dare I lay,
 Can he ought tell a mery Tale or tway,
 With which he glad may this company.

Who Sir my Lord? ye without lye,
 He can of myrthe and eke of lolyte,
 Not but ynough also Sir trusteith me;
 And ye him knew also well as doe I,

Ye wold wonder how well and thriftely
 He con the werke and that in sondry wyse;
 He hath taken on him many a great Empryse :
 Which were full hard for any that is here,
 To bring about, but they of him itt lere.
 As homely as he rideth among you,
 If ye him knew itt wold ben for your proue :
 Ye nolde not forgon his aquayntaunce,
 For Mochel good I dare lay in balaunce
 All that I have in my possession;
 He is a man of hye discreffion :
 I warne you well he is a passing wyse man.

Wel (quod our Hoste) I pray thee tell me than,
 Is he a Clerke or non ? tell what he is.

A Clerke ! nay greater then a Clerke I wys,
 Sayd the Yoman, and in words fewe,
 Hoste of his Crafte somewhat wol I shew ;
 I say my Lord can such a subtelte,
 But of his Crafte ye may not wete of me :
 And somewhat helpe I yett to his worchyng,
 That all the ground that we be on rydyng,
 Till we come to Canterbury Towne,
 He could all cleane turne up and downe :
 And pave it all of Silver and of Gold.

And when this Yoman had thus I told
 Unto our Hoste, he sayd benedicite,
 This thing is wonder and marvellous to me :
 Sees that thy Lord is of so high prudence,
 (Because of which men shold him reverence,)
 That of his worship recketh he so lyte,
 His overest slopp is not worth a myte ;
 As in effect to him so mote I go,
 It is all bawdy and to tore alsoe.

Why is thy Lord soe sloolyche I thee pray,
 And is of power better clothes to be?
 If that his dede accord with thy speech,
 Tell me that and that I thee beseech.

Why (quod this Yoman) whereto aske ye me?
 God helpe mee so, for he shall never ythe:
 But I wol not avow that I saye,
 And therefore keepe itt secrett I you praye;
 He is to wyse in fay as I beleewe,
 That is overdone wil not preve;
 And right as Clerkes sayne itt is a vyce,
 Wherefore I holde him in that leude and nyce;
 For whan a man hath over greate a witte,
 Full ofte it happeth him to misusen itt:
 So doth my Lord, and that me greveth sore;
 God amend itt, I can say you no more.

Thereof no force good Yoman (quod our Host)
 Sens of the connyng of thy Lord thou wost:
 Tell how he doth I pray the hertely,
 Sens that he is so crafty and so sly,
 Where dwellen ye if itt to tell be?

In the Subbarbes of a Towne (quod he)
 Lurkeyng in hernes and in lanes blynde,
 Where these Robbers, and Theeves by kynde
 Holden her privy fearefull residence,
 As they that dare not shewen her presence;
 Soe fare we if that I shall say the sothe,
 Yett (quod our Hoste) lett me talke tothe.
 Why art thou soe discolored in thy face?

Peter (quod he) God yeve itt hard grace;
 I am so used in the hott fyre to blowe,
 That itt hath changed my colour as I trow:
 I am not wonte in no mirroure to pryce,

But swynke sore and lerne to Multiplie.
 We blondren ever and pooren in the fyre,
 And for all that we saylen of our desyre :
 For ever we lacken our conclusion,
 To moche folke we do illusion :
 And borrowe Golde be itt a pound or two,
 Or ten or twelve or many somes mo,
 And make hem wene at the leste way,
 That of a pound we coulde make tway ;
 Yett is itt false, and ay hav we good hope
 Itt for to done, and after it we grepe.
 But that Science is so ferre us by forne,
 We mowe not all though we had itt sworne
 Itt overtake, itt flytte away soe faste,
 Itt wol us make Beggers at the laste.

Whiles this Yeman was thus in his talking
 This Chanon drew him nere and herde all thing
 Which this Yeman spake, for suspicion
 Of mennes speche ever had this Chanon :
 For Cato saythe, he that giltye is,
 Deemeth all thing he speke of him Twys :
 Bycause of that he gan so nyghe to draw,
 To his Yeman to herken all his saw ;
 And thus he sayd unto his Yeman tho,
 Holde nowe thy peace and speke no words mo,
 For if thou doe, thou shalt it sore aby,
 Thou slanderest me here in this Companye :
 And eke discoverest that thou sholdest hyde.

Te (quod our Hoste) tell on what soever betyde,
 Of all his thretynge recke the not a myte.

In fayth (quod he) no more doe I but lyte.
 And whan this Chanon saw itt wolde not be,
 But his Yeman wolde tel his privyte,

He fledde away for very sorrow and shame.
 A (quod the Yeman) here shall ryse a game,
 All that I can anon woll I you tell,
 Sens he is gone the foule Fend him quell;
 For never hereafter wol I with him mete,
 For penny ne for pounde I you behete;
 He that me brought first unto that game,
 Er that he dye sorrowe have he and shame;
 For it is ernest to me by my faith,
 That fele I well whatsoe. any man saith:
 And yett for all my smerte and all my greife,
 For all my sorrowe, labour and mischeife,
 I couthe never leave it in noe wyse:
 Now wolde God my witt might suffyse,
 To tellen all that longeth to that Arte.
 But nathelesse, yet wol I tell you a parte:
 Sens that my Lord is gon I wol not spare;
 Such thyng as I know I wol declare.

Here endeth the Prologue of the Chanons
 Yeoman, and here followeth his Tale.

The

THE TALE OF

The Chanons Yeoman.

 Ith this Chanon I dwelt seaven yere,
 And of this Science am I never the nere:
 All that I had I have lost thereby,
 And God wotte soe hath many moe then I,
 There I was wonte to be right, fresh and gay,
 Of clothing and eke of other good aray;
 Now may I weare an hose uppon myne heed:
 And where my colour was both fresh and reed,
 Now itt is wanne and of a leaden hewe,
 Whoe soe itt useth, fore shall him rewe.
 And of my swynke yett blered in myne Eye,
 Lo which avauntage itt is to Multiply:
 That flyding Science hath me made so bare,
 That I have noe good where that ever I fare:
 And yett I am indetted so thereby,
 Of Gold, that I have borrowed truly,
 That while I live I shall itt quitt never,
 Let every man beware by me ever;
 What manner man that casteth him thereto,
 If he contynue I hold his thrifte I do:
 So helpe me God thereby shall he never wyn,
 But empte his purse and make his witts thyn;
 And whan he thorow his madnesse and folye,
 Hath lost his owne good through Jeopardye:
 Than he exiteth other men thereto,

To lese her good as himselfe hath do ;
 For unto shrewes joy it is and ese,
 To have her fellowes in paine and disese ;
 For thus was I ones served of a Clerke ;
 Of that noe charge, I wol speke of our werke.

When we be there as we shall exercise
 Our elvish Craft, we semen wonder wise.
 Our termes ben so Clergiall and so quaynte,
 I blow the fyre tyll myn hearte faynte.

What shold I tell each proportion
 Of things which we werchen uppon ?
 As on fyve or syxe unces, may well be
 Of Silver or of some other quantite ;
 And besye me to tellen you the names,
 Of Orpiment, brent Bones, Yron squames ;
 That into powder grounden ben full small,
 And in an Erthen pott how put is all :
 And salt y put in and also pēpere,
 Before these powdres that I speke of here :
 And well y covered with a lompe of Glasse,
 And of moch other thing that there was.
 And of the potts and glassenglutyng,
 That of the ayre might passe out nothing ;
 And of the easy fyre and smerte alsoe,
 Which that was made, and of the care and wo
 That we had in our matters Sublymeing,
 And in Amalgamyng and Calsenyng :
 Of Quicksilver icleped Mercurye rude,
 For all our sleight we conne not conclude.
 Our Orpyment and Sublymed Mercury ;
 Our grounde Litarge eke on the porphiry :
 Of eche of these unces a certayne
 Not helpeth us, our labour is in vayne ;

Ne eke our Spyrites all ^{re} ~~re~~ ^{nt} ~~nt~~ ^{ion} ~~ion~~,
Ne yet our matters, that lyen al fyxe adoun :
Mowe in our werkyng nothing awayle,
For lost is our laboure and our travayle.
And all the Coste, a twenty dyvel away,
Is lost alsoe which we uppon itt lay.

There is alsoe full many another thing,
That is to our Craft apertaynyng :
Though I by ordre hem ne reherce can,
Bycause that I am a leud man.

Yet wol I tellen hem as they come to mynde,
Though I ne can sette hem in her kynde,
As bole Armonyake, Verdegreece, Boras,
And sondry Vessles made of Erth and Glas.

Our Urynalls and our Discensories,
Vyols, Croffeletts and Sublimatories :

Concurbytes and Alembykes eke,
And other such dere ynough a leke :

It needeth not to reherce them all,

Waters rubyfyeng and Boles, Gall ;

Arsneke, Sal Armonyake and Brymstone,

And herbes could I tell eke many one :

As Egrimonye, Valeryan, and Lunarye,

And other such if that me liste to tarye ;

Our Lampes brennyng both night and day,

To bringen about our Crafte if that we may ;

Our Fournyce eke of Calcination,

And of our Waters Albifycation.

Unfleked Lyme, Chalke, and glere of an Eye,

Poudres divers, Ashes, Dong, Pisse, and Cley :

Sered pokettes, salt Peter, and Vitriole,

And divers fyres made of wood and cole ;

Sal Tartre, Alkaly, and Sal preparete,

And combuft matters, and coagulate,
 Cley made with horfe donge, mans heere and Oyle,
 Of Tartre, Alym, Glas, Berme, Wortte and Argoyle :
 Refalgor and other maters enbybyng,
 And eke of our Maters encorporing ;
 And of our Silver Citrynacion,
 Our Cementyng, and eke Fermentacyon ;
 Our Ingottes, Testes and many mo.

I wol you tel as was me taught also,
 The fowre Spyrites and the bodies seven,
 By order as oft I herd my lord nemene.

The first Spyrite Quicksilver cleped is,
 The second Orpyment, the third I wis
 Armonyake, the fourth Brimstone.

The Bodyes seven eke lo here hem anone,
Sol Gold is, and Luna Sylver we threpe,
Mars, Iron, Mercury, Quicksilver we clepe :
Saturnus Lede, and Iupiter is Tynne,
 And Venus Copper, by my father kynne.

This cursed Crafte whoe soe wol exercyse,
 He shall noe good have that may him suffyse ;
 For all the good he spendeth thereaboutte,
 He lese shall thereof have I no doute ;
 Whoso that lysten to utter his solye,
 Let him com forth and lerne to Multiplie :
 And every man that hath ought in his cofer,
 Let him apere and wexe a Philosopher :
 Askaunce that Crafte is so light for to lere ;
 Nay God wot all be he Monke or Frere,
Preist, or Chanon, or any other wight,
 Though he sytte at hys boke both day and night,
 In lernyng of this Elvysh nyce lore,
 All is in vayne, and parde moche more ;

Is to lere a leude man this subtelte,
 Fye speke not thereof, itt wol not be;
 Al coude he lettrure or coude he none,
 As in effect he shall fynd itt all one;
 For bothe two by my Salvacyon
 Concluden in Multyplycacyon:
 Ilyche well whan they have alydo,
 This is to sayen, they faylen both two.

Yet forgate I moche reherfayle,
 Of waters Corosyfe and lymayle:
 And of Bodyes molifycacion,
 And also of her Induration:
 Oyles, Ablucyons, Mettall fusyble
 To tellen you all, wolde passe any Byble:
 That O where is, wherefore as for the best
 Of all these names nowe woll I rest.
 For as I trowe I have you told ynowe
 To reyse a Fende, al loke he never so rowe.

A nay let be the Philosphers Stone;
 Alixer cleped, we seken faste echeone,
 For had we him, than were we syker ynowe:
 But unto God of Heaven I make a vowe,
 For al our craste whan that we han alydo,
 And all our sleight, he wol not come us to;
 He hath made us spend moche goode,
 For sorrow of which almost we wexen wode;
 But that good hope crepeth in our herte,
 Supposyng ever though we fore smerte,
 To ben releved by him afterwarde,
 Supposyng, and hope is sharpe and harde;
 I warne you wel it is to syken ever,
 That future temps hath made men discever,
 In trust therof, all that ever they had,

Yet of that Arte, they could not waxe sad;
 For unto him itt is a bytter swete,
 So semeth itt; for ne had they but a shete:
 Which that they might wrappen hem in a night,
 And a bratte to walken in a day light;
 They wolden hem sel and spend it on this Crafte,
 They conne not stynte, tyl nothing be laste;
 And evermore where that ever they gone,
 Men may hem ken by smell of Brimstone:
 For al the world they stynken as a Gote,
 Her Savour is so rammish and so hote:
 That though a man a myle from him be,
 The favour wol infecte him trusteth me.
 Lo thus by smelling and by threde-bare aray,
 If that men list this folke know they may:
 And if a man wol aske him prively,
 Why they be clothed so unthriftely:
 Right anon they wil rowne in his ere,
 And sayne if that they aspyed were,
 Men wold hem flee bycause of her Science,
 Lo thus these folke betrayen innocence.

Passe over this I goe my tale unto,
 Ere that the pott be on the fyre ydo:
 Of Metalls with a certayne quantyte,
 My Lord hem tempreth and no man but he:
 Now he is gon I dare say boldly,
 For as men sayne, he can done craftely;
 Algate I wotte wel he hath such a name,
 And yet full oft he renneth in the blame,
 And wotte ye how full oft itt happeth so,
 The potte to breaketh and farewell all is go.
 These Mettalls ben of soe greate violence,
 Our walls may not make hem resystance;

But

But if they were wrought of lyme and stone,
They percen soe and through the wall they gone ;
And some of them synken into the ground,
Thus have we lost by tymes many a pound :
And some are scattered all the floore aboute,
Some lepen into the rose withouten doute:
Tho that the fende not in our syght him shewe,
I trow that he with us be, that ilke shrewe :
In hell where that he is Lord and syre,
Ne is there no more wo, ne angre, ne yre :
When that our potte is broke as I have said,
Every man chyte and holte him yvell apayde.
Some sayd itt was long of the Fyre makeing,
Some sayd nay, it was on the blowing:
Than was I ferd, for that was myn offyce,
Straw (quod the third) ye ben lewde and nyce ;
It was not tempered as it ought to bee,
Nay (quod the fourthe) stynte and herken me :
Bycause our fyre was not made of beche
That is the cause, and none other so teche ;
I can not tell whereon itt is alonge,
But well I wotte greate strife is us among.

What (quod my lord) ther nys no more to done,
Of these perill I will beware ofte soone ;
I am right Syker that the potte was crased,
Be as be may, be ye not amased ;
As usage is, let swepe the floore as swythe,
Plucke up your heart and be glad and blythe.
The Mullocke on an heape yswepte was,
And on the floore cast a Canvas ;
And all this Mullocke in a syve y throwe,
And ysyfted and yplucked many a throwe.

Parde (quod one) somewhat of our Mettall;

Yet

Yet is there here though we have not all;
 And though this thyng mishapped hath as now,
 Another tyme it may ben wel ynowe;
 We mote put our good in aventure,
 A Marchant parde may not aye endure;
 Trusteth me wel in his prosperyte,
 Sometyme his good is drowned in the see:
 And sometyme it cometh safe unto the londe.

Peace (quod my lord) the next tyme I wol fonde,
 To bring our Crafte all in another plyte,
 And but I doe Syrs lett me have the wyte:
 There was default in somewhat wel I wote.

Another sayd the Fyre was over hote.
 But be it hotte or colde I dare say this,
 That we concluden evermore amys:
 We faylen of that which we wolde have,
 And in our madnesse evermore we ~~grave~~;
 And whan we be togyther everychon,
 Every man semeth as wyse as Solomon,
 But all thing which that shyneth as the Golde,
 Is not Golde as I have here tolde:
 Ne every Apple that is faire at Eye,
 Nys not good what so men clappe or cry.
 Right soe itt fareth among us;
 He that semeth the wysest by Iesus
 Is most foole when it cometh to the prefe,
 And he that semeth truest is a Theefe:
 That shall ye know er that I from you wende,
 By that I of my Tale have made an end.

There was a Chanon of Religyoune
 Amonge us, wolde enfect all a Towne,
Rome, Alysaundere, Troy, and other thre,
 Though it as great were as Ninive.

His fleyght and his infynyte falsenesse,
 There couthe no man writen as I gesse;
 Though that he might lyve a thousand yere
 In all this worlde of falsenesse nye his pere:
 For in his termes he wol him so wynde,
 And kepe his words in so flye a kynde,
 Whan he comen^{men} shall with any wight,
 That he wol make him dote anon right.
 But it a fe^{me}de be as himselfe is,
 Full many a man hath he begyled er this;
 And mo wol, if that he may lyve a whyle,
 And yet men ryden and gone full many a myle
 Him for to seeke and have acquayntaunce,
 Not knowing of his false governaunce:
 And if ye luste to give me audience,
 I wol it tellen here in your presence.

But worshipfull Chanons relygyouse,
 Ne demeth not that I sclander your house;
 Although my tale of a Chanon be,
 Of every ordre some shrewe is parde:
 And God forbid that al a Companye
 Shoulde rue a synge mannes folye.
 To slaunder you is not myn entente,
 But to correct that mysse is mente;
 This tale was not only told for you,
 But eke for other moe ye wotte wel howe;
 That among Christs Apostles twelve,
 There was no traytour but Judas himselve:
 Then why shoulde the remenant have blame
 That gyltlesse were? by you I say the same:
 Save only this, if you wol herken me;
 If any Judas in your Covent be,
 Remeveth him betyme I you rede,

If shame or losse may causen any drede,
 And be nothing displeased I you pray,
 But in this case herkenneth what I say.

In LONDON was a Preeft annuellere,
 That therin had dwelt many a yere,
 Which was soe plesant and so servytable
 Unto the Wyfe, where he was att table;
 That she wolde suffer him nothing to pay
 For borde, ne clothing, went he never so gay;
 And spending Sylver had he right ynowe,
 There of no force I wol proceed as now:
 And tell forth my tale of the Chanon,
 That brought this Preeft to confusyon.

This false Chanon came uppon a daye
 Unto this Preefts chamber where he laye,
 Beseechyng him to leⁿve him a certayne
 Of Gold, and he wolde quyte him agen:
 Leⁿyth me a Marke (quod he) but dayes thre;
 And att my day I wol quyte itt the;
 And if it so be, that thou fynde me false,
 Another day hang me by the halfe.

This Preeft toke him a Marke and that swyth;
 And this Chanon him thanked oft syth;
 And toke his leve, and went forth his wey;
 And att his third day brought his money.
 And to this Preeft he toke this Gold ayen,
 Whereof this Preeft was gladd and fayn.

Certes (quod he) nothing anoyeth me
 To lend a man a Noble, two or thre;
 Or what thing were in my possession,
 Whan he soe true is of Condition:
 That in no wyse he breke wol his day,
 To such a man I can never say nay.

What (quod this Chanon) sholde I be untrewē,
 Nay ! that were a thyng falsen of newe,
 Trouthe is a thyng that wol ever I kepe
 Unto the day, in which I shall crepe
 Into my Grave, or els God forbede:
 Beleveth this as syker as your Crede:
 God thanke I and in good tyme be it sayd,
 That there was never man yett yvel apayd;
 For Gold ne Sylver that he to me lent,
 Ne never falsehede in myn herte I ment.

And Sir (quod he) now of my privyte,
 Sens ye so goodlych have ben to me;
 And kythe to me so great gentlenesse,
 Somwhat to quyte with your kyndnesse;
 I wol you shewe if ye wol it lere,
 (I shall it shewe to you anon right here)
 How I can werche in Phylsophye:
 Taketh good hede ye shall it se with your Eye,
 That I woll done a Maistrye or I goe.

Ye Sir (quod the Preeft) and wol ye so?
 Marye thereof I pray you hertely.

Att your Commandement Sir truly,
 (Quod the Chanon) and els God forbede,
 Lo how this thefe con the his servyce bede.

Ful sothe itt is that such profered servyse
 Stynketh, as wittnesseth the olde wyse:
 And that ful sone I wol it veresye,
 In this Chanon rote of all trechery,
 That evermore delyte hath and gladnesse:
 Such fendly thoughts in his herte empresse,
 How Christs people he may to mischief bring,
 God kepe us from his false dissymuling.

What wyft this Preeft with whom that he delte,

Ne of his harme comyng nothing he felte.
 O sely Preeft, O sely Innocente.
 With Covetyse anon thou shalt be blente;
 O gracelesse ful-blynde is thy conceyte,
 Nothyng arte thou ware of his deceyte.
 Which that this foxe hath shapen to the,
 H's wylle wrenches thou mayst not fla.
 Wherefore to goe to thy Conclusyon,
 That referreth to thy confusyon:
 Unhappy man anon I wol me hye,
 To tell thyn unwitte ne thy folye:
 And eke the falsenesse of that other wretche,
 As fer forthe as my connyng wol stretche.

This Chanon was my Lord ye wold wene,
 Syr hoste in fayth and by the heven Quene:
 It was another Chanon and not he,
 That can an hundredfold more subtelte:
 He hath betrayed folke many a tyme,
 Of his falsenesse it doleth me to ryme;
 Ever whan I speke of his falseheed,
 For shame of him my chekes waxen reed:
 Algates they begennen for to glowe,
 For rednesse have I non right well I knowe.
 In my visage, for fumes dyverce
 Of Metalls which ye have herde me reherce,
 Consumed and wasted hath my rednesse,
 Now take heed of this Chanons Cursednesse.
 Syr (quod he) to the Preeft, set your Man gon,
 For Quicksilver that we it had anon;
 And lett him bring unces two or thre,
 And whan he cometh as faste shul ye se
 A wonder thyng which ye saw never er this;
 Syr (quod the Preeft) itt shalbe done iwys:

He badd his servaunte fetch him this thyng,
And he already was att his bydding ;
And went him forth and came anon agayne
With this Quicksylver shortly for to sayne :
And toke these unces there to the Chanoun,
And he hem sayd well and sayre adoun :
And bade the servaunt Coles for to bryng,
That he anon might go to his werkyng.

The Coles right anon were yfet,
And this Chanon toke out a Crosselett
Of his bosome, and shewed it to the Preeft :
This Instrument (quod he) which that thou seest
Take in thy hond, and put thy selfe therein
Of this Quicksylver an unce and begyn
In the name of Chist to wexe a Philosopber,
There be ful fewe which I wolde it profer ;
To shewe him this moche of my Science,
For here shul ye se by experience,
That this Quicksylver I wol mortifye
Right in your syght anon withouten lye,
And make it as good Sylver and as fyne,
As there is any in your purse or myne,
Or elsewhere, and make it malliable,
Or els hold me false and unstable ;
Amonges folke ever to appere.

I have a poudre that cost me deere,
Shall make all good, for it is cause of all
My connyng, which I you shewe shall ;
Voydeth your Man, and let him be therout,
And shette the dore, whyles we ben about
Our privetie, that no man us espy,
Whyles that we Werken in our Philosophye.
Alas he bade fulfyllled was indede:

This ylke servant anon out yede,
 And his Maister shette the dore anon,
 And to her labour spedily they gone.

This Preeft at this cursed Chanons byddying,
 Uppon the fyre anon set this thyng;
 And blewe the fyre and besyed him ful faste,
 And this Chanon into this croslet caste
 A powder, I not wherof it was,
 Ymade either of Chalke, Erthe, or Glasse
 Or somewhat els, was not worthe a fly,
 To blynde with this Preeft, and bade him hye
 These Coles for to couchen al above
 The Crosselet for in token that I the love;
 (Quod this Chanon) thyn hondes two,
 Shal werke al thing that here shalbe do;
 Graunt mercy (quod the Preeft) and was ful glad,
 And couched coles as the Chanon bad.
 And whyle he besy was, this fendely wretch,
 This false Chanon, the foule fende him fetch;
 Out of his bosome toke a bechen cole,
 In which ful subtelly was made an hole,
 And therein was put of Sylver lymayle,
 An unce, and stopped was without fayle,
 The hole with waxe to kepe the Limayle in.

And understandeth that this false gyn
 Was not made there, but it was made byfore;
 And other thynges that I shall you tell more
 Herafter, that whiche he with him brought,
 Er he came there to begyle him he thought:
 And so he did er they went a twynne
 Till he had turned him, coude he not blynnne,
 It dulleth me whan that I of him speke,
 On his false hede fayne wolde I me wreke,

If I wyfte how, but he is here and there,
He is so varyaunt he bydeth no where.

But taketh heed Syrs now for Godds love,
He toke his Cole of which I spake above,
And in his honde he bare it prively,
And whyles the Preeft couched besily
The Coles, as I told you er this,
This Chanon sayd, Frende ye done amys :
This is not couched as it ought to be ;
But sone I shall amend it (quod he)
Nowe let me medle therwith but a whyle,
For of you have I pyte by Saint Gyle :
Ye ben right hotte, I se wel how ye swete,
Have here a clothe and wype away the wete :
And while the Preeft him wyped hace,
This Chanon toke the Cole, I shrewe his face :
And layd it aboven upon the mydwarde
Of the Croslet, and blewe wel afterwarde,
Till that the Coles gonne faste brenne.

Nowe yeve us drinke (quod this Chanon) then,
As swythe al shall be wel I undertake,
Sytte we downe and let us mery make ;
And whan this Chanons bechen Cole
Was brent, al the Limayle out of the hole
Into the Croslet anon fell adoun,
And soe it must needes by resoun,
Sens it so even above couched was,
But thereof wyfte the Preeft nothing alas :
He demed all the coles lyche goode,
For of the sleight nothing he understoode.

And whan this Alkamistre sawe histyme,
Ryseth up Syr Preeft (quod he) and stondeh byme ;
And for I wott well yngot have I none :

Goth walketh forth and brynge a chalke stone,
 For I wol make it of the same shappe,
 That an yngott is if I may have happe;
 And bringe eke with you a bolle or a panne
 Full of water, and you shall se thanne,
 How that our besynesse shall happe and preve,
 And yet for ye shall have no misbyleve,
 Ne wronge conceyte of me in your absence,
 I wol not ben out of your presence:
 But goe with you and come with yon agayne.

The Chamber dore shortly to sayne,
 They opened and shette and went forth her wey,
 And forthe with him they carryed the key;
 And comen agen withouten any delay,
 What shulde I tarry all the long day?
 He toke the Chalke and shope it in the wyse
 Of an yngot as I shall you devyse.

I say he toke out of his owne sleve
 A teyne of Sylver, yvel mote he cheve;
 Which that was but an unce of weight,
 And taketh heed now of his cursed sleight,
 He shope his yngot in lenght and in brede
 Of the teyne withouten any drede,
 So lily that the Preeſt it not aspyde,
 And in his sleve agayne he gan it hyde;
 And from the fyre toke up his Mattere,
 And into the yngot it put with mery chere:
 And into the water-veſſele he it caſte
 Whan that him liſt, and bade the Preeſt aſ faſte
 Looke what there is put in thyn honde, and grope,
 Thou ſhalt finde there Sylver as I hope;
 What dyvel of hell ſhulde it els be?
 Shaving of Sylver, Sylver is parde.

He put in his honde and toke up a Teyne
 Of Silver fyne, and glad in every veyne
 Was this Preeft, whan he saw itt was so,
 Gods blessinge and his Mothers also :
 And al hallowes have ye Sir Chanon
 Sayd this Preeft, and I her Malyson.
 But and ye vouchsafe to teche me
 This noble Crafte, and this subtelte ;
 I wol be yours in al that ever I may.

Quod the Chanon yet woll I make assay
 The seconde tyme, that ye mowe take heede,
 And ben expert of this and in your neede
 Another day assay in myn absence,
 This Disciplyne and this crafty Science.
 Lette take onother ounce (quod he) tho
 Of Quicksylver withouten words mo,
 And don therwith as I have don er this,
 With that other which that nowe silver is.

This Preeft him besyeth in all that he can,
 To don as this Chanon this cursed man
 Commanded him, and fast blew the fyre
 For to come to the effect of his desyre ;
 And this Chanon right in the meane while,
 All redy was, this Preeft este to begyle ;
 And for a Countenance in his honde bare
 An holow sticke, take keepe and beware ;
 In thend of which an unce and no more
 Of Sylver Lymayle putte was, as before,
 Was in his cole, and stopped with wexe wele,
 For to kepen in his Lymaile every dele.

And whiles this Preeft was in his besynesse
 This Chanon with his sticke gan him dresse
 To him anon, and his poudre cast in,

As he did erst, the Dyvell out of his skyn
 Him torne, I pray to God for his falshede;
 For he was ever false in thought and dede:
 And with his sticke above the Crosselette,
 That was ordeyned with that false iette,
 He styreth the coles tyl all relent gan
 The waxe agayne the fyre, as every man,
 But he a foole be, wote wel it mote nede,
 And al that in the hole was out yede:
 And into the crosselette hastely it fell.

The Preeft supposed nothing but well,
 But besyed him fast and was wonder fayne,
 Supposing nought but trouthe, soth to sayne:
 He was so gladd that I cannot expresse,
 In no manere his mirth and his gladnesse;
 And to the Chanon he profered eft soone
 Body and good: ye (quod the Chanon) anone,
 Though I be poore, crafty thou shalt me fynde,
 I warne the yet is there more behynde,
 Is there any Copper here within sayd he?

Ye Sir (quod the Preeft) I trowe there be.
 Els go bye some and that aswythe.

Nowe good Sir go forth thy way and hythe.

He went his way and with the Coper he came,
 And this Chanon in his honde it name,
 And of that Coper wayed out but an unce,
 All to symple is my tonge to pronounce:
 As to minstre by my wytte the doublenesse
 Of this Chanon, roote of all cursydnesse:
 He semed freindly to hem that knew him nought.
 But he was fendly both in werke and thought,
 It weryeth me to tell of his falsenesse
 And nathlesse, yet wol I it expresse,

To the entent that men may beware thereby,
And for none other cause truly.

He put this unce of Coper into the Crosslett,
And on the fyre as swythe he hath it sett;
And cast in poudre, and made the Preeft to blowe,
And in his workeing for to stoupe lowe:
As he did erste, and all nas but a jape,
Right as him lyst, the Preeft he made his Ape;
And afterward in the yngot he it caste,
And in the panne put it at the laste
Of water, and in he put his owne honde,
And in his sleve, as ye by forehonde
Herd me tell, he had a Sylver Teyne,
He slyly toke it out, this cursed heyne,
Unwetyng this Preeft of his false crafte,
And in the pannes botome he hath it laste,
And in the water rombleth to and fro:
And wonder prively toke up also
The coper Teyne, not knowing this Preeft,
And hydde itt, and hent him by the brest;
And to him spake, and thus sayd in his game,
Stouperth adowne, by God ye be to blame,
Helpeth me now, as I did you whylere:
Put in your honde, and loketh what is there.

This Preeft toke up this Sylver Teyne anone,
And then said the Chanon, lette us gon
With these thre Teynes which we han wrought
To some Goldsmythe, and wete if it be ought:
For by my faith, I nolde for my hoode,
But if it were Sylver syne and goode,
And that as swythe wellproved shalbe.

Unto the Goldsmythe with these Teynes three,
They went and put them in assaye,

To fyre and hammer, might no man say nay,
But they were as them ought for to be.

This sortted Preeſt who was gladder then he,
Was never Byrd gladder agenſt the day,
Ne Nightyngale agenſt the ceaſon of May,
Was never none, that lyſt better to ſynge,
Ne Lady luſtier in Carolyng:
And for to ſpeke of love and woman hede,
Ne Knight in armes to done a herdy dede,
To ſtonden in grace of his Lady dere,
Then had this Preeſt this craſte to lere,
And to the Chanon, thus he ſpake and ſayd.
For the love of God, that for us all deyd,
And as I may deſerve it unto yow,
What ſhall this receite coſt, telleth me nowe?

By our Lady (quod this Chanon) it is dere,
I warne you well; ſave I and a Frere:
In ENGLAND there can no man it make.

No force (quod he) nowe Sir for Gods ſake,
What ſhall I pay? tell me I you pray.

I wys (quod he) it is ful dere I ſay.
Syr at one word if that ye lyſt it have,
Ye ſhall pay fortye pound, ſo God me ſave:
And nere the freindſhynp that ye did er this
To me, ye ſhulden pay mere y wys.

This Preeſt the ſome of forty pounce anon.
Of Nobles ſette, and told hem everychon
To this Chanon for this ilke receyte,
All his worchyng was fraude and deceyte.

Syr Preeſt he ſaid; I kepe for to have no loos
Of my craſt, for I wold itt were kept cloos:
And as ye love me kepeth it ſecre;
For and men knowe all my Subteltey;

By God men wolde have soe greate envye
To me by cause of my Phylosophye:
I shulde be deed, ther were none other way.

God it forbid (quod the Preeft) what ye say:
Yet had I lever spend all the good,
Which that I have, or els waxe I wood
Than that ye shoulde fallen in such mischeife:
For your good wyll have ye right good prefe,
(Quod the Chanon) and farewell graunt mercy:

He went his way, and never the Preeft him sey
After that day: And whan that this Preeft sholde
Maken assay at such tyme as he wolde
Of this receyte, farwell it nold not be:
Lo thus bejaped and begyled was he.

Thus maketh he his Introduction,
To bringe folke to her distruction.

Consydereth Sirs, howe in eche estate
Betwixt Men and Gold is debate,
Soe fer forthe, that unneths there is none,
This Multiplyeng blyndeth so many one;
That in good sayth, I trowe that it be
The greatest cause of such scarfite:
These Phylosophers spoken so mistily,
In this Crafte, that men cannot come thereby,
For any witte that men have now adayes,
They may well chattré and jangle as doth the Jayes:
And in her termes sett her luste and payne,
But to her purpose shall they never attaine;
A man may lightly lerne if he have bought,
To Multiply and bring his good to nought:
Lo such a Lucre is in this lusty game,
A mans myrthe it wol turne all to grame:
And emptien also greater and hevy purfes,

And maken folke to purchase curses:
 Of hem that han alsoe her good ylent.
 O fye for shame, they that han be brente:
 Alas cannot they fly the fyres hete,
 Ye that it usen, I rede that ye it lete:
 Lest ye lesen al, for bet then never is late,
 Never to thryve were to long a date,
 Though that ye prolle aye ye shall it never fynde,
 Ye ben as bold as is Bayarde the blynde;
 That blondereth forth, and perill casteth none;
 He is as bolde to renne agenst a stone,
 As for to go besyde in the way;
 So faren ye that multiplyen I say;
 If that your Eyen can not sene aright,
 Loketh that your Mynde lacke not his sight;
 For though ye loke never soe brode and stare,
 Ye shall not wynne a myte in that chaffare:
 But waste all that ye may repe and renne,
 Withdrawe the fyre least it to fast brenne:
 Medleth with that Arte noe more I mene;
 For yf ye done your thrifte is gone full cleane.
 And right as swythe I woll you tellen here,
 What that the Phylsophers sayne in this matere.

Lo thus, saith Arnolde of the newe tounce,
 As his Rosarye maketh mencioune:
 He sayth right thus withouten any lye,
 There may noe man Mercury mortifye;
 But if it be with his brothers knowlegyng;
 Lo how that he which firste sayd this thyng
 Of Phylsophers father was, Hermes.

He saythe how that the Dragon doutlesse
 Ne dyeth not, but if he be slayne
 With his brother: and this is for to sayne,

By the Dragon Mercurye and none other,
He understood that Brimstone was his brother.

That out of Sol and Luna were ydrawe,
And therefore sayd he, take heed to my sawe.

Let no man besye him this Arte for to seche,
But he that the Entention and speche

Of Phylosophers understonde can,
And if he do he is a leud man:

For this Science, and this connyng (quod he)
Is of the Secre, of the Secres parde.

Alsoe there was a Disciple of Plato,
That on a tyme sayd his Maister to:

As his booke Senior wol bere wytnesse,
And this was his demaunde in sothfastnesse.

Tell me the name of the privy Stone?

And Plato answered unto him anone,
Take the Stone that Tytanos men name.

Which is that (quod he?) Magnatia is the same,
Said Plato: ye Sir, and is it thus?

This is ignotum per ignotius:

What is Magnatia good Sir I you pray?
It is a Water that is made I say

Of Elements foure (quod Plato)

Tell me the Rocke good Sir (quod he tho)
Of that Water, if it be your wyll.

Nay nay (quod Plato) certayne that I nyll,
The Philosophers were y sworne echone,

That they shulde discover it unto none;
Ne in no Boke it write in no manere,

For unto Christ it is so lefe and dere,
That he wol not that it discovered be,

But where it liketh to his deite;
Man to enspyre and eke for to defende,

Whan that him lyketh, lo this is his ende.

Then conclude I thus, fens the God of heaven,
 Ne wyl not that the Phylosophers nemen:
 Howe that a Man shall come unto this Stone,
 I rede as for the best, lett itt gone;
 For who so maketh God his adversary,
 As for to werche any thing in contrary:
 Unto his will, certes never shall he thrive;
 Though that he Multiplie terme of his live;
 And there a poynte: for ended is my Tale,
 God send every true man Bote of his bale.

THE

THE WORKE OF JOHN DASTIN.

Or yet full sleping, nor yet full waking,
But betweene twayne lying in a traunce;
Halfe closed mine Eyne in my slumbering,
Like a Mā rapt of all cheer & countenance;
By a manner of weninge & Remembrance
Towards Aurora, ere Phæbus uprose,
I dreamed one came to me to doe me pleasure
That brought me a Boke with seaven scales close.

2. Following upon I had a wonderfull dreame,
As seemed unto my inward thought,
The face of him shone as the Sun-beame:
Which unto me thys heavenly Boke brought,
Of so greate Riches that yt may not be bought,
In order set by Dame Philosophie,
The Capitall and the flowrishing wrought
By a wise Prince called Theologie.

3. Thys Boke was written with letters aureat,
Perpetually to be put in memory,
And to Apollo the Chapters consecrate,
And to the seaven Gods in the heavenly Consistory:
And in Mercuries litle Oratory,
Groweth all the fruite in breese of thys Science,
Who can expresse hem and have of hem Victory,
May clayme the triumph of his Minerall prudence.

4. Of this matter above betweene Starrs seaven,
 By Gods and Goddeesses all of one assent,
 Was sent Caducifer to Erth downe from Heaven :
Saturnus as Bedell by great advisement ;
 For to summon a generall Parliament,
 By concord of all both old and younge of age,
 To say in Breife their Councell most prudent :
 For Common profit to knitt up a Marriage.

5. Betweene twaine Borne of the Imperiall blood,
 And descended from Iupiters line,
 Of their Natures most pure and most good ;
 Wythowte infeccion their seede is most divine :
 That noe Eclipse may let them for to shine,
 So that Mercury doth stint all debate,
 And restraine their Courage by meaknes them incline ;
 That of frowardnes they be not indurate.

6. For the Sunne that sitteth so heigh a loft,
 His golden dew-droppes shall cleerely raigne downe,
 By the meane of Mercury that moven first made soft :
 Then there schalbe a glad Coniunccion,
 Whan there is made a Seperacion :
 And their two Spermes by Marriage are made one ;
 And the said Mercury by devision,
 Hath taken his flight and from both is gone.

7. These be the two Mercuries cheife of Philosophers,
 Revived againe with the Spirit of lyfe,
 Richer then Rubies or Pearles shut in Coseurs ;
 Washed and Baptized in waters vegetative,
 The body dissevered with heate nutritive :
 By moderate moysture of Putrefaccion ;
 So that there is no excesse nor no strife
 Of the foure Elements in their Coniunccion.

8. The graine of Wheate which on the ground doth
But it be dead it may not fructifie, (fall,
If it be hole the vertue doth appayle;
And in no wise it may not Multiplie,
The increase doth begin whan it doth Putrefie;
Of good Grafts commeth Fruites of good lastage;
Of Crabs Verjuyce, of Ash is made Lye,
Of good Grapes followeth a good Vintage.

9. Who soweth good Seede repeth good againe,
Of Cockles sowne there can grow no good Whea
For as such a Ploughman traveleth in vaine,
To fruitefull Land Cockle is not meete;
Gall is ever bitter, Honey is ever sweete,
Of all things contrary is fals Conneccions,
Let Male and Female together ever meete;
But both be clesed of their Complexions.

10. A Man of Nature ingendereth but a Man,
And every Beast ingendereth his semblable;
And as Philosophers rehearse well can,
Diana and Venus in marriage be notable,
A Horse with a Swine joyneth not in a stable,
For where is made unkindly geniture,
What followeth but things abominable?
Which is to say Monstrum in Nature.

11. All this I finde in the said Boke,
Brought to me when I lay a sleepe;
And of one thing good heede I toke;
The Wolf in kinde is Enemy to the Sheepe.
The Rose full divers to the wild Neepe:
For things joyned that be contrary;
Dame Nature complayning doth sit and weepe:
For falce receipts found in her Library.

12. And there it was so pitiously complained,
 That men so err by false Opinions
 That be so farr from truth away restrained,
 Like as they had lost wholly their Reasons,
 Not considering in their discretions;
 What mischeife followeth as is oft seene,
 By these false froward Conneccions :
 As doth leapers with folkes that byne cleane.

13. Notwithstanding he that is sate so high in heaven,
 Crown'd with a Crowne of bright stones cleere,
 Borne there to raine as cheife chosen of seaven :
 Equall with Phæbus shone in the same sphere,
 Without difference as Clerkes to us leare,
 Sate there most royallin his diadem :
 Very Celestiall and Anglike of cheare ;
 And in all vertue like as he did seeme.

14. And in that Boke I found well by writing,
 Like as the proceffe made mention :
 How that there was once a mighty rich King,
 Cleane of nature and of Complexion :
 Voyde of deformity from head soe forthe downe,
 Which for his beauty as it is specified,
 And for his cleanes most soverayne of renowne :
 Was among Planets in heaven stelled.

15. Certaine Brethren I found he had in Number,
 And of one Mother they were borne every each one :
 But a Sicknes did them sore cumber,
 That none was whole on his feete to gone,
 Hoarse of language, cleere voice had they none :
 For with a scabb that was contagious,
 They were infected, hole was their none ;
 For ever exiled because they were Leaprous.

16. The said King rose up in his Royall see,
Seeing this mischeife cast his Eye downe,
And of his mercy, and fraternall pittye,
Surprized in heart, full of Compassion:
And began to complaine of their Infeccion,
Alas quoth he how came this adventure,
Under what froward or false Constelacion;
Or in what howre had yee your ingendure.

17. But fithence this mischeife ys to you befall,
There is nothing which were more expedient,
Then to chuse one out amongst us all,
Without spott all cleere of his intent,
For you to dye by his owne assent,
To save the people from their Damnation:
And with his blood ere you be fully shent,
To make of his mercy your remission.

18. The which Liquor most wholesome is and good,
Against leprous humors and false infeccions,
When from a veyne taken is the blood;
Cleansing each parte from all corrupcions,
The Originall taken from generacions:
Which is descended downe from stock royall,
Nourished with Milke of pure complexion;
With menstrous which are not superficiall.

19. But when the Brethren of this worthy King
Heard the Language, they fell in full great dread,
Full fore weeping and said in Complayning
That none of them was able to bleede,
Because their blood was infeccious indeede,
And of corrupt blood made is noe Sacrifice,
Wherefore alas there is noe way to speede,
That we can finde, to helpe us in any wise.

20. Of our Birth and of our Originall,
 Cleerely and truly to make mencion;
 Excuse is there none in parte nor in all;
 In sin was first our conception:
 Our bringing forth and generation,
 Fulfilled was in sorrowe and wickednesse,
 And our Mother in a short conclusion
 With Corrupt milke us fostred in distresse.

21. For who may make that seede to be cleane
 That first was conceived in uncleanes,
 For cancred rust may never I meane,
 By noe crafte shew forth perfect brightnes:
 Now let us all at once our Course addres;
 And goe unto our Mother to aske by and by,
 The finall cause of our Corrupt sicknes;
 That she declare unto us the Cause and why.

22. The said Children uprose in a fury
 Of wofull rage, and went by one assent
 Unto their Mother that called was Mercury:
 Requiring her by greate advisement,
 Before her Goddeses being every one present.
 To tell them truly and in noe parte to faine,
 Why their nature was corrupt and shent;
 That caused them evermore to weepe and complaine.

23. To whome the Mother full bright of face and hew,
 Gave this answer remembred in Scripture,
 First when I was wedded a new,
 I conceived by proffes of true Nature:
 A Child of seede that was most cleane and pure,
 Undeified, most orient, faire and bright,
 Of all the PLANETS cheife of ingendure:
 Which now in Heaven giveth so cleere a light.

24. Whose Complexion is most temperate,
In heate and cold and in humidity,
In Erth also that there is noe debate,
Nor noe repugnaunce by noe quallity:
Nor none occasion of none infirmity,
That among them there may be none discord,
So well proportioned every-each in his degree,
Each hower and space they be of so true accord.

25. Whose Nature is so imperiall,
That fire so burning doth him noe distresse:
His royall kinde is so celestiall,
Of Corruption he taketh no sicknesse;
Fire, Water, Air, nor Erth with his drines,
Neither of them may alter his Complexion,
He fixeth Spirits through his high noblenes;
Saveth infected bodyes from their Corruption.

26. His Heavenly helth death may not assaile,
He dreadeth noe venome, nor needeth no treacle,
Winde Tempest ne Wether against him may prevaile,
Soe high in Heaven is his Tabernacle,
In Erth he worketh many a miracle:
He cureth Lepers and fetcheth home Fugitive,
And to gouty Eyne giveth a cleere Spectacle:
Them to goe that lame were all their lief.

27. He is my Son and I his Mother deare,
By me conceived truly in Marriage;
As touching your Birth the sicknes doth appeare,
Of Menstruous blood brought forth in tender age,
Your Leprie is shewed in Body and in Visage,
To make your hole Medicine is no other
Drinke, nor potion to your advantage,
But the pure blood of him that is your deare Brother.

28. A good Shephard must dye for his Sheepe,
 Without grudging to speake in words plaine,
 And semblable take hereof good keepe,
 Your Brother must dye and newe be borne againe,
 Though he be old, be hereof well certaine;
 To youth againe he must be renewd,
 And suffer passion or else all were vaine,
 Then rising againe right fresh and well hewd.

29. Old Aeson was made young by Medea,
 With her drinks and with her potions,
 Soe must your Brother of pure Volunta
 Dye and be young through his operation,
 And that through subtile natures Confections,
 By whose death plainely to expresse;
 Yee shalbe purged from all infeccions:
 And your foule leaprie changed to cleanes.

30. With the said words the King began to abrayd
 The tale adverting that she had tould,
 How might a Man by nature thus he said
 Be borne againe, namely when he ys old?
 Then said hys Mother by reason manifold:
 But if the Gospell thus doth meane,
 In Water and Spirit be renovate hott and cold,
 That he shall never plainely come into Heaven.

31. The King was tristy and heavy of cheere,
 Upon his Knees meekely kneeled downe,
 Prayed his Father in full low manner,
 To translate the Challice of hys passion,
 But for he thought the redempcion
 Of his brethren, might not be fulfilled,
 Without his death nor their Salvation;
 For them to suffer he was right willed.

32. And for to accomplish hys purpose in sentence,
By cleere example who so looketh right,
Heavy things from their Circumferance,
Must up assend and after be made light,
And things light ready to the flight
Must descend to the Center downe,
By interchaunging of natures might,
As they be moved by meane of Revolution.

33. Soe as Iupiter in a Cloud of Gold,
Chaunged himselfe by transformacion,
And descended from hys heavenly hold
Like a Golden dewe unto Danae downe,
And she conceived as made is mencion,
By influence of hys power divine;
Right so shall Phæbus right soveraigne of renowne
To be conceived of his Golden raine decline.

34. And to comfort hys Brethren that were full dull,
The Sun hath chosen without warr or strife,
The bright Meone when she was at the full,
To be his Mother first, and after hys wedded wife;
In tyme of Ver the season vegetative,
In Aries when Titan doth appeare,
Inspired by grace with the Spirit of lyfe,
This marriage hallowed at midday Spheare.

35. And at this feast were the Godes all,
Saturne from blacknes was turned to white;
And Iupiter let his mantle fall,
Full pale and meager of greate delight,
Clothed in lyllies that every maner wight,
Of Heaven and Erth, and Gods of the Sea,
Rejoyced in Heart, and were full glad and light,
To be present at this great Solemnity.

36. Mars forgot there hys sturdy black hardines,
 Cast off his Habergeon fret with old rust;
Venus forsooke her minercall rednes,
 Tooke Gold for greene and she againe also for lust,
 Because she had in Phæbus such a trust,
 That he should this feast hold of most noblenes:
 Of brotherly pittie needs as he must,
 Give her a mantle of Orientall brightnes.

37. After this Wedding here afore devised,
 Of faire Phæbus and fresh Lucine;
Philosophers have prudently practised,
 A Cloffet round by their wise Doctrine,
 Cleere as Christall of Glasse a litle shrine;
 With heavenly deawe stuffed that dungeon,
 Kept night and day with glorious maidens nyne;
 To keepe the Queene in her Conception.

38. Religiously they kept their Sylence,
 Till that from heaven their a royall light,
 And there with all in open audience;
 Was heard a voyce almost at mid night,
 Among the Virgins most amiable of sight,
 That said unto them, to save that was forlorne;
 I must againe through my imperiall myght,
 Be of my Mother new conceived and borne.

39. I must passe by water and by Fire,
 The brunt abide and there from not decline,
 To save my brethren I have so greate desire,
 With new light their darknes to yllumine,
 But sore I dread that venomous Serpentine,
 Which ever advanceth with his violence,
 My tender youth to hurt and to invenome,
 But in your keeping doe you your diligence.

40. The King thus entred in his bed royall,
The Queene conceived under a Sun bright;
Under her feete a mount like Christall,
Which had deuoured her husband anon right,
Dead of desire and in the Maidens sight;
Lost all the Collour of his fresh face,
Thus was he dead, the Maidens feeble of mighr
Dispaired, slept in the same place.

41. The Serpent bold shed out his poyson,
The Queene and Maidens for feare tooke them to flight,
Seauen tymes assending up and downe
With in a vault, now darke, now cleere of light,
Their generation was so strong of might,
Tfter death now passeth Purgatory;
Ao Resurreccion as any Sun bright,
Things that were lost to bring to his glory.

42. The Queene tooke her full possession,
The Soule reviving of the dead King;
But of old hatred the toxicate poyson,
Was by the Serpent cast in to their hindring;
The Prince was buried, but of his rising,
The Btethren were glad the truth was scene,
When they were washed by his naturall clensing;
And their old Leprie by Miracle was made cleane.

43. The full Moone halfe shaddowed the Sun,
To putt away the burning of his light;
Black shaddowed first the skyes were so dunn,
The Ravens bill began who looketh right,
Blacker then Jett or Bugle to sight;
But litle and litle by ordinary apparance,
The temperate fire with his cherishing might
Turned all to white, but with noe violence.

44. Tyme to the Queene approched of Childing,
 The Child of Nature was ready to fly,
 Passage was there none to hys out going:
 He spread hys wings and found no liberty;
 Of nyne Virgins he devoured three,
 The other six most excellent and faire,
 Fearefull for dread in their greatest beauty,
 Spread their feathers and flew forth in the Aire,

45. The Child coloured first Black and after White,
 Having noe heate in very existence,
 But by cherishing of the Sun bright,
 Of forraine fire there was noe violence:
 Save that men say which have experience,
 He dranke such plenty of the Water of the well,
 That his six sisters made noe resistance;
 But would have devoured; Dastin can you tell.

46. Sometyes black, sometyes was he redd,
 Now like ashes, now Citrine of Colour:
 Now of Safforne hew, now sanguine was his head,
 Now white as a lylie he shewed him in his bower,
 The Moone gave nourishment to him in his labour;
 And with all their force did their buisnes,
 To cloath hym fresher then any flowre,
 With a mantle of everlasting whitnes.

PEARCE

THE BLACK MONKE

upon the Elixir.

Take Erth of Erth, Erths Moder,
 And Watur of Erth yt ys no oder,
 And Fier of Erth that beryth the pryse,
 But of that Erth louke thow be wyse,
 The trew Elixir yf thow wylt make,
 Erth owte of Erth looke that thow take,
 Pever futel faire and good,
 And than take the Water of the Wood:
 Cleere as Chrystall schynnyng bryght:
 And do hem togeder anon ryght,
 Thre dayes than let hem lye,
 And than depart hem pryvyly and flye,
 Than schale be browght Watur schynnyng,
 And in that Watur ys a soule reynnyng,
 Invisible and hyd and unseene,
 A marvelous matter yt ys to weene.
 Than departe hem by dystillynge,
 And you schalle see an Erth apperinge,
 Hevie as metale schalle yt be;
 In the wych is hyd grete prevety,
 Destil that Erth in grene hewe,
 Thre dayes during well and trew;
 And do hem in a body of glasse,
 In the wych never no warke was.

In a Furnas he must be sett,
 And on hys hede a good lymbeck ;
 And draw fro hym a Watur clere
 The wych Watur hath no peere,
 And astur macke your Fyer stronger,
 And there on thy Glasse continew longer,
 So schal yow se come a Fyer ;
 Red as blode and of grete yre,
 And astur that an Erth leue there schale,
 The wych is cleped the Moder of alle ;
 Then into Purgatory sche must be doe,
 And have the paynes that longs thereto,
 Tyl sche be bryghter than the Sune,
 For than thow hast the Maystrey wone ;
 And that schalbe wythin howres three,
 The wych forsooth ys grete ferly :
 Than do her in a clene Glass,
 Wyth some of the Watur that hers was.
 And in a Furnas do her againe,
 Tyl sche have drunke her Watur certaine ,
 And astur that Watur give her Blood,
 That was her owne pewre and good ,
 And whan sche hath dranke alle her Fyer,
 Sche wyll wex strong and of grete yre.
 Than take yow mete and mylcke thereto,
 And fede the Chylde as you schowlde do ,
 Tyl he be growne to hys full age ,
 Than schal he be of strong courage ;
 And tourne alle Bodies that leyfull be,
 To hys owne powre and dignitee,
 And this ys the making of owre Stone,
 The trewth here ys towlde yow evereech one.

For all that taketh any other wey,
 Mouch they looseth and mouch they may,

For trewly there ys no other way of righte,
But Body of Body and Lyghte of Lyghte,
Man of Man begottyn ys,
And Beste of Beste to hys lykenes,
Alle the fooles in the worlde seeken;
A thyng that they may never meeten,
They wolde have Metalle owte of hem,
That never was fownde by worldly men:
Ne never was fownde by Goddis myghte,
That they schould beare any such fryghte.

All Saltes and Sulphures far and nere,
I interdite hem alle in fere,
Alle Corosive waters, Blood and Hayre,
Pyss, Hornes, Wormes and Saudiver,
Alume, Atriment, alle I suspende,
Rasalger and Arsnick I defende,
Calx vive, and Calx mort hys Brother,
I suspende them both, one and other,
For of alle things I wyll no moe,
But fowre Elements in Generall I say soc,
Sun and Moone, Erth and Water;
And here ys alle that men of clatter,

Our Gold and Sylver ben no common plato;
But a sperme owte of a Bodi I take,
In the wych ys alle Sol, Lune, Lyfe and Lyghte
Water and Erth, Fyre and Fryght:
And alle commyth of one Image,
But the Water of the Wood makyth the marryage;
Therefore there ys none other waye,
But to take thee to thy Beades and praye:
For Covetous Men yt fyndyth never,
Though they seek yt once and ever,
Set not your Hearts in thys thyng,
But only to God and good lyvyng.

And

And he that wyll come thereby,
 Must be meeke, and full of mercy:
 Both in spyrit and in Countenannce,
 Full of Chereti and good Governauce;
 And evermore full of almes deede,
 Symple and pewaterly hys lyf to leade:
 Wyth Prayers, Pennaunces, and Piety,
 And ever to God a lover be,
 And alle the ryches that he ys sped,
 To do God worschyppe wyth Almes deede.

In Arsenyck sublymed there ys a way streight,
 Wyth Mercury calcyned nyne tymes hys weight
 And grownde together with the Water of myght
 That bereth ingression lyfe and lyght,
 And anon as they togyther byne,
 Alle runnyth to Water bryght and shene,
 Upon thys Fyre they grow togethyr,
 Tyll they be fast and flee no whythyr;
 But than feede hem fowrth wyth thy hond,
 Wyth mylke and meate tyle they be stronge,
 And thow schalt have there a good Stone,
 Whereof an Ounc on fowrty wyll gone:
 Upon Venus or on Mercury,
 Thys Medicyn wyll make thee merry.

All yow that have sowght mani a day,
 Leave worke, take yowre Beades and pray,
 For the longer that yow seeken,
 The longer yt ys or yow meeten;
 And he that now fayne would be sped,
 Lysten to my Daughter Megg:
 For schhe scall tell yow trewth and ryghte,
 Hearken now wyth all your myght.

I am Mercury the myghty Flower,
 I am most worthy of Honour;

I am sours of Sol, Luna, and Mars,
 I am genderer of Iovis, many be my snares :
 I am fetler of Saturne, and sours of Venus ,
 I am Empreffe, Prynceffe and Regall of Queenes,
 I am Mother of Myrrour, and maker of lyght,
 I am head and hyghest and fayrest in syght :
 I am both Sun, and Moone,
 I am sche that alle thynges must doone.
 I have a Daughter hight Saturne that ys my darlyng,
 The wych ys Mother of all werkyng,
 For in my Daughter there byne hydd,
 Fowre thyngs Commonly I kydd :
 A Golden seede, and a spearme rych,
 And a Silver seede none hym lich;
 And a Mercury seede full bryght,
 And a Sulphur seede that ys ryght.

Of my Daughter wythowten dred ,
 Byn made Elyxirs whyte and redd,
 Therefor of her draw a Water cler,
 The Science yf thow lyst to leare.
 Thys Water reduceth every thyng,
 To tendernes and to fyxing :
 It burgeneth growyth and gyveth fryght and lyght,
 Ingression lyfe and lastyng in syght :
 Alle ryghteous werkes sooth to say,
 It helpeth and bryngyth in a good way:
 Thys ys the Water that ys most worthy,
Aqua perfectissima & flos mundi :
 For alle werkes thys Water makyth whyte,
 Reducyng and schyning as Sylver bryght:
 And of the Oyle greare marvell there ys,
 For all thyngs yt bryngyth to rednes:
 As Cytrine gold he ys full high,
 None ys so redd nor none ys so worthy:

And in the Erth grete maruele ys hyd,
 That ys first so black, and than so red:
 And alle ys done in howres three,
 Thys may be cleped Gods Prevetie;
 Than the Erth shall torne red as blood,
 Citrine Gold, naturall cleere and good,
 And than the red Oyle to hem schall goe,
 Red Ferment, and red Mercury alsoe,
 And grow togeder weekes seaven,
 Blessed be Almyghty God of Heven:
 One Ounce of thys Medycine worthy
 Cast upon two hundred ownces of Mercury:
 Schall make Gold most royall,
 And ever enduring to holde tryall;
 Eyre and Hammer Tuch and Test,
 And all essayes most and least.
 And yt ys Medycen above common Gold,
 To mans body as God yt would.

For Gold that cometh from the Oare,
 Is nourished with fowle Sulphur:
 And Engendered upon Mercury he ys,
 And nourished by Erth and Sulphur I wys,
 And our Gold ys made of thre pewre soules,
 In the wych ys noe Corrupcyon foule:
 But purged pewre as clene as Chrystall,
 Body and Spyryt and Sowle wythall;
 And so they grow into a stone,
 In the wych Corrupcyon there ys none;
 And than cast hym upon Mercury,
 And he schalbe Gold most worthy,
 Now have you heard the making of our Stone,
 The begynnyng and endyng ys all one.

THE WORKE OF RICH: CARPENTER.

F Titan Magnasia take the cler light,
The rede Gumme that ys so bryght,
Of Philosofris the Sulfer wise,
I called Gold wythouten stryfe;
Of hem drawe owte a Tincture,

And make a marrymony pure:
Betweene the husband and the wyfe,
I spoused wyth the Water of lyfe:
And so that none dyvyfion
Be there, in the conjunccion
Of the Moone and of the Sonne,
After the marriage ys begonne;
And that Mercury the planete,
In loef make hem so to mete:
That cyder wyth oder be joyned even,
As a Stone engendered sente down fro heven;
Of hem make water clere rennynge,
As any Chryftall bryght schynnynge.
Drawen out of bodyes fyxed,
By Nature prively mixed
Within a vessal depured clene,
Of Philosofris bright and schene;
Beware the Fume escape the nowght,
And alleso marked well in thy thought;
That of the Fire the quallitee,
Equal to Phebez bemes be;
In the moneth of Iune and Iule,
Understand me be not dulle;

For thou schalt see marveles grete,
 Colures spring oute of the heate :
 Fyrste Blakke and Whyte, and so Redde,
 And after Setryne wythouten drede :
 And so wythin howres thre,
 That Stone schall thorowe perced be
 Wyth Aier that schall upon hym lyght,
 The wych ys a wonder syght :
 Whenne the spiryt ys refreyned,
 And wyth the Bodie so constrayned,
 That hem asounder maye nothyng parte,
 So Nature hem doth there so coart,
 In matrife whenne they both ben knyte,
 Lett never thy Vessel be unshytte ;
 Tyl thys ingendred have a stone,
 That in thys world ys not suche on :
 For hyt ys called Anymal,
 Richer then the Mineral.
 Wyche ys founden in every plase,
 Who foundeth hyt myght have grase :
 In the and me and over alle
 Both Vegetables and Sophisticall :
 On Hilles hye and Valeys lowe,
 He groweth who cowde hyt know,
 Take thys for an informacion,
 In Caryt and in Proporcion,
 Lyth alle who so coude seke oute,
 In Bus and Nubi ys alle the doute :
 He that puttes himself in pres,
 To Genis and to Species :
 Qualitas and every Quantite,
 To mane a man hyt wol not be ,
 To brynge about thys tresour,
 I mene owre Stone of suche valour ;

And yet who coude well understonde,
 May fynde hit redy at hys honde :
 For Fowles that in the Ayre done flee,
 And also Fisches in the See :
 The moyster of the rede Grape
 And of the Whyte, who coud hym take :
 Vertues of Erbes vegetyff,
 And soules of Bestes sensytyff :
 Reysons of Angels that doth discerne,
 Goude and Yeul Man to governe,
 All bryngs to thyn house
 Thys Noble Ston so precious ,
 And Soverente of alle thys Werke,
 Both to Lewd and to Clerke :
 This lyth alle by discrecion,
 In Fyre, and in Decoccion :
 The craft recordeth yif he can rede,
 How all and sume who shal spede ;
 In Bokes eler as ye maye see,
Stat in Ignis regimine :
 To brynge fosth at my devys,
 Thys ryche Rubye, thys Ston of prys :
 Harde hevy and percyng,
 Now ys thys a wonder thyng :
 I coude never suche on a spye ;
 Save that I finde howe on Marie :
 Fyrst found hyt wythouten lese,
 The wyche was suster to Moyse :
 But who hyt be that schall hyt werke,
 Let hem not begenn in the derke :
 For he mai fayle for faute of lyght,
 But the Sunne schyne full bright :
 Advyse the well er thow begene,
 Or else lytel schalt thow wyne.

THE HUNTING

the GREENE LYON.

All haile to the noble Companie
 Of true Students in holy Alchimie,
 Whose noble practise doth hem teach
 To vaile their secrets with mistie speach;
 Mought yt please your worshipfulnes
 To heare my silly soothfastnes,
 Of that practise which I have scene,
 In hunting of the Lyon Greene:
 And because you may be apaid,
 That ys truth, that I have said;
 And that you may for surety weene,
 That I know well thys Lyon, greene:
 I pray your patience to attend
 Till you see my short writt end,
 Wherein Ile keepe my noble Masters rede,
 Who while he lived stooode me in steede;
 At his death he made me sweare hym to,
 That all the secrets I schould never undoe
 To no one Man, but even spread a Cloude
 Over my words and writes, and so it shroude,
 That they which do this Art desire,
 Should first know well to rule their Fyre:

For with good reason yt doth stand,
Swords to keepe fro mad Mens hand:
Least th'one should, kill th'other burne,
Or either doe some fore shroud turne:
As some have done that I have seene,
As they did hunt thys Lyon greene.
Whose collour doubtles ys not foe,
And that your wisdomes well doe know;
For no man lives that ever hath seene
Upon foure feete a Lyon colloured greene:
But our Lyon wanting maturity,
Is called greene for unripenes trust me,
And yet full quickly can he run,
And soone can overtake the Sun:
And suddainely can hym devoure,
If they be both shut in one towre:
And hym Eclipse that was so bryght,
And make thys redde to turne to whyte:
By vertue of hys crudytic,
And unripe humors whych in hym be,
And yet wythin he hath such heate,
That whan he hath the Sun up eate,
He bringeth hym to more perfection,
Than ever he had by Natures direccion.
This Lyon maketh the Sun sith soone
To be joynd to hys Sister the Moone:
By way of wedding a wonderous thing,
Thys Lyon should cause hem to begett a King:
And tis as strange that thys Kings food,
Can be nothing but thys Lyons Blood;
And tis as true that thys ys none other,
Than ys it the Kings Father and Mother.
A wonder a Lyon, and Sun and Moone,
All these three one deede have done:

The Lyon ys the Preist, the Sun and Moone the wedd,
 Yet they were both borne in the Lions Bedd;
 And yet thys King was begott by none other,
 But by Sun and Moone hys owne Sister and Brother.

O noble Master of pardon I you pray,
 Because I did well-neere bewray
 The secret which to me ys so deare,
 For I thought none but Brothers were here:
 Than schould I make no doubt
 To have written plainly out,
 But for my fealty I must keepe aye,
 Ile turne my pen another way,
 To speake under Benedicite
 Of thys noble Company:
 Wych now perceives by thys,
 That I know what our Lyon ys.

Although in Science I am noe Clerke,
 Yet have I labour'd in thys warke:
 And truly wythouten any nay,
 If you will listen to my lay:
 Some thing thereby yow may finde,
 That well may content your minde,
 I will not sweare to make yow give credence,
 For a Philosopher will finde here in evidence,
 Of the truth, and to men that be Lay,
 I skill not greatly what they say.
 For they weene that our Lyon ys
 Common Quicksilver, but truly they miss:
 And of thys purpose evermore shall fayle,
 And spend hys Thrift to litle availe,
 That weeneth to warke hys wyll thereby,
 Because he doth soe readely flie;
 Therefore leave offere thou begin,
 Till thow know better what we meane;

Whych whan thou doest than wilt thou say
That I have tought thee a good lay,
In that whych I have said of thee before,
Wherefore lysten and marke well my lore.

Whan thou hast thy Lyon with Sol and Luna well fedd,
And layd them clenly in their Bedd;
An easie heate they may not misse,
Till each the other well can kisse;
And that they shroude them in a skin,
Such as an Egg yelke lyeth in:
Than must thou draw from thence away,
A right good secret withouten any nay:
Wych must serve to doe thee good,
For yt ys the Lions Blood:
And therewith must the King be fedd,
When he ys risen from the dead:
But longe tyme it wilbe,
Or ere his death appeare to thee;
And many a sleepe thou must lack,
Or thou hym see of Collour black.
Take heede yow move hym not with yre,
But keepe hym in an easy fyre;
Untill you see hym seperate,
From hys vile Erth vituperate;
Wych wilbe black and light withall,
Much like the substance of a fusball:
Your magnet in the midst wilbe,
Of Collour faire and white trust me;
Then whan you see all thys thing,
Your fire one degree increasing;
Untill yow well may se thereby,
Your matter to grow very dry:
Then yt ys fit wythout delay,
The excrements be tane away;

Prepaire a Bed most bryght and shine
 For to lodge this young Chylde in :
 And therein let hym alone lye,
 Till he be throughly dry ;
 Than ys tyme as I doe thinke ,
 After such drouth to give him drinke :
 But thereof the truth to shew ,
 Is a greate secret well I know ;
 For Philosophers of tyme old ,
 The secret of Imbibition never out tould ;
 To create Magnesia they made no care ,
 In their Bookes largely to declare ;
 But how to order it after hys creacion ,
 They left poore men without consolacion ;
 Soe many men thought they had had perfeccion ,
 But they found nothing in their Projeccion :
 Therefore they mard what they had made before ,
 And of Alchemy they would have no more .
 Thus do olde Fathers hide it from a Clarke ,
 Because in it consisteth the whole subtrill warke ;
 Wych if ye list of me to know ,
 I shall not faile the truth to shew .
 Whan your pure matter in the glasse is fitt ,
 Before that you your vessell shitt ;
 A portion of your Lyons sweate
 Must be given it for to eate :
 And they must be grounded so well together ,
 That each fro other will flee noe whither ;
 Then must you scale up your Glasse ,
 And in hys Furnace where he was ,
 You must set them there to dry .
 Which being done then truly ,
 You must prepare like a good Phisitian ,
 For another Imbibition :

But evermore looke that you dry
 Up all hys drinke, that none lye by,
 For if yow make hym drinke too free,
 The longer will your workeing be,
 And yf you let hym be too dry,
 Than for thirst your Child may dye;
 Wherefore the meane to hold is best,
 Twixt overmoyft and too much roft;
 Six tymes thy Imbibitions make,
 The seaventh that Saboath's rest betake:
 Eight dayes twixt ilke day of the six,
 To dry up moist and make it fix;
 Then at the nynth tyme thy Glasse up seale,
 And let him stand six weekes each deale:
 With his heate temperd so right,
 That Blacknes past he may grow white;
 And so the seaventh weeke rest him still,
 Till thow Ferment after thy will;
 Which if thow wilt Ferment for Whyte,
 Thereby thow gainst noe greate profit;
 For I assure thee thow needest not dred,
 To proceede with fire till all be Redd;
 Than must thow proceede as did Philosophers old
 To prepaire thy Ferment of peure Gold,
 Which how to doe though secret that it be,
 Yet will I truly teach it thee.

In the next Chapter as erst I did say,
 That soe the truth finde yow may,
 Therefore of Charity and for our Lords sake,
 Let noe man from my writings take
 One word, nor add thereto,
 For certainly if that he doe,
 He shall shew malice fro the which I am free,
 Meaning truth and not subtilty;

Which I refer to the Judgement
 Of those which ken the Philosophers intent:
 Now listen me with all your might,
 How to prepaire your Ferment right.

O noble Worke of workes that God has wrought,
 Whereby each thing of things are forth aye brought;
 And fitted to their generacion,
 By a noble fermentacion;
 Which Ferment must be of such a thing,
 As was the workes begyning;
 And if thou doe progresse aright
 Whan thou hast brought the worke to whight;
 And than to stay is thy intent,
 Doe after my Comandement;
 Worke Luna by her selfe alone,
 With the blood of the greene Lyon :
 As earst thou didst in the begining,
 And of three didst make one thing;
 Orderly yeilding forth right,
 Till thy Magnet schew full whyte;
 Soe must thou warke all thy Ferment,
 Both White and Red, else were yt shent.
 Red by yt selfe and soe the White,
 With the Lyons Blood must be deight;
 And if thou wilt follow my lore,
 Set in thy Ferment the same houre,
 Of Sol for Redd, of Luna for White;
 Each by himselfe let worke tight;
 Soe shall thy Ferment be ready edress,
 To feede the King with a good mess
 Of meates that fitt for his digestion,
 And well agreeing to his Complexion;
 If he be of Collour White,
 Feed hym than with Luna bright;

If his flesh be perfect Red,
Than with the Sun he must be fedd,
Your Ferment one fourth parte must be,
Into your Magnet made evenly,
And joyne hem warme and not cold,
For raw to ripe you may be bold
Have disagreement foe have heate and cold:
Therefore put hem warme into thy Glasse,
Then seale it up even as it was:
And Circle all till yt be wonne,
By passing degrees every each one:
Both black and whyte, and also redd,
Than of the Fire heere have noe dread,
For he will never dreade the fyre,
But ever abide thy desire.

And heere a secret to thee I must shew,
How to Multeplie that thow must know,
Or else it wilbe over micle paine
For thee to begin thy worke againe :
I say to thee that in noe fashion,
It's so well Multeplied as with continuall Firmen
And sure far it wilbe exalted at the last,
And in Projection ren full fast :
There for in fyre keepe Firment alway,
That thy Medicine augment mayst aye ;
For yf the maid doe not her leaven save, (crave;
Then of her Neighbours sche must needs goe
Or sche must stay till sche can make more,
Remember the Proverbe that store is no sore :
Thus have I tought thee a lesson, full of truth,
If thow be wicked therefore my heart is reuth :
Remember God hys blessing he can take,
Whan he hath given it, if abuse any you make,
For surely if thow be a Clerke,

Thow wilt finde trewth in thys werke:
 But if so be that thow be lay,
 And understond not what I say,
 Keepe Councell then and leue thy Toy,
 For it befitts no Lymmer loy,
 To medle with such grete secrecie:
 As ys thys hygh Phylosophye.
 My Councell take, for thow schalt finde it true,
 Leave of seeking thys Lyon to pursue,
 For hym to hunt that ys a prety wyle,
 Yet by hys Craft he doth most Folke beguile,
 And hem devour and leave hem full of care,
 Wherefore I bidd thee to beware.
 And Councell give thee as my frend,
 And so my Hunting here I end.
 Praying God that made us we may not myss
 To dwell with hym in hys Hevenly blyss.

THE BREVIARY OF NATURALL PHILOSOPHY.

Compiled by the unlettered Scholar

THOMAS CHARNOCK.

Student in the most worthy Scyence of Astronomy and Philosophy. The first of Ianuary

Anno. Dom. 1557.

Anno. Dom. 1557. The first day of the new yeare

This Treatise was begun as after may appeare.

The Booke Speaketh.

Come hither my Children of this Discipline,
Which in naturall Philosophy have spent so long time;
To ease your painfull Study I am well willed
And by the grace of God it shall be fulfilled;
If he in me (my Author) will shed one drop of grace,
The better he shall finish me and in shorter space.
And if you will know what I am surely,
I am named the The Breviary of naturall Philosophy.
Declaring all Vessells and Instruments,
Which in this Science serve our intents.
For moe things belong unto the same;
More then any Author hath written the Name;
Which hath brought many a one in great doubt,
What is the Implements that longeth thereabout;
Wherefore in good order, I will anon declare,
What Instruments for our Arte you neede to prepare.

The Preface of the Author.

Goe forth little Booke in volume but small,
 Yet hast thou in thee that is not in them All,
 For satisfying the mindes of the Students in this Arte,
 Then art thou worth as many Bookes, as will lye in a Cart :
 Glad may he be that hath thee in his keeping,
 For he may find through diligent seeking,
 All things in thee which shall be necessary,
 As Vessells and Instruments belonging to Alchimy ;
 Which would set many a Mans heart on fire,
 To have the same knowledge they have so great desire.
 And no meruaile though they be glad and faine,
 For they have spent many a pound in vaine ;
 In making of Vessells of many divers sorts,
 And have brought them out of many strange Ports :
 Because they did not well understand,
 That all things we need we have in England.
 Now think you that this will not save many a Marke,
 Unto those that have wrestled so long in our Warke ?
 Yes some would spend all the Money in their pouch,
 If they knew but this or halfe so much.
 Wherefore of pitty I will no longer refraine,
 But declare all things their purpose to attaine.
 Wherefore if you do happen on my Booke,
 Either by Casualty, Hooke, or by Crooke :
 Yet pray for my Soule when I am dead and rotten,
 That of Alchimy Scyence the dore hath let open ;
 Sufficent for thee if thou have any Braine,
 Now sharpen thy wits that thou maist it attaine.

The first Chapter.

NOW will I declare all things at large,
 Of Implements of this Work and what is the charge:
 And first with the Potter I will begin,
 Which cannot make that which he hath never seene;
 Whether that thy Vessels be made to thy minde,
 Stand by while he worketh more surety to finde,
 And shew him what to doe by some signe or similitude,
 And if his witts be not to dull nor rude,
 He will understand what thou doest meane,
 For I think few Potters within this Realme
 Have made at any tyme such cunning ware,
 As we for our Scyence doe fashion and prepaire;
 And when he hath formed them unto thy purpose,
 For what occasion thou needest not disclose:
 But if he say unto you, Good Master myne,
 Tell me for what purpose or what engine
 Shall these Vessels serve that thou cause me to make,
 For all my life hitherto I dare undertake
 I never formed such, nor the like of them;
 Yet are they but plaine without wrinkle or hem,
 One within another, it is a pretty feate,
 The third without them to guide up the heate:
 Then say unto him to satisfie his minde,
 That ye have a Father which is somewhat blinde,
 Who if it please God you will indeavour,
 To stil a water his blindnes to dissever:
 Which is the Elixir of lyfe as wise men say,
 And in this doing God send me my pray;

Then will he say this or the like,
 I pray God to send yee that which you seeke,
 And thus with the Potter thou hast now done,
 Without thou breake thy Pots with the heate of the Sun:
 Which if it doe it turnes thee to paine,
 And there is no way but to make them new againe.

As soone as with the Potter thou hast made an end,
 Then with a Ioyner thou must Condescend,
 Who also must have this Councell and witt,
 To make a Tabernacle the Vessell to fitt;
 Which wilbe also in greate doubt,
 For what purpose it will serve about;
 In that he never made nor framed none such,
 Although it be made like to a Hutch:
 Then tell him a Tale of a roasted Horse,
 Unto the which he will have no remorse:
 And laugh and say it is a Borrough for a Fox,
 Although it be made sure with Keys and locke,
 And thus with the Ioyner thou hast made an end,
 Without thou set it on fire as I did mine.

As for Glassmakers they be scant in this land,
 Yet one there is as I doe understand:
 And in Sussex is now his habitation,
 At Chiddinsfold he workes of his Occupacion:
 To go to him it is necessary and meete,
 Or send a servant that is discreete:
 And desire him in most humble wise
 Ito blow thee a Glasse after thy devise;
 If were worth many an Arme or a Legg,
 The could shape it like to an egge;
 To open and to close as close as a haire,
 If thou have such a one thou needest not feare.
 Yet if thou hadst a number in to store,
 It is the the better, for Store is no sore.

The second Chapter.

NOW LORD of thy grace I beseech thee suffer me,
 To finish my pretence in this rude Studie:
 For this nor ought else without thy helpe can be done,
 As neither the Conjunction of Sun nor Moone:
 Nor yet other Planets can motion themselves an houre,
 Without thy providence and thy divine power:
 Wherefore in all things that we doe begin,
 Let us with prayer call for helpe of him:
 That he bring our doings to effect,
 Which must be done very Circumspect:
 Wherefore if you thinke to obtaine your intent,
 Feare God and keepe his Comandement:
 And beware of Pride and let it passe,
 And never be looking too much in thy Glasse;
 Deceive noe man with false measure,
 For truly that is ill gotten treasure:
 But let thy weights be true and just,
 For weight and measure every man must
 Unto his Neighbour yeild uprightly,
 And so must thou in the worke of Philosophy:
 And also feede him which is hungry,
 And give him drinke which is thirsty.
 Give liberally I say as riches doe arise,
 And from thirsty body turne not away thy Eyes.

What and two poore Men at one tyme come unto thee
 And say, Master, for the love of God and our Lady,
 Give us your Charity whatsoever you please,
 For we have not one peny to do us ease;

And we are now ready to the Sea prest,
 Where we must abide three moneths at the least;
 All which tyme to Land we shall not passe,
 No although our Ship be made but of Glasse,
 But all tempest of the Aire we must abide,
 And in dangerous roades many tymes to ride;
 Bread we shall have none, nor yet other foode,
 But only faire water descending from a Cloude:
 The Moone shall us burne so in processe of tyme,
 That we shalbe as black as men of Inde:
 But shortly we shall passe into another Clymate,
 Where we shall receive a more purer estate;
 For this our Sinns we make our Purgatory,
 For the which we shall receive a Spirituall body:
 A body I say which if it should be sould,
 Truly I say it is worth his weight in Gold:
son give theis two, one penny in their Journey to drinke,
 And thou shalt speede the better truly as I thinke.

The third Chapter.

NOW have I good will largely to write,
 Although I can but slenderly indite;
 But whether I can or cannot indeede,
 With the Chapter of Fire I will proceede:
 Which if thou knowest not how to governe and keepe,
 Thou wert as good go to bed and sleepe,
 As to be combred therewith about,
 And therefore I put thee most certainly out of doubt;
 For when I studied this Scyence as thou deest now,
 I fell to practise by God I vowe:

I was never so troubled in all my lyfe beforne,
 As intending to my Fire both Midday Eve and Morne :
 And all to kepe it at an even stay ;
 It hath wrought me woe moe then I will say.
 Yet one thing of truth I will thee tell,
 What greate mishap unto my Worke befell ;
 It was upon a Newyeares day at Noone,
 My Tabernacle caught fire, it was soone done :
 For within an houre it was right well,
 And streight of fire I had a smell.
 I ran up to my worke right,
 And when I cam it was on a fire light :
 Then was I in such feare that I began to stagger,
 As if I had byne wounded to the heart with a dagger;
 And can you blame me ? no I think not much,
 For if I had beene a man any thing rich,
 I had rather have given 100 Markes to the Poore,
 Rather then that hap should have chanced that houre.
 For I was well onward of my Work truly,
 God save my Masters lyfe, for when he thought to dye,
 He gave me his worke and made me his Heire,
 Wherefore alwaies he shall have my prayer :
 I obteyned his grace the date herefro not to varie,
 In the first and second yeare of King Phillip & Queene
 Yet lewdly I lost it as I have you tould, (Mary.
 And so I began the new and forgot the old,
 Yet many a night after I could not sleepe in Bed.
 For ever that mischance troubled my head,
 And feare thereof I would not abide againe ;
 No though I shoulde reape a double gaine,
 Wherefore my charge rose to a greater summe,
 As in hyring of a good stoute Groome ;
 Which might abide to watch and give attendance,
 Yet often tymes he did me displeasaunce,

And would sleepe so long till the Fire went out,
 Then would the Knave that whorson Lout,
 Cast in Tallow to make the fire burne quicker,
 Which when I knew made me more sicker;
 And thus was I cumbred with a drunken sott,
 That with his hasty fire made my Worke too hott;
 And with his sloth againe he set my worke behinde;
 For remedy thereof to quiet my Minde,
 I thrust him out of dores, and tooke my selfe the paine,
 Although it be troublesome it is the more certaine;
 For servants doe not passe how our workes doe frame,
 But have more delight to play and to game.
 A good servant saith Solomon let him be unto thee,
 As thyne owne heart in each degree.
 For it is precious a faithfull servant to finde,
 Esteeme him above treasure if he be to thy minde;
 Not wretchles, but sober, wise, and quiet,
 Such a one were even for my dyet:
 Thus having warn'd thee of an ill servant sufficient,
 But a good servant is for our intent.

The fourth Chapter.

WHen my Man was gone I began it anewe,
 And old troubles then in my minde did renew;
 As to break sleepe oftentimes in the night,
 For feare that my Worke went not aright;
 And oftentimes I was in greate doubt,
 Least that in the night, my fire should go out:
 Or that it should give to much heate,
 The pensivenes thereof made me to breake sleepe:

And

And also in the day least it should miscary,
 It hath made my minde oftentimes to varie;
 Wherefore if thou wilt follow my reade,
 See thy fire safe when thou goest to Bed:
 At Midnight also when thou dost arise,
 And in so doing I judge thee to be wise:
 Beware that thy Fire do no man harne,
 For thou knowest many a mans House and Barne
 Have byne set on fire by mischance,
 And specially when a Foole hath the governance;
 Our Fire is chargeable, and will amount
 Above 3. pound a weeke, who hath list to cast account,
 Which is chargeable to many a poore man,
 And specially to me as I tell can:
 And Geber bids poore men be content,
Hac Scientia pauperi & argento non convenit
Sed potius est illis inimica, and bids them beware,
 Because their mony they may not well spare;
 For thou must have Fires more then one or two,
 What they be George Ripley will thee shew;
 Above a hundred pounds truly did I spend,
 Only in fire ere 9. moneths came to an end;
 But indeede I begun when all things were deare,
 Both Tallow, Candle, Wood, Coale and Fire:
 Which charges to beare sometymes I have sold,
 Now a Jewell, and then a ring of Gold:
 And when I was within a Moneths reckoning,
 Warrs were proclaimed against the French King.

Then a Gentleman that ought me greate mallice,
 Caused me to be prest to goe serve at Callys:
 When I saw there was none other boote,
 But that I must goe spight of my heart toote;
 In my fury I tooke a Hatchet in my hand,
 And brake all my Worke whereas it did stand;

And

And as for my Potts I knocked them together,
 And also my Glasses into many a shiver;
 The Crowes head began to appeare as black as Iett
 Yet in my fury I did nothing let:
 But with my worke made such a furious faire,
 That the Quintessence flew forth in the Aire.
 Farewell quoth I, and seeing thou art gon,
 Surely I will never cast of my Fawcon,
 To procure thee againe to put me to hinderance,
 Without it be my fortune and chaunce,
 To speake with my good Master or that I dye;
 Master I. S. his name is truly:
 Nighe the Citty of Salisbury his dwelling is,
 A spirituall man for sooth he is;
 For whose prosperity I am bound to pray,
 For that he was my Tutor many a day,
 And understood as much of Philosophie,
 As ever did Arnold or Raymond Lallie:
Geber, Hermes, Arda, nor yet King Caleb,
 Understood no more then my good Master did.
 I travelled this Realme Est and West over,
 Yet found I not the like betweene the Mount and Dover:
 But only a Monke of whome Ile speake anon,
 Each of them had accomplished our White Stone:
 But yet to the Red Worke they never came neere,
 The cause hereafter more plainely shall appeare;
 And thus when I had taken all this paines,
 And then could not reape the fruit of my gaines:
 I thought to my selfe, so to set out this Warke,
 That others by fortune may hit right the Marke.

The fift Chapter.

I am sorry I have nothing to requite my Masters gentle-
 But only this Boke a litle short Treatise; (nes,
 Which I dare say shall as welcome be to him,
 As if I had sent him a Couple of Milch Kine :
 And heere for his sake I will disclose unto thee,
 A greate seacret which by God and the Trinity,
 Since that our Lord this world first began,
 Was it not so opened I dare lay my hand,
 No, all the Philosophers which were before this day,
 Never knew this seacret I dare boldly say.

And now to obteyne thy purpose more rathe
 Letthy Fire be as temperate as the Bath of the Bathe.
 Oh what a goodly and profitable Instrument,
 Is the Bath of the Bathe for our fiery intent !
 To seeke all the World throughout I should not finde,
 For profit and liberty a Fire more fitt to my minde.
 Goe or ride where you list for the space of a yeare
 Thou needest not care for the mending of thy Fire.
 A Monke of Bath which of that house was Pryor,
 Tould me in seacret he occupied none other fire,
 To whome I gave credit even at the first season,
 Because it depended upon very good reason :
 He had our Stone, our Medicine, our Elixir and all,
 Which when the Abbie was supprest he hid in a wall :
 And ten dayes after he went to fetch it out,
 And there he found but the stopple of a Clout.
 Then he tould me he was in such an Agonie,
 That for the losse thereof he thought he should be frenzie,

And a Toy tooke him in the head to run such a race,
That many yeare after he had no setling place;
And more he is darke and cannot see,
But hath a Boy to leade him through the Country.

I hapned to come on a day whereas he was,
And by a word or two that he let passe,
I understood streight he was a Philosopher,
For the which cause I drew to him neare;
And when the Company was all gone,
And none but his Boy and he and I alone,
Master quoth I for the love of God and Charity,
Teach me the seacrets of Naturall Philosophy.

No Son, quoth he, I know not what thou art,
And shall I reveale to thee such a preeuios Arte?
No man by me shall get such gaines,
No not my Boy which taketh with me such paines,
That to disclose it lyes not in my Bands,
For I must surrender it into the Lords hands,
Because I heare not of one that hath the same;
Which lifts up his minde and is apt for the same,
Which if I could finde I would ere I dye,
Reveale to him that same greate mystery:
Yet one there is about the Citty of Salisbury,
A young man of the age of Eight and Twenty,
Charnock is his name of Tennet that Isle,
His praise and Comendacions soundeth many a Mile;
That for a Younge man he is toward and apt,
In all the seaven liberall Scyences set none apart:
But of each of them he hath much or litle,
Whereof in our Scyence he may claime a title:
His praise spreads also for his good indighting,
And of some of his doings I have heard the reciting,
Both of Prose and Meeter, and of Verse also,
And sure I commend him for his first shewe,

I thinke Chaucer at his yeares was not the like,
 And Skelton at his yeares was further to seeke;
 Wherefore for his knowledge, gravity and witt,
 He may well be Crowned Poet Laureat.

Cease Father quoth I and heare me speake,
 For my name is Charnock upon whome you treat;
 But this which you say to me is greate wonder,
 For these quallities and I am farr assunder;
 I am no such Man as you have made reckoning,
 But you shall speake for me when I go a wiving:
 Your praise will make me speede, though it be not true,
 Nor yet my substance worth an old horse shooe.

Is your name Charnocke, and the same Man?
 Yea Sir quoth I: then stumpled he to give me his hand:
 And talked an howre with me in the Philosophers speeche,
 And heard that in no question I was to secche,
 My Son quoth he let me have thy prayer,
 For of this Science I will make thee myne heire;
 Boy quoth he lead me into some secret place,
 And then departe for a certaine space,
 Utill this man and I have talked together:
 Which being done, quoth he, now gentle Brother,
 Will you with me to morrow be content,
 Faithfully to receive the blessed Sacrament,
 Upon this Oath that I shall heere you give,
 For ne Gold ne Silver as long as you live,
 Neither for love you beare towards your Kinne,
 Nor yet to no great Man preferment to wyne:
 That you disclose the seacret that I shall you teach,
 Neither by writing nor by no swift speech;
 But only to him which you be sure
 Hath ever searched after the seacrets of Nature?
 To him you may reveale the seacrets of this Art, (depart.
 Under the Covering of Philosophie before this world yee

What answer will you give me: let me heare?

Master quoth I, I grant your desire.

Then Son quoth he keepe thys Oath I charge thee well
As thinkest to be saved from the pitt of Hell. (cion

The next day we went to Church, and after our devo
A Priest of his Gentlenes heard both our Confessions;
Which being done, to Masse streight we went,
And he ministred to us the holy Sacrament;
But he never wist what we meant therein:
For with a contrary reason I did him blinde,
And so home to dinner we went to our hoast,
All which refeccion I paid for the Cost.

When dinner was done I walked in the field
Large and plaine, where people passe by but field,
And when we were in the midds, Boy quoth he go pick a
And come not againe before I for thee whistle. (Thistle

Now Master quoth I the Coast from hearers is cleare;
Then quoth he my Sonn hearken in thyne Eare;
And within three or foure words he revealed unto me,
Of Mineralls prudence the greate Misterie.

Which when I heard my Spirits were ravished for Joy,
The Grecians were never gladder for the wyning of Troy:
As I was then remembring my good Master thoe,
For even the selfe same secret he did me shew:

Nyne dayes and no more I tarried with him sure,
But Lord in this tyme what secrets of Nature
He opened to me at divers sundry tymes,

As partly I have told thee in my former Rimes:
The rest is not to be written on paine of Damnacion,
Or else in this Boke truly I would make relation;

Now Father quoth I, I will depart you froe,
And for you I wil pray whether soever I goe;
Son quoth he Gods blessing goe with thee and thyne,
And if thou speede well, let me heare of thee againe.

The sixth Chapter.

When I was gone a mile or two abroad,
 With fervent prayer I praised the Lord :
 Giving him thanks for that prosperous Journey,
 Which was more leaver to me then an 100 l. in mony :
 Surely quoth I my Master shall know all this,
 Or else my Braines shall serve me amisse ;
 Which if they were so good as the Monke made menciō,
 Then would I write to my Master with a better invenciō,
 O Lord quoth I what a solemne Oath was this given !
 Surely in sheetes of Brasse it is worthy to be graven ;
 For a perpetuall memory ever to remaine
 Among the Philosophers, for an Oath certaine :
 And when I was two dayes Journey homeward,
 To aske him a question to him againe I fared,
 Which I had forgotten, and would not for my Land,
 But that doubt truly I might understand.

I thought it not much to goe backe with all speede,
 To seeke him out, & to the house where I left him I yed,
 And there in a Chamber anone I founde him out,
 Praying upon his Beades very devout :
Father quoth I a word with you I doe beseech :
 Who is that quoth he ? my Son Charnock by his speech :
 Yea forsooth quoth I, I am come back to you,
 Desiring you heartily to tell me one thing true :
 Which is this. Who was in Philosophy your Tutor,
 And of that Seacret to you the Revealer ?
 Marry quoth he and speake it with hartly Joy,
 Forsooth it was Ripley the Canon his Boy :

Then I remembred my good Master againe,
 Which tould he did it never attaine
 Of no manner of Man but of God, he put it in his head,
 As he for it was thinking lying in his Bead :
 And thus I tarried with him all that night,
 And made him as good Cheere as I might.
 In the morning I tooke my leave of him to depart,
 And in the proceſſe of tyme came home with a merry
 But that mirth was ſhortly turn'd to care, (heart ;
 For as I have tould you ſo my Worke did fare.

Once I ſet it on fyre which did me much woe,
 And after my Man hindred me a Moneth or two ;
 Yet the Gentleman did me more ſpight then the reſt,
 As when he made me from worke to be preſt,
 Then Bedlam could not hold me I was ſo frett,
 But ſowſt at my worke with a greate Hatchett ;
 Rathing my Potts and my Glaſſes altogether,
 I wiſſe they coſt me more or I gott them thither :
 The aſhes with my ſtur flew all about,
 One Fire I ſpilt and the other I put out:
 All the Rubiſh to the dunghill I carried in a Sack,
 And the next day I tooke my Coates with the Croſſe at
 And forth I went to ſerve a Soldiers rome (the back ;
 And ſurely quoth I, there ſhall come the day of Dome ;
 Before I practiſe againe to be a Philosopher,
 Wherefore have me Commended to my good Master.
 And now my ſtudents in this Art, my promiſe I have kept (juſtly,
 And that you ſhall finde true when you underſtand me (truly ;
 Which before that day never thinke to ſpeede,
 For a plainer Boke then this never deſire to reade:
 And true it is alſo yf you can pick it out,
 But it is not for every Cart ſlave or Loute ;

This to understand, no though his witts were fyne,
For it shalbe harde enough for a very good Divine
To Conster our meaning of this worthy Scyence,
But in the study of it he hath taken greate diligence:
Now for my good Master and Me I desire you to pray,
And if God spare me lyfe I will mend this another day.

Ænigma ad Alchimiam.

When vii. tymes xxvi. had run their rase,
Then Nature discovered his blacke face:
But when an C. and L. had overcome him in fight,
He made him wash his face white and bright:
Then came xxxvi. wythe greate rialltie,
And made Blacke and White away to fle:
Me thought he was a Prince off honoure,
For he was all in Golden armoure;
And one his head a Crowne off Golde
That for no riches it might be folde:
Which tyll I saw my hartre was colde
To thinke at length who should wyne the filde
Tyll Blacke and White to Red dyd yelde;
Then hartely to God did I pray
That ever I saw that joyfull day.

 For I did it my sellffe Thomas Charnocke :
 Therefore God coomforte the in thy warke
 For all our wrettinges are verye darke,
 Despyse all Bookes and them desye,
 Wherein is nothing but Recipe & Accipe ;
 Fewe learned men with in this Realme,
 Can tell the aright what I do meane,
 I could finde never man but one,
 Which cowlde teache me the secrets off our Stone:
 And that was a Pryste in the Close off Salesburie,
 God rest his Soll in heven full myrie.

BLOOMEFIELDS

B L O S S O M S :

OR,

The Campe of PHILOSOPHY.

Hen Phœbus was entred the signe of the Ramme,
 In the Moneth of March when all things do spring;
 Lying in my bed an old Man to me came,
 Laying his hand on my buisly head slumbering;
 I am, said he, Tyme, The Producer of all thing :
 Awake and rise, prepaire thy selfe quickly,
 My intent is to bring thee to the Campe of Philosophy.

2. Bloomes and Blossomes plentifully in that field,
 Bene plesantly flourishing dickt with Collour gay,
 Lively water fountaines eke Beasts both tame and wild ;
 Over shaddowed with Trees fruitfull on every spraye,
 Mellodiously singing the Birds do sitt and say :
 Father Son and holy Ghost one God in persons three,
 Impery and honor be to thee O holy Trinity,

3. Lo thus when he had said I arose quickly,
 Doing on my Clothes in hast with agility,
 Towards the Campe (we went) of Philosophy :
 The wonderfull sights ther for to see ;
 To a large greate Gate father Tyme brought me,
 Which closed was then he to me said,
 Each thing hath his Tyme, be thou then nothing dismaid.

4. Then greate admiration I tooke unto my selfe,
 With fore and huge perturbacion of minde,
 Beholding the Gate fastned with locks twelve :
 I fantised but smally that Tyme should be my frend :
 Why studieest thou man, quoth hee, art thou blinde ?
 With a rodd he touched me, whereat I did downe fall
 Into a strong sleepe, & in a Dreame he shewed me all.

1. Igitur audite somnium meum quod vidi. (heaven
 In the thousand yeare of Christ five hundred fifty and
 In the Moneth of March a sleepe as I did lye,
 Late in the night, of the clock about Eleven,
 In spirit wrapt I was suddainely into Heaven :
 Where I saw sitting in most glorious Majestie
 Three I beholding : adored but one Deitie.

2. A Spirit incircumscript, with burning heate incombustible,
 Shining with brightnes, permanent as fountaine of all light.
 Three knit in one with Glory incomprehensible ;
 Which to behold I had a greate delight :
 This truly to attaine to, surmounteth my might :
 But a voyce from that Glorious brightnes to me said,
 I am one God of immensurable Majestie ; be not affraid.

3. In this Vision cleere, that did it selfe soe extend
 With a voyce most pleasant being three in one ;
 Peirced my Minde, and tought me to Comprehend
 The darke sayings of Philosophers each one ;
 The Altitude, Latitude, and Profundity of the Stone,
 To be three in Substance, and one in Essence ;
 A most Heavenly Treasure procreate by Quintessence.

4. Then studied I what this Quintessence should be,
 Of visible things apparant to the Eye ;
 The first being even a strange privetie,
 In every substance resting invisibly ;
 The invisible Godhead is the same thought I ;
 Primer cause of being, and the Primer Essence :
 And of the Macrocosmy the most soveraigne Quintessence.

5. This is that heavenly seacret potentiall,
That divided is, and resteth invifible
In all things Animall, Vigetall and Minerall;
Whose vertue and strength in them is indivifible:
From God it cometh, and God maketh it sensible,
To some Eleſt, to others he doth it denay,
As I ſat thus muſing a voyce to me did ſay.

6. Study thou no more of my Being, but ſtedfaſtly
Beleive this Trinity equally knit in One;
Further of my Secrets to muſe it is but folly,
Paſſing the Capacity of all humane reaſon;
The Heavens cloſed up againe at that ſeaſon:
Then Father Tyme ſet me at the Gate,
And delivered me a Key to enter in thereat.

7. The Key of knowledge and of Excellent Science;
Whereby all ſecrets of Philofophy are reſerate;
The ſecrets of Nature ſought out by diligence;
Avoyding fables of envious fooles inveterate:
Whith Recipe and Decipe this Scyence is violate.
Therefore to me this Key he did diſpoſe
The ſecrets of this Arte to open and diſcloſe.

8. Thus ſaid Father Tyme this Key when he me tooke;
Unlock quoth he this Gate now by thy ſelfe,
And then upon him ſorrowfully did I looke,
Saying that one Key could not undoe Locks twelve,
Whose Axe quoth he is ſure both head and helve
Hold will together, till the Tree downe fall,
Soe open thou the firſt Lock and thou haſt opened all.

9. What is the firſt Lock named tell me then
I pray thee, ſaid I, and what ſhall I it call?
It is ſaid he the Seacret of all Wiſe Men;
Chaos in the bodyes call'd the firſt Originall:
Prima materia, our Mercury, our Menſtruall:

Our Vitrioll, our Sulphur, our Lunnary moſt of price;
Put the Key in the Lock, twill open with a trice.

10. Then the Key of knowledge I busily tooke in hand
 And began to search the hollownes in the Lock,
 The words thereof I scarce did understand,
 So craftily conveid they were in their stock ;
 I proved every way, and at last I did unlock
 The crafty Gynns thus made for the nonce,
 And with it the other Locks fell open all at once.

11. At this Gate opening even in the entry
 A number of Philosophers in the face I met,
 Working all one way the secrets of Philosophy
 Upon Chaos darke that among them was set,
 Sober men of living, peaceable and quiet ;
 They busily disputed the Materia Prima,
 Rejecting cleane away Simul stulta & frivola.

12. Here I saw the Father of Philosophers, Hermes,
 Here I saw Aristotle with cheere most jocund ;
 Here I saw Morien, and Senior in Turba more or lesse,
 Sober Democritus, Albert, Bacon and Ramund,
 The Monke and the Chanon of Bridlington so profound,
 Working most seacretly, who said unto me ;
 Beware thou beleeve not all that thou doest see.

13. But if thou wilt enter this Campe of Philosophy
 With thee take Tyme to guide thee in the way ;
 For By-pathes and Broad wayes deepe Valies and hills high
 Here shalt thou finde, with sights pleasant and gay,
 Some thou shalt meete with, which unto thee shall say,
Recipe this, and that ; with a thousand things more,
 To Decipe thy selfe, and others ; as they have done before.

14. Then Father Tyme and I by favour of these men
 Such sights to see passed forth towards the Campe,
 Where we met disguised Philosophers leane,
 With Porpheries, and Morters ready to grinde and stampe,
 Their heads shaking, their hands full of the Crampe :
 Some lame with Spasmer, some feeble, wan and blind
 With Arsnick and Sulphus, to this Art most unkinde.

15. These

15. These were Brooke the Preist, and Yorke with Coates gay,
Which robbed KING HENRY of a Million of Gold,
Martin Perien, Major, & Thomas De-la-hay
Saying that the King they greatly inrich would,
They whispered in his Eare and this Tale they him tould.
We will worke for your highnes the Elixer vite,
A princely worke called Opus Regale.

16. Then brought they in the Viccar of Malden
With his Greene Lyon that most Royall seacrettr,
Richard Record, and litle Master Eden,
Their Mettalls by Corrasives to Calcine and frett;
Hugh Oldcastle and Sir Robert Greene with them mettr.
Roasting and boyling all things out of kinde,
And like Foolosophers lefr of with losse in the end.

17. Yet brought they forth things beautifull to sight,
Deluding the King thus from day to day,
With Copper Citrinat for the Red, and albisied for the White
And with Mercury rubified in a glasse full gay,
But at the last in the fire they went away.
All this was because they knew not the verity,
Of Altitude, Latitude and Profundity.

18. Thence Father Tyme brought me into a Wildernes,
Into a Thicket having by paths many one;
Steps and footings I saw there more and lesse
Wherein the aforesaid men had wandred and gone,
There I saw Marcasites, Mineralls, and many a stone.
As Iridis, Talck, and Alome, lay digd from the ground
The Mines of Lead, and Iron, that they had out found.

19. No marvel I trow though they were much set by
That with so greate Riches could endue the King,
So many Sundry wayes to fill up his Treasury;
With filty matters greate charges in to bring,
The very next way a Prince to bring to begging;
And make a noble Realme and Common wealth decay,
These are Royall Philosophers the cleane contrary way.

20. From thence forth I went (Tyme being my guide,) Through a greene Wood, where Birds sing cleere,
Till we came to a field pleasant large and wide Which he said was called The Campe of Philosophy;
There downe we satt to heare the sweete Harmony Of divers Birds in their sweete Notes singing,
And to receive the Savour of the flowers springing.

21. Here Juno, here Pallas, here Apollo do dwell;
Here true Philosophers take their dwelling place
Here duly the Muses nyne drinke of Pyrenes Well,
No boasting broyler here the Arte can deface;
Here Lady Philosophy hath her royall Pallace:
Holding her Court in most high Consistory,
Sit ting with her Councillors most famous of memory.

22. There one said to me, an ancient Man was hee,
Declaring forth the Matter of the Stone;
Saying that he was sent thither to Councell me,
And of his Religion to chuse me to be one;
A Cloath of Tishue he had him upon,
Verged about with Pearles of Collour fresh and gay,
He proceedeth with his Tale, and againe he did thus say:

23. Here all occult seacrets of Nature knowen are,
Here all the Elements from things are drawne out;
Here Fire, Air and Water in Earth are knit together:
Here all our seacret worke is truly brought about,
Here thou must learne in thy buisines to be stoute,
Night and day thou must tend thy worke buisily,
Having constant patience never to be weary.

24. As we satt talking by the Rivers running cleere,
I cast myne Eye aside and there I did behold
A Lady most excellent sitting in an Arbour
Which clothed was in a Robe of fine Gold,
Set about with Pearles and Stones manifold.

Then ask't I Father Tyme what she should be?
Lady Philosophy quoth, hemost excellent of beauty.

25. Then was I stricken with an ardent Audacity,
The place to approach to where I saw this sight,
I rose up to walke and the other went before me,
Against the Arbour, till I came forth right,
There we all three humbly as we might,
Bowed downe our selves to her with humility,
With greate admiration extolling her felicity.

26. She shewed her selfe both gentle and benigne,
Her gesture and Countenance gladdened our comming;
From her seate imperiall she did her selfe decline,
As a Lady loving perfect wisdome and Cunning,
Her goodly Poems, her Beauty was surmounting:
Her speech was decorate with such aureat sentence,
Far excellling famous Tullies Eloquence.

27. Then Father Tyme unto that Lady said,
Pleaseth it your highnes this poore Man to heare,
And him to assist with your most gracious aide:
Then she commanded him with me to draw neere
Son, said the Lady, be thou of good Cheere.
Admitted thou shalt be among greate and small
To be one of my Schollers principall.

28. Then she committed me to Raymund Lullie,
Commanding him my simplesnes to instruct,
And into her Secrets to induce me fully,
Into her privy Garden to be my conduct:
First into a Towre most beautifull construct,
Father Raymund me brought, and thence immediately
He led me into her Garden planted delicioufly.

29. Among the faire Trees one Tree in speciall,
Most vernant and pleasant appeared to my sight.
A name inscribed, The Tree Philosophicall,
Which to behold I had greate delight:
Then to Philosophy my troth I did plight
Her Majesty to serve; and to take greate paine,
The fruits of that Tree with Raymund to attaine.

30. Then

Bloomfields Blossoms.

30 Then Raymund shewed me Budds fiftene
 Springing of that Tree, and fruites fiftene moe,
 Of the which said Tree proceedes that we doe meane;
 That all Philosophers covet to attaine unto
 The blessed Stone; one in Number and no moe:
 Our greate Elixer most high of price,
 Our Azot, our Basaliske, our Adrop, and our Cocatrice.

31. This is our Antimony and our Red Lead
 Gloriously shining as Phæbus at midday,
 This is our Crowne of Glory and Diadem of our head;
 Whose beames resplendant shall never fade away;
 Who attaines this Treasure, never can decay:
 It is a Jewell so abundant and excellent,
 That one graine will endure ever to be permanent.

32. I leave thee heere now our seacrets to attaine,
 Looke that thou earnestly my Councell do ensue,
 There needes no blowing at the Cole, buisines nor paine:
 But at thyne owne ease here maist thou continue,
 Old Antient writers beleive which are true:
 And they shall thee learne to passe it to bring,
 Beware therefore of too many, and hold thee to one thing.

33. This one thing is nothing else but the Lyon greene,
 Which some Fooles imagine to be Vitrioll Romaine,
 It is not of that thing which Philosophers meane,
 For nothing to us any Corosive doth pertaine,
 Understand therefore or else thy hand refraine
 From this hard Scyence, least thou doe worke amisse,
 For I will tell thee truly; now marke what it is.

34. Greene of Collor our Lyon is not truly
 But vernant and greene evermore enduring
 In most bitternes of death, he is lively:
 In the fire burning he is evermore springing;
 Therefore the Salamander by the fire living,
 Some men doe him call, and some na other name,
 The Mettaline Menstruall, it is ever the same.

35. Some call it also a Substance exuberate,
Some call it Mercury of Mettalline essence,
Some Limus deserti from his body evacuate,
Some the Eagle flying from the North with violence:
Some call it a Toade for his greate vehemence.

But few or none at all doe name it in his kinde,
It is a privy Quintessence; keepe it well in minde.

36. This is not in sight, but resteth invisible;
Till it be forced out of Chaos darke,
Where he remaineth ever indivisible,
And yet in him is the foundation of our warke,
In our Lead it is, so that thou it marke.

Drive it out of him so out of all other,
I can tell thee no better if thou wert my Brother.

37. This Chaos darke the Mettalls I do call,
Because as in a Prison it resteth them within,
The seacret of Nature they keepe in thrall:
Which by a meane we do warily out-twyne,
The working whereof the easier to begin.

Lift up thy head and looke upon the heaven,
And I will learne thee truly to know the Planets seaven.

The second parte of the B O O K E.

S Aturne in all, to this Arte hath most respect,
Of whom we draw a Quintessence most excellent,
Unto our Magistery himselfe he doth connect,
United in quallitie, and also made equipolent
In strength and in vertue; who lists to be diligent,
Shall finde that we seeke an heavenly trefure
And a precious Jewell that ever shall endure.

Bloomfields Blossoms.

2. Jupiter the gentle, endewed with Azure blew,
 Examiner by Justice declareth true Judgement,
 Altering his Colours ever fresh and new,
 In his occult Nature to this Arte is convenient;
 To Philosophie is serviceable and also obedient,
 Joyned with Lunary after his owne kinde,
 Conteyneth this Arte and leaveth nothing behinde.

3. Mars that is Martiall in Citty and Towne,
 Fierce in Battaile, full of debate and strife,
 A noble Warriour, and famous of renowne,
 With fire and sword defendeth his owne lyfe,
 He staineth with blood and slaieth with a knife
 All spirits and bodyes, his Arts be so bold,
 The harts of all others he wyns to him with Gold.

4 The Sun most glorious shining with power potent,
 Above all other faire Planets seaven,
 Shedding his light to them all indifferent,
 With his glorious Beames and glistering shine,
 He lightneth the Earth and the Firmament of Heaven:
 Who can him dissolve and draw out his Quintessence,
 Unto all other Planets he shall give influence.

5. Lady Venus of love the faire Goddesse
 With her Son Cupid apperteyneth to this Arte,
 To the love of the Sun when she doth her addresse,
 With her Darts of love striketh him to the heart,
 Joyned to his seede of his substance she taketh parte:
 Her selfe she endueth with excellent Tissue,
 Her corrupt nature when she doth renew.

6. Mercury this seeing begineth to be fugitive,
 With his rodd of Inchantment litle doth he prevaile,
 Taken often Prisoner himselfe doth revive;
 Till he be snared with the Dragons Tayle
 Then doth he on a hard Coate of Male,
 Soudred together with the Sunn and Moone,
 Then is he Mastered and his Inchantment done.

The Moone that is called the lesser Lunary,
 Wife unto Phœbus, shining by Night,
 To others gives her Garments through her hearb Lunary,
 And from the North to the South shineth full bright,
 If you do for her looke she hydeth from your sight.
 But by faire intreaty she is won at the last,
 With Azot and Fire the whole Mastery thou hast.

8. The Mastery thou gettest not yet of these Planets seaven,
 But by a misty meaning knowne only unto us;
 Bring them first to Hell, and afterwards to Heaven:
 Betwixt lyfe and death then thou must discusse,
 Therefore I counsell thee that thou worke thus:

Dissolve and Seperate them, Sublime, Fix and Congeale,
 Then hast thou all: therefore doe as I thee tell.

9. Dissolve not with Corrosive nor use Separation
 With vehemence of Fire, as Multipliers doe use,
 Nor to the Glasse topp make thou Sublimacion;
 Such wayes inordinate Philosophers refuse,
 Their sayings follow, and wisely them peruse:

Then shalt thou not thy selfe lewdly delude
 In this goodly Science: Adiew, I thus conclude.

Incipit Theorica.

WEE intend now through grace divine
 In few words of Chaos for to write,
 Light from Darknes to cause forth to shine,
 Long before hidden as I shall recite,
 In every thing unknowne it is requisite

A Seacret to search out which is invisible,
 Materiall of our Maistry, a substance insensible:

2. Because I should not seeme to inclose
 Long hidden seacrets unto me committed,
 Of my Lord God. Therefore plainly of Chaos,
 My purpose shalbe thereof to be acquitted,
 For dangerous burthens are not easily lighted.
 In faith therfore I shall my selfe endeavour,
 Lightly to discharge me before God for ever.

3. Devotely rherfore unto thee O Lord I call,
 Send me thy Grace to make explication
 Of Chaos : For thou art opener of seacrets all :
 Which ever art ready to heare the Supplication
 Of thy meeke Servants, which with hearty humiliacion
 To thee do I apply : send me now thy grace
 Of thy Secrets, to write in due order tyme and place.

4. Chaos is no more to say, this is doubtles,
 (As Ovid writeth in his Metamorphosin)
 But a certaine rude substance, indigestaq; moles,
 Having divers Natures resting it within ,
 Which with the Contrary we may it out twyne.
 By Philosophers Arte, who so the feat doth know
 The foure Elements from Chaos to out draw.

5. This Chaos as all things hath Dimensions three,
 Which well considered shall follow the effect,
 That is Altitude, Latitude and Profunditie ,
 By which three all the Water is direct:
 Unto these Dimensions who hath no respect
 Shall never divide the Chaos in his kinde,
 But after his labour shall finde fraud in the end.

6. Chaos is to us the Vine-tree white and red,
Chaos is each Beast, Fish and Fowle in his kinde,
Chaos is the Oare, and Mine of Tinn and Lead,
 Of Gold and Silver that we ont finde,
 Iron and Copper which things do binde :
 And hold our sights and witts unto them bound,
 The seacrets hid in them which we ne understand.

7. Out of this misty Chaos, the Philosophers expert,
Doe a substance draw called a Quintessence.
Craftily deviding the foure Elements by Art :
With great Wisdome study and Diligence,
The which high Seacreat hath a divine Influence,
That is supernaturall of Fooles thought impossible,
An Oyle or such like called Incombustible.

8. The Maystery of this plainely to shew thee,
In forme heerafter I will it declare :
Setting forth here the Philosophers Tree,
Wherein now the whole Arte I shall Compare:
In this faire Tree Sixteene frutes are,
More precious then Gold in the Stomake to digest ,
Put thy hand thereto and take of the best.

9. And lest the fault imputed should be,
In me, or nothers that of this Arte doth write.
I set before thee the true figure of the Tree,
Wherein orderly the Arte I will recite ;
Understand my Sentence that thou maist worke right ,
Consider that I said that Chaos is all thing
That we begin of, the true way of working.

10. Put case thy Chaos be Animall, Vegetall or Minerall,
Let reason guide thee to worke after the same ;
If thou workest out of kinde, then loofest thou all :
For Nature with Nature rejoyceth and maketh true game,
Worke Animall with his kind and keepe thee out of blame;
Vegetable and Minerall in their Order due,
Then shalt thou be counted a Philosopher true.

11. When thou hast found what it is indeede,
Then knowest thou thy forme by reason it must be,
Search it wittily and draw from him his seede :
Then is there thy Altitude superficiall to see,
The Latitude shall appeare anon beleeve me.
When thou hast divided the Elements assunder,
Then the Profundity amongst them lyeth hid under.

12. Here is Materia Prima, and Corpus confusum,
 But not yet the Matter of which Philosophers doe treat,
 Yet this one conteyneth the other in Somme :
 For Forma, Materia and Corpus together are knit ;
 With the Menstruall Water first thou must them frett :
 That the Body first be finely Calciate,
 After dissolved and purely evacuate,

13. Then is it the true Mercury of the Philosophers,
 Unto the Maystery apt needfull and serviceable ;
 More of this thing I neede not much rehearse :
 For this is all the Secret most Commendable ;
Materia Prima it is called Multiplicable,
 The which by Arte must be exuberate,
 Then it is the Matter of which Mettalls were generate

14. Sulphur of Nature and not that which is common,
 Of Mettalls must be made ; if that thou wilt speede,
 Which will turne them to his kinde every each one ;
 His Tincture into them abroad he will spread ,
 It will fix Mercury common at thy neede.
 And make him apt true Tincture to receive.
 Worke as I have tould thee, and it shall not thee deceive.

15. Then of Sun and Moone make thou Oyle incombustible,
 With Mercury vegetable or else with Lunary,
 Inferate therewith and make thy Sulphur fluxible
 To abide thy Fire and also thy Mercury
 Be fixt and flowing, then hast thou wrought truly.
 And so hast thou made a Worke for the nonce,
 And gott a Stone more precious then all Stones.

16. Fix it up now with perfect Decoccion,
 And that with easy heate, and not vehement ,
 For feare of Induracion, and Vitrificacion,
 Least thou loose all and thy labour mispent :
 With Eight dayes and nights, this Stone is sufficient,
 The greate Elixir most high of price,
 Which Raymond called his Basiliske and Cocatrice.

17. To this excellent worke greate Cost neede not be,
Many Glasses or Potts about it to breake,
One Glasse, one Furnace and no more of necessity,
Who more doth spill, his witts are but weake,
All this is stilled in a Limbeck with a Beake.

As touching the Order of Distillation,
And with a blinde head on the same for Solucion.

18. In this thy Mercury taketh his true kinde,
In this he is brought to Multiplicacion;
In this made he his Sulphur, beare it well in minde,
Tincture he hath herein, and inceration,
In this the Stone is brought to his perfect Creacion;
In one Glasse, one Thing, one Fire and no mo,
This Worke is Compleate. Da gloriam Deo.

Incipit Practica.

WE have sufficiently declared the Theorique,
In words mysticall making declaracion.
Let us now proceede plainely with the Practique,
Largely of the Matter to make explanacion:
I will therefore that you marke well my Narracion,
As true Disciples my Doctrine to attend
My Testament, and last Will to you I do comend.

2. Be you Holy therefore, Sober, Honest, and Meeke;
Love God and your Neighbour, to the Poore bee not unkind;
Overcome Sathan, Gods Glory see you seeke,
My Son be gentle to all men, as a Friend;
Fatherles and Widdow have alwaies in thy minde,
Innocente love as Brothers, the wicked do eschew,
Let Flasehood and Flattery goe, least thou it rue.

3. Devoutely serve God, call daily for his grace,
 Worship him in Spirit with heart contrite and pure,
 In no wise let Sathan thy prayers deface :
 Looke thou be stedfast in faith and trust most sure,
 Lay up treasure in heaven which ever shall endure :
 In all Adversity be gentle in thy heart
 Against thy Foe ; so shalt thou him convert.

4. Most heartily therefore O Lord to thee I call,
 Beseeching thee to ayde me with thy heavenly grace,
 Lovingly thy Spirit upon me downe let fall ;
 Overshaddowing me that I at no tyme trespas,
 My Lord and my God grant me to purchase
 Full knowledge of thy Secrets, with thy mercy to wine,
 Intending thy truth this Practise I begin.

5. Listen thou my Son, and thine Eares incline.
 Delight have thou to learne this Practise sage and true,
 Attend my saying, and nore well this Discipline :
 These Rules following do as it doth ensue,
 This labour once begun thou must it continue
 Without tedious sluggardice, and slothfull wearines :
 So shalt thou thereby acquire to thee greate Riches.

6. In the name of God this Seacret to attaine,
 Joyne thow in one Body with a perfect unity:
 First the red Man, and the white Woman these twaine :
 One of the Mans substance, and of the Womans three,
 By Liquefaction joyned together must they be :
 The which Conjunction is called Diptative,
 That thus is made betweene Man and Wife:

7. Then after that they be one Body made,
 With the sharpe teeth of a Dragon finely,
 Bring them to Dust, the next must be had,
 The true proporcion of that Dust truly,
 In a true Ballance weighing them equally ;
 With three tymes as much of the fiery Dragon
 Mixing altogether, then hast thou well done.

8. Thy Substance thus together proportionate,
Put in a Bedd of Glasse with a bottome large and round,
There in due tyme to dye, and be regenerate
Into a new Nature, three Natures into one bound,
Then be thou glad that ever thou it found.

For this is the Jewell shall stand thee most in stead,
The Crowne of Glory, and Diadem of thy head.

9. When thou hast thus mixt thy Matter as is said,
Stop well the Glasse that the Dragon goe not out ;
For he is so subtil that if he be overlayd
With Fire unnaturall, I put thee out of doubt,
For to escape he will search all about ;

Therefore with gentle Fire looke that thou keepe it in ;
So shalt thou of him the whole Maystery winne.

10. The whole Maystery hereof duly to fulfill ,
Set thy Glasse and Matter upon thine Athenor ;
Our Furnace called the Philosophers Dunghill,
With a temperate heate working evermore ;
Night and day continually have Fuell in store,
Of Turfe, of Sawdust, or dry chopped segges ;
That the heate be equipolent to the Hen upon her Eggs.

11. Such heate continually loke thou doe not lack,
Forty dayes long for their perfect union
In them is made ; For first it turnes to Black,
This Collour betokens the right Putrefaction,
This is the begining of perfect Conception
Of your Infant into a new generation,
A most pretious Jewell for our Consolation.

12. Forty dayes more the Matter shall turne VWhite ,
And cleere as Pearles ; which is a declaration,
Of voiding away of his Cloudes darke night ;
This sheweth our Infants full organization,
Our White Elixir most cleere in his Creation.

From White into all Colours withouten faile,
Like to the Rainebow or the Peacocks Tayle.

13. So forth augment thy Fire continually,
 Under thy Matter easily they must be fedd,
 Till these Collours be gone use it wisely ;
 For soone after appeareth Yellow the inessenger of the Redd,
 When that is come then hast thou well sped,
 And hast brought forth a Stone of price,
 Which Raymund calls his Basiliske and Cocatrice.

14. Then 40 dayes to take his whole Fixation,
 Let it stand in heate most temperate,
 That in that tyme thou spare thy Fermentation,
 To increase him withall that he be not violate,
 Beware of Fire and Water, for that will it suffocate.
 Take one to a hundred of this Confection,
 And upon crude Mercury make thou Projection.

15. One of thy Stone I meane upon an hundred fold,
 After the first and second right Fermentation,
 Of Mercury crude, turneth it to fine Gold,
 As fine, as good, and as naturall in ponderation,
 The Stone is so vehement in his penetrations,
 Fixt and Fusible as the Gold-smiths Souder is,
 Worke as I have said, and thou canst not doe amisse.

16. Now give thanks to the blessed Trinity,
 For the benefit of this precious Stone,
 That with his grace hath so much lightned thee,
 Him for to know being three in one,
 Hold up thy hands to his heavenly Throne.
 To his Majesty let us sing Hosanna,
Altissimo Deo sit honor & gloria.

The Conclusion.

Our Magistery is Three, Two, and One :
The Animall, Vegetable and Minerall Stone.

First I say in the name of the holy Trinity,

Looke that thou ioyne in One, Persons Three.

The Fixt, the Variable and the Fugitive,

Till they together tast Death and Live.

The first is the Dragon fell,

That shall the other twaine both slay and quell :

The Sun and Moone shall loose their light,

And in mourning Sables they shall them dight,

Threescore dayes long or neer, thereabouts :

Then shall Phœbus appeare first out,

With strange Cellours in all the Firmament,

Then our Joy is coming and at hand present :

Then Orient Phœbus in his hemisphere

To us full gloriously shall appeare :

Thus who can worke wisely

Shall attaine unto our Maistery.

FINIS.

SIR EDWARD KELLE'S VV O R K E.

LL you that faine Philosophers would be,
And night and day in Geber's kitchin broyle,
Wasting the chipps of ancient Hermes Tree,
Weening to turne them to a pretious Oyle,
The more you worke the more you loose and
To you I say, how learned soever you be, (spoile.
Goe burne your Bookes and come and learne of me.

Although to my one Booke you have red tenn,
Thats not inough, for I have heard it said,
The greatest Clarkes ar not the wisest men,
A Lion once a silly Mouse obeyd,
In my good will so hold your selves appaid :
And though I write not halfe so sweete as Tully,
Yet shall you finde I trace the stepps of Lully.

Yt doth you good to thinke how your desire,
And selfe-conceit doth warrantize vaine hope,
You spare no cost, you want no coals for fier,
You know the vertues of the Elitrope,
You thinke your selves farr richer then the Pope.
What thinge hath being either high or low,
But their Materia prima you do know.

Elixir vita, and the precious Stone,
You know as well as how to make an Apple ;
If'te come to the workinge then let you alone,
You know the coullers black brown bay and dapple,
Controwle you once then you begin to fraple.
Swearing and saying, what a fellow is this?
Yet still you worke but ever worke amisse.

No no, my friends, it is not vauntinge words,
Nor mighty oaths that gaines that sacred skill;
It is obtained by grace and not by swords;
Nor by greate reading, nor by long sitting still,
Nor fond conceipt nor working all by will.
But as I said by grace it is obtained,
Seeke grace, therefore, let folly be refrained.

It is no costly thing I you assure,
That doth beget Magnesia in hir kind.
Yet is hir selfe by leprosie made pure:
Hir eyes be cleerer being first made blind:
And he that can Earths fastnes once unbind,
Shall quickly know that I the truth have tould,
Of sweete Magnesia, Wife to purest Gold.

Now what is meant by Man and Wife is this,
Agent and Patient, yet not two but one,
Even as was Eva, Adams Wife I wisse:
Flesh of his Flesh and Bone of his Bone,
Such is the Unionhood of our precious Stone.
As Adam slept untill his Wife was made,
Even so our Stone, ther can no more be said.

By this you se how thus it came to passe,
That first was Man, and Woman then of him:
Thus Adam heere as first and cheefest was,
And still remained a Man of perfect limme,
Then Man and Wife were joynd together trimme.
And each in love to other straight addressed them,
And did increase their kind when God had blessed them.

Even so the Man our Stone is said to sleepe,
Untill such time his Wife be fully wrought;
Then he awakes, and joyfully doth keepe
His new made Spouse, which he so dearely bought,
And when to such perfection they be brought,
Rejoyce the beauty of so faire a bride,
Whose worth is more then halfe the world beside.

I doubt as yet you hardly understand,
 What Man or Wife doth truly signifie,
 And yet I know you beare your selves in hand,
 That out of doubt it Sulpher is and Mercury,
 And so yt is, but not the common certainly:
 But Mercury essentiall is trewly the trew Wife,
 That killes her selfe to bring her Child to life.

For first and formost she receaves the Man,
 Her perefct love doth make her soone conceive:
 Then doth she strive with all the force she can,
 In spite of love, of life him to bereave,
 Which being done, then will she never leave,
 But labour kindly like a loving Wife,
 Untill againe she him have brought to life.

Then he againe her kindnesse to requite,
 Upon her head doth set a Crowne of glory,
 And to her praise he Poems doth indite,
 Whose Poems make each Poet write a story,
 And that she fl. whom then she is not sorry.
 For he by vertue of his loving Wife,
 Not only lives, but also giveth life.

But here I wish you rightly understand,
 How heere he makes his Concubine his Wife,
 Which if you know not, do not take in hand,
 This worke which unto fooles is nothing rife,
 And looke you make attonement where is strife.
 Then strip the Man into his shirt of Tishaw,
 And her out of her smock to ingender yssue.

To tell you troath he wanteth for no Wives
 In Land, or Sea, in Water, Air, or Fire,
 Without their deaths he waeth not their lives.
 Except they live he wants his cheif desire,
 He bindes them prentice to the rightest Dier,
 And when they once all Sorrowes have abidden,
 Then finde they Ioyes which from them first were hidden.

Turn back two leaves for

For then they finde the Joy of sweete encrease,
They bring forth Children beautifull to sight,
The which are able Prisoners to release;
And to the darkeſt Bodyes give true light,
Their heavenly Tincture is of ſuch great might.
Oh ! he that can but light on ſuch a treasure,
Who would not thinke his Joyes were out of meaſure ?

Now by this queſtion I ſhall quickly know
If you can tell which is his Wife indeede :
Is ſhe quick footed, faire faced yea or no,
Flying or fixed as you in Bookes do reade ?
Is ſhe to be fed or elſe doth ſhe feede ?
Wherein doth ſhe joy, where's her habitation ?
Heavenly or Earthly, or of a ſtrange nacion ?

What is ſhe poore ? or is ſhe of any wealch ?
Bravely of her attyre, or meane in her apparrell ?
Or is ſhe ſick ? or is ſhe in perfect health ?
Mild of her Nature ? or is ſhe given to quarrell ?
Is ſhe a Glutton ? or loves ſhe the Barrell ?
If any one of theſe you name her for to be,
You know not his Wife, nor never did her ſee.

And that will I prove to you by good reaſon,
That truly noe one of all theſe is ſhe,
This is a queſtion to you that is reaſon :
And yet ſome parte of them all ſhe muſt be,
Why then, ſome parte is not all you may ſee.
Therefore the true Wife which I doe meane,
Of all theſe Contraries is the Meane betweene.

As Meale and Water joyned both together,
Is neither Meale nor Water now but Dow ;
Which being baked, is Dow nor Water neither :
Nor any more will each from other goe,
The meane betweene is Wife, our Wife even ſo :
And in this hidden point our ſeacret lyes,
It is enough, few words content the wiſe.

Now by this simile heere I do reveale,
 A mighty Seacret if you marke it well;
 Call Mercury Water, imagine Sulphur Meale,
 What Meale I meane I hope the wise can tell:
 Bake them by craft, make them together dwell,
 And in your working make not too much hast,
 For Wife she is not while she is in Paste.

This lesson learn'd now give me leave to play,
 I shall the fitter be to learne another,
 My minde is turn'd cleane cam another way.
 I doe not love sweete secret thoughts to smother,
 It is a Child you know that makes a Mother.
 Sith so it is then must we have a Childe,
 Or else of Motherhood we are beguild.

What will you say if I a wonder tell you,
 And prove the Mother is Child and Mother too?
 Do you not thinke I goe about to sell you
 A bargaine in sport, as some are wont to do?
 Ist possible the Mother, to weare her Infants shoe?
 In faith it is in our Philosophy,
 As I will prove by reason by and by.

Ripley doth bid you take it for no scorne,
 With patience to attend the true Conjunction,
 For saith he in the Aire our Child is borne,
 There he receiveth the holy Unction,
 Also with it a heavenly function.
 For after death reviv'd againe to lyfe,
 This all in all both Husband Child and Wife.

Whilst all is Earth Conception it is termed,
 And Putrefaction tyme of lying in,
 Perfect Conjunction (by artes-men is affirm'd)
 The womans Childing where doth all Ioy begⁿ
 Who knowes not this, his witts are very thin.
 When she is strong and shineth faire and bright,
 She's tearm'd the VVife most beautifull to sight.

Loe thus you see that you are not beguil'd ;
 For if you marke it I have proved by Reason ,
 How both is one the Mother and the Child ,
 Conception, Breeding, Childing, every season :
 I have declared to you without all Treason,
 Or any false ambiguous word at all;
 And hewn you worke then finde it true you shall.

This is that Mercury essentiall truly,
 Which is the principall of the Stone materiall,
 And not those crude Amalgames began newly ;
 These are but Mercuries superficiall,
 This is that Menstrue of perfect tincturiall :
 This is most truly that One thing,
 Out of the which all profit must springe.

If this content you not, abide displeas'd for me,
 For I have done. If Reason take no place,
 What can be said, but that there doubts will be,
 Doe what one can, where folly wins the race.
 Let it suffice, this is the perfect Base,
 Which is the Stone that must dissolved be.
 How that is done I will declare to thee.

This is the Stone that Ripley bids you take,
 (For untill thus it be it is no Stone)
 Be rul'd by me, my counsell not forsake,
 And he commands, Let Crudities alone,
 If thou have grace to keep thee free from moan.
 Then stick to this, let Phansey not o'resway thee,
 Let Reason rule, for Phansey will betray thee.

Take thou this Stone, this Wife, this Child, this All,
 Which will be Gummous, crumbling, silken, soft :
 Upon a Glasse or Porphyre beat it small,
 And as you grinde, with Mercury feede it oft,
 But not so much that Mercury swim aloft,
 But equall parts, nip up their seed to save;
 Then each in other are buried within their grave.

When thus and there you have it as is said,
 Worke in all points as Nature wrought at first;
 For Blacknes had thow needest not be afraid,
 It wilbe White, then art thou past the worst,
 Except thou breake thy Glasse and beaccurst;
 But if through Blacknes thou to Whitenes march,
 Then will it be both White and soft as Starch.

This very place is cal'd by many names,
 As Imbibition, Feeding, Sublimation,
Clyming high Mountaines, also Childrens Games;
 And rightly it is termed Exaltation,
 When all is nothing else but Circulation
 Of the foure Elements whatsoere fooles clatter,
 Which is done by heate upon Forme and Matter.

Earth is the lowest Element of All
 Which Black, is exalted into Water,
 Then no more Earth but Water wee it call;
 Although it seeme a black Earthy matter,
 And in black dust all about will scatter,
 Yet when soe high as to Water it hath clym'd,
 Then is it truly said to be Sublym'd

When this black Masse againe is become White,
 Both in and out like snow and shining faire,
 Then this Child, this Wife, this Heaven so bright,
 This Water Earth sublimed into Aire,
 When there it is it further will prepare
 It selfe into the Element of Fire,
 Then give God thanks for granting thy desire.

This Black, this White, doe we call Seperation,
 Which is not manuell but Elementall;
 It is no crude Mercuriall Sublimation,
 But Natures true worke consubstantiall,
 The White is called Conjunction naturall,
 Secret and perfect Conjunction not grosse;
 Which bringeth profit all other losse.

When thrice yee have turned this Wheele about,
Feeding and working it as I have said,
Then will it flow like Wax without doubt :
Giving a Tincture that will not vade.
Abiding all tryalls that can be made.
If wisely Project you can and keepe free,
Both profit and credit to you it wilbe.

Your Medicine fixed and perfectly flowing,
White you must thinke will Whitenes increase,
So Red begets Red as Seede in the sowing
Begetteth his like or as kinde doth in Beasse,
And fire must be the true maker of peace :
For white or red Ferment your Medicine augmenteth,
And perfectly tincketh and soone it relenteth.

That is to say, your Medicine ended,
If White melt downe Silver and thereon Project it,
If Red melt downe Sol, for so it is intended ;
Like unto like in no wise reject it,
And out of the purest looke you elect it.
Medicen one parte upon Ferment ten,
That One on one Thousand of Jupiter then.

Your Jupiter standing red hot on the fyre,
So soone as your Medicine upon him is cast,
Presently standeth so hard as a Wyre,
For then he is fixed and melteth by blast,
And of all your working this is the last.
Then let it by Test or strong water be tryde,
The best Gold or Silver no better shall bide.

Mercury crude in a Crucible heated,
Presently hardeneth lik Silver anealed ;
And in the high Throwne of Luna is seated,
Silver or Gold as Medicine hath sealed :
And thus our greate Secret I have reveled.
Which divers have scene, and my selfe have wrought,
And dearely I prize it, yet give it for nought.

SIR ED: KELLEY
 CONCERNING
the Philosophers Stone written to his especiall good Freind, G. S. Gent.

THe heavenly Cope hath in him Natures fower,
 Two hidden; but the rest to sight appeare:
 Wherein the Spermes of all the Bodies lower;
 Most secrett are, yett spring forth once a yeare,
 And as the Earth with Water, Authors are,
 So of his parte is Drines end of care.

No Flood soe greate as that which floweth still,
 Nothing more fixt than Earth digested thrise:
 No Winde so fresh as when it serveth will;
 No Profit more, then keepe in, and be wise,
 No better happ, then drie up Aire to dust,
 For then thou maist leave of, and sleepe thy lust.

Yett will I warne thee least thou chaunce to faile,
 Sublyme thine Earth with stinkeing Water erst,
 Then in a place where Phæbus onely tayle
 Is seene att midday, see thou mingle best:
 For nothing shineth that doth want his light,
 Nor doubleth beames, unlesse it first be bright.

Let

Lett no man leade, unlesse he know the way
That wise men teach, or Adrop leadeth in,
Whereof the first is large and easiest pray;
The other hard, and meane but to begin.

For surely these and no one more is found,
Wherein Appollo will his harp-strings sound.

Example learne of GOD that plaste the Skyes,
Reflecting vertues from and t'every poynt,
In which the mover wherein all things lyes,
Doth hold the vertues all of every Joynt:

And therefore Essence first may well be said,
Conteining all and yett himselfe a Maid.

Remember also how the Gods began,
And by Discent who was to each the Syre,
Then learne their Lives and Kingdomes if you can,
Their Manners eke, with all their whole Attire;
Which if thou doe, and know to what effect;
The learned Sopheis will thee not reject,

If this my Doctrine bend not with thy brayne,
Then say I nothing though I said too much:
Of truth tis good will moved me, not gaine,
To write these lynes: yett write I not to such
As catch at Crabs, when better fruits appeare,
And want to chuse at fittest time of yeare.

Thou maist (my Freind) say, what is this for lore?
I answere, such as auncient Phyficke taught:
And though thou read a thousand Bookes before,
Yett in respect of this, they teach thee Naught:
Thou mayst likewise be blind, and call me Foole
Yett shall these Rules for ever praise their Schoole.

TESTAMENTUM JOHANNIS DEE PHILOSOPHI SUMMI
ad Johannem Gwynn, transmissum 1568.

THis Letter third and last I minde to make,
 At your request for very vertues sake ;
 Your written panges, and methods set aside,
 From that I byd, looke that you never slide.
 Cut that in Three, which Nature hath made One,
 Then strengthen hyt, even by it self alone,
 Wherewith then Cutte the poudred Sonne in twayne,
 By length of tyme, and heale the woonde againe.
 The self same Sunne twys yet more, ye must wounde,
 Still with new Knives, of the same kinde, and ground ;
 Our Monas trewe thus use by natures Law,
 Both binde and lewse, only with rype and rawe,
 And ay thanke God who only is our Guyde,
 All is ynugh, no more then at this Tyde.

THOMAS ROBINSONUS

DE LAPIDE PHILOSOPHORUM.

THe Heavens, the Earth, and all that in them is,
 Were in six Dayes perfected from Abisse:
 From One sprung foure; from foure a second One;
 This last a Gritt; that first the Corner Stone.
 Without the First the Last may not be had;
 Yet to the First the Last is too too bad.
 When from the Earth the Heavens were seperated,
 Were not the Heavens with Earth first cohobated?
 And when the Heavens, and Earth and all were not;
 Were onely Heavens create; and Earth forgott?
 No: Heavens, and Earth sprung all from one at first:
 Then who can say or Heavens, or Earth is worst?
 Is not the Earth the Mother of them all?
 And what the Heavens, but Earths essential?
 Although they have in Heaven no Earthly residence,
 Yet in the Earth doth rest their Heavenly influence:
 Were not the Earth, what were the other Three?
 Were not the Heavens, what on the Earth could be?
 Thus as they came, so shall they passe together;
 But unto Man not knowne from whence, or whither.
 And for the tyme of Earths Heaven purifying,
 Six thousand yeares they live, and have their dying:
 Then all shall rest eternall and divine,
 And by the Beauty of the Godhead shine.

I sweare there is noe other truth but this
 Of that great Stone; which many seeke and misse.

FINIS.

EXPERIENCE

AND

PHILOSOPHY.

HAve you not heard yee Princes great, you Lords & Ladies all,
Of the mishap and heavy chaunce that now of late did fall?
A wofull Tale to tell

VVho could expresse it well :

Oh that some learned Poet had byne

With me, to se that I have sene :

Or else some other standing by,

That well could write a Tragidy

Of lasting fame and memory.

For yet not since this VVorld began,

Such cry, such clamour as was than

Heard never any earthly Man.

Experience that Princeesse greate, I saw her in her Throne
Of glory, where her Majesty delightes to sitt upon ;

And on her wayting by

A blessed Company

Of Virgins pure, that as I gesse,

VVere Children to that great Goddesse :

Their Princely port, their Comly grace,

Their pierles featur'd hands and face

Did shew them of most Noble race :

But of their prudent skill to tell,

In Artes where in they did excell,

No earthly Tongue can do it well.

And

And as I gazed thus upon that strange and dreadfull sight,
 I saw how that Experience did teach these Ladies right,
 The seven Artes Divine,
 With desent discipline,
 By divers rules and orders grave,
 As she thought good for them to have.
 But for to see how diligent
 And buisily their time they spent
 To learne those Artes most excellent,
 The endlesse travells that they tooke
 From place to place, from booke to booke,
 Amazed me on them to looke.

For some in divers Languages did reason and dispute,
 And other some did sing and play on Organ, Harpe and Flute ;
 And some with Compasse found
 All Measures square and round :
 And some by Cyphering could tell
 Infinite Summes and Numbers well :
 And some with Eloquence began
 As Poets and Orators to scan
 The Causes betweene Man and Man :
 And some upon the Stars did gaze,
 And other some sat in a Maze,
 To judge of Seacrets that there was.

Soe that nothing created was under the Firmament,
 That hath a Being or Life by any Element,
 No Simple nor Compound
 In all the World is found
 Under the Sky, or Clouds that fly,
 But they sought out the privity :
 This Rocky Earth, this heavy Masse,
 This Articke Virgin, this let not passe
 To seeke the thing that therein was :
 But put themselves in presse to creepe
 Into the Center of the Deepe,
 Where sundry Soules and Spirits doe sleepe.

This thing Experience gan prudently to debate, (state.
 VVith cheerefull looke and voyce full mylde, as seemed to her,
 And soone decreed she
 Of her benignity :

Not for their sundry paines I take,
 But only for her Glory sake,
 That all these Ladies in a row
 Should further of her Secrets know,
 That from her Majesty did grow ;
 VVherewith to Councell called shee
 A Lady grave of greate degree,
 That named was Philosophy.

And after their discourse and talke, that Lady fell downe flatt
 On hands & knees before the Queene in heaven where she satt.
 And looking upon her face
 Did say unto her grace :

Blessed be thou Experience,
 Full mighty is thy Influence ;
 Thy wondrous workes records full well
 In wordell of wordels where thou doest dwell,
 In Earth, in Heaven, and in Hell ;
 That thou art now the very same,
 That of Nothing All things did frame,
 VVherefore now blessed be thy Name.

Wherewith the Heavens opened, and fiery flames did fall
 Downe from the Throne of endles Joy and seate imperiall,
 Where Angels infinite

Like glistering Starrs did sitt :
 So pure and simple was the Light,
 As all the World had burnt bright ;
 The flames and floods began to roare,
 And did present their hidden store,
 Of Spirits that sing for evermore,
 All glory and magnificence,
 All humble thanks and reverence
 Be given to EXPERIENCE.

Then silence fell upon the face of Heaven Christalline
 Where all the Powers mustered full ready to encline ;
 To that most Sapient,
 The high Omnipotent :
 That said be it, and it was don,
 Our Earth, our Heaven were begun ;
 I am said it the most of might,
 In worde in lyfe and eke in light.
 I am Mercy and Judgment right,
 The Depth is myne so is the Hight :
 The Cold, the Hot, the Moyst, the Dry,
 Where All in All is there am I.

What thing can tell when I began, or when I make an end?
 Wherewith I wrought, and what I mought, or what I did intende
 To doe when I had done
 The worke I had begun.
 For when my Being was alone
One thing I made when there was none,
 A Masse confused darkely clad
 That in it selfe all Nature had
 To form and shape the good and bad ;
 And then as Tyme began to fall,
 It pleased me the same to call
 The first Matter, Mother of all.

And from that Lumpe divided I foure sundry Elements ;
 Whom I commanded for to raigne in divers Regiments:
 In Kinde they did agree,
 But not in Quality.
 Whose simple Substance I did take,
 My seate invisible to make :
 And of the Qualites compound,
 I made the Starry Sky so round
 VVith living Bodyes on the ground ;
 And blessed them infinitely,
 VVith lyfe and long prosperity,
 And bad them grow and Multiply.

Respecting these divided things so created by me,
 Their light and lively spreading forth of them in their degree;
 Retourning to the Masse,
 VVhere there begining was,
 And saw the refuse of the same,
 How Voyd and Empty it became,
 All darke, and nothing to remaine,
 I put with wrath and greate disdain,
 My only Curse there for to raygae;
 For I the Author of all Light
 Did banish Darknes from my sight,
 And blessed all things that shined bright,

So that I mard nothing I made, for that I made is still,
 And so shalbe unto the end, only to worke my will:
 One thing was first imployd,
 And shall not be destroid,
 It compasseth the VVorld so round,
 A Matter easy to be found:
 And yet most hardest to come by:
 A Secret of Secrets pardye,
 That is most vile and least set by,
 And it my Love and my Darling,
 Conceived with all living thing,
 And travells to the VVorlds ending.

What neede have I of mans Devise of Peny or of Pound,
 Of Gold or Silver, Lead or Tynn, or Copper in the ground,
 Iron or Silver Quick,
 Whereat the blind do prick;
 Of Cankered Corosives that rust,
 By Salts and sulphurs all to dust;
 Seeke out therefore my darling deare;
 For unto me it is most neere,
 My spouse my Love and my Compeare:
 And unto it looke thou direct
 My seaven Children long elect,
 That all things else they might reject.

A Child begetting his owne Father, and bearing his Mother,
Killing himselfe to give lyfe, and light to all other:

Is yt that I do meane,
Most myld and most extreame.

Did not the Word that dwelt in me

Take forme and walked visibly;

And did not I then dwell in it,

That dwelt in me for to unite

Three powers in one seate to sit?

And then Experience did say

Now knowest thou all, heere lyes the Key,

And then shee vanisht cleane away.

There with arose Phylosophy as one filled with grace,

Whose looks did shew that shee had byne in some Heavenly place:

For oft shee wipt her Eyes,

And oft shee bowd her knees.

And oft shee kist the Steps with dread,

VVhereon Experience did tread;

And oft shee cast her Head on high

And oft full low shee cast her Eye

Experience for to espy:

But when shee saw that shee was gon,

And that her selfe was left alone:

I never hread thing make such mone.

FINIS.

THE MAGISTRY.

Through want of Skill and Reasons light
Men stumble at Noone day ;
 Whilst buisily our Stone they seeke,
 That lyeth in the way.

Who thus do seeke they know not what
 Is't likely they should finde ?
 Or hitt the Marke whereat they ayme :
 Better then can the Blinde ?

No, Hermes Sonns for Wisdome aske
 Your footesteps shee'le direct :
 Shee'le Natures way and secret Cave
 And Tree of lyfe detect.

Son and Moone in Hermes vessell
 Learne how the Collours shew ,
 The nature of the Elements ,
 And how the Daisies grow.

Greate Python how Appello slew,
Cadmus his hollow-Oake :
 His new-rais'd-army, and Iason how
 The Fiery Steeres did yoke.

The Eagle which aloft doth fly
 See that thou bring to ground ;
 And give unto the Snake some wings,
 Which in the Earth is found.

Then

Then in one Roome sure binde them both,
To fight till they be dead;
And that a Princee of Kingdomes three
Of both them shalbe bred.

Which from the Cradle to his Crowne,
Is fed with his owne blood;
And though to some it seemeth strange,
He hath no other Foode.

Into his Virgin-Mothers wombe,
Again he enter must;
Soe shall the King by his new-byrth,
Be ten times stronger just.

And able is his foes to foile,
The dead he will revive:
Oh happy man that understands
This Medicen to atchive!

Hec opus exigium nobis fert ire per altum.

A N O N Y M I:

OR,

SEVERALL WORKES OF unknowne Authors.

Ow I schall her be gynne,
To teche the a Conclusion;
In the name of the Trenete
Send us grace that well hit be;
Now take two Onces as mych of anoder,
And dysolve on ther with the toder,

Y tel the trowthe as my broder,
Put in to a Glas wyth owitten oder:
Than take three Onces of the bytter,
And meng hym with the swetter;
And put them than into a Glas,
Even right as the toder was:
Than take a unc of the best,
And do with hym as thou didst erst,
In a Glas than thou him put,
And loke thy mowth be wel I shut;
Now thow hast here Glasses thre,
Even lyke unto the Trynete,
Than hem stop these everychon,
Even a sute as thow hast on:
About thy Glasses a wal thow make,
Last the wynde ham al to crake,

Than

Than thy Glassys now all I thre;
 With yn that grave they schal be;
 Now thys I fed with moysty hete,
 To make that Glassys swynke and swete,
 Then let hem stonde thus wekys thre;
 And wel the beter they schal be.
 Than put hem all now into on,
 The wich ys lyke than be a stone;
 Than let hem stonde so theryn,
 Whan thou hast made thy Conjunction:
 Tyl sevyn dayes be al I don,
 Much the better woll be thy Ston;
 Than upon thy Glas thow sett
 A fayre heed and wel I mette,
 Draw up thy water with esy fyre,
 Within a Rotunde good and cler,
 Tyl thi Mater wol styl no mer,
 Than set thow hem in dry Fyr,
 Than se thow styl with reasonabyl hete,
 Tyl thy Mater wol no more lete.
 Whan he ys ther both good and dry,
 Ful fayne wolde he than be moysty;
 Than wey that Stone within the Glas,
 And put hym hys Lecur has it was;
 Now whan thys fryst drawte ys don,
 Thow must Embybe with good proporciun:
 Now looke thow wel what ys hys whyght,
 And wyth the fourth part than hym dyght,
 And evermore wyth partys fowr,
 Now tyl he be of Whyte colowr;
 And thus loke thow make good wache,
 Tyl the Body thy Spirit can cache;
 And also thy Sowle so must he,
 Than understand thow hast thre.

Now schyt thy Glas as hyt was er,
 And worke hyt forthe on thys maner;
 Whan tho thre to gedur ben knyte,
 With moch joy than thow mayst sitte.
 For than art thou ricchar than the King,
 But he have the same thyng.
 Thus is alle thy Medcyn wroght,
 Evyn after thin owne thocht;
 How thys Medcyn thow schalt encres,
 And make hyt mor tyll thow lyst sees;
 The trowth I schall now the certesie,
 How thow schalt hyt thus Multiply:
 Loke as thow did thy Werke befor,
 Encres hit forth with mor and mor:
 As thow did at the begynnyng,
 So continu forth to the endyng:
 Thus for soth infynyte
 Thou mayst this craft forth Multiply:
 Lyke as a man hath lytil Fyr,
 And mor to make ys hys desyr;
 He be hovyth this ys no nay,
 More Wode or Cole ther to lay:
 And thus he may hys Fyr encres,
 That he schall never be syrcles.
 One the same wise thou understande,
 Ever thy Medcyn must be growande;
 And whan the lyst Projecciun make,
 Loke to this lesson good tent thou take;
 Whan thy Medcyn is very parfit,
 Thow schalt hym cast on hys lyke;
 Als evyn than as thow can gese,
 On part on Ten looke thow not messe,
 The trowth yf thow wil wete,
 Than ys thy Lexer evyn complete;

And than of that On part thou take,
 The trew Projeccion thus schalt thou make;
 Cast that on Ten of Tyn or Leede,
 Or Coper or Mercury ther in that steede,
 Into fine Lun hit schal be broght,
 Or into Sol evyn after thi thocht:
 After that thy Lexer ys,
 Be hit White or Rede I wys,
 If thou hit cast on Iren also,
 If it schal be Lun or Sol ther to:
 Thys ar the Secrets of Phylosophie,
 I counsel the keepe hit secretlye;
 And serve thy God both nyght and day,
 The better thou shalt speede, thys ys no nay.
 Now I have taught the how thou schalt do,
 The blys of hevyn God bryng hus to.

HER ys an Erbe men calls Lunayrie,
 I blesset mowte hys maker bee.
Asterion he ys, I callet alle so,
 And other namys many and mo ;
 He ys an Erbe of grete myght,
 Of Sol the Sunn he taketh hys lyght,
 He ys the Fader, to Croppe and Rote ;
 Wyth fragrant Flowris that ben sote,
 Flowrys to bere in that stede,
 Swm ben Whyte, and swm ben Red :
 Hys Lewys grwyth, both day and nyght,
 Lyke to the Ferment that ys so bright :
 I shall declare, thys Erbe so lyght,
 To many a man hyt ys a fayre seyght ;
 Frist at the Rote I wolle be gynne,
 That cawsyth alle thing for to sprynge ;

A growyth a pon a Mowntayne brym,
 Where Febis hath grete dominacion :
 The Sune by day, the Mone by nyght,
 That maketh hym both fayre and bryght,
 The Rote growyth on stonns clere,
 Whyte and Rede, that ys so peyre :
 The Rote ys blacke, the Stalke ys red ;
 The wyche schall ther never be dede,
 The Lewis ben rownd, as a Nowbel son,
 And wexsyth and wanyth as the Mon :
 In the meddes a marke the brede of a peni,
 Lo thys is lyke to owre sweght Lunayre :
 Hys Flowrys schynith, fayre and cler,
 In alle the Worlde thaye have non pere,
 He ys not fownde in no maner wyse,
 But of a Schepeherd in Godis servyse :
 The good Schepeherd that I her mene,
 Ys he that keepeth hys Sowle clene :
 Hys Flowrys ben gret and sum ben small,
 Lyke to hem that growyth in Dale ;
 With many a vertu both fayre and cler,
 As ther ben dayes in alle the yere,
 Fro fallying Ewel and alle Sekeneys,
 From Sorowe he brengyth man to Bles ;
 Unto that blese that wee maye come,
 Byth the help of Marys Sonne :
 And of hys Moder that ys so fre,
 Amen good Lord for cherite.

The which was then saw daye of lighte howe best state
 The Heaven wate longe downe to beleeue :

By an Angell borne gonde and stalle
 The which wate then Christis alle

Schal yow tel wyth hert mode,
 Of thre Kynggys that ben so goude,
 And how thaye cam to God almyght,
 The wiche was ther a sweet syght.

I figure now howr beffet Stone,
 Fro Heven wase sende downe to Solomon :

By an Angele bothe goude and styлле,
 The wiche wase than Christis wylle.

The present of hem in Bedlem than,
To Cryft brwght Aurum Tus & Myrham.

Owre Sol and Sulphir wyth his Mercuri,
Both Bodi and Soule wyth oure Luheyre.

Aurum betokeneth heer, owre Bodi than,
The wych was brwght to God and Man.

And Tus allefo owre Soule of lyfe,
Wyth Myrham owre Mercurye that ys hys Wyfe.

Here be the thre namys fayre and good
And alle thaye ben but one in mode.

Lyke as the Trenite ys but on,
Ryght so conclude the Phyllosophers Stone.

Thow mayst a se her now in syght,
Off owre Stone figuriet a right.

How sende he wase out of Heven,
By an Angele wyth mylde Stefyn!

And by hys fygure thow mayst se
That hyt ys lyke to personis Thre.

To Fader and Sonne and holi Gost,
The wych was and ys of mytis most;

Into hys blyse now come wee,
Amen goud Lord for cheyte.

Shew you here a short Conclusion;
To understand it if ye have grace,
Wrighten without any delusion;
Comprehended in a litle space.

All that in this Booke wrighten is,
In this place comprehended is,

How Nature worketh in her kinde,
Keepe well this Lesson in your minde:

I have declared micle thing,
If you have grace to keepe in minde,

How that our Principle is One thing,
More in Number and One in kinde;

For there ben things Seven
That in a Principle doe dwell,

Most precious under Heaven,
I have so sworne I may not tell.

In this Booke I shew to you in wrighting,
As my Bretheren doe each one,

A similitude of every like thing,
Of the which we make our Stone.

Our Stone is made of one simple thing,
That in him hath both Soule and Lyfe,

He is Two and One in kinde,
Married together as Man and Wife:

Our Sulphur is our Masculine,
Our Mercury is our Femenine,

Our Earth is our Water cleere;
Our Sulphur also is our Fier,

And as Earth is in our Water cleare,
Soe is Aer in our Fier.

Now have yee Elements foure of might,
And yet there appereth but two in sight;

Water and Earth ye may well see,
Fier and Aer be in them as quality:

Thys Scyence maie not be taught to every one,
 He were acurst that so schould done :
 How schould ye have Servants than ?
 Than non for other would ought done,
 To tyl the Lande or drive the Plough,
 For ever ech man would be proud enough ;
 Lerned and leude would put them in Presse,
 And in their workes be full busie,
 But yet they have but little increse,
 The writings to them is so misty.
 It is full hard this Scyence to finde,
 For Fooles which labour against kinde ;
 This Science I pray you to conceale,
 Or else with it do not you meale,
 For and ye canot in it prevaile,
 Of much sorrow then may you tell :
 By suddain mooving of Elements Nature may be letted,
 And wher lacks Decoction no perfection may be,
 For some Body with leprosy is infected ;
 Raw watery humors cause superfluity :
 Therefore the Philosopher in his reason hath contrived
 A perfect Medicine, for bodyes that be sick,
 Of all infirmetyes to be releved,
 This heleth Nature and prolongeth lyfecak ;
 This Medicine of Elements being perfectly wrought,
 Receypts of the Potecary we neede not to buy,
 Their Druggs and Dragms we set at nought,
 With quid pro quo they make many a ly.
 Our Aurum potabile Nature will increase,
 Of Philosophers Gold if it be perfectly wrought,
 The Phisitians with Minerall puteth him in prese :
 Lirle it availeth or else right nought.
 This Scyence shall ye finde in the old boke of Turb ;
 How perfectly this Medicine Philosophers have wrought,

Rosary with him also doth record,
 More then four Elements we occupie nought ;
 Comune Mercury and Gold we none occupie,
 Till we perfectly have made our Stone,
 Then with them two our Medicine we Multiply,
 Other receipts of the Potecary truly we have none.
 A hundred Ounces of Saturne ye may well take ;
 Seeth them on the fire and melt him in a mould,
 A Projection with your Medicin upon hem make,
 And anon yee shall alter him into fine Gold ;
 One Ounce upon a hundred Ounces is sufficient,
 And so it is on a thousand Ounces perfectly wrought,
 Without dissolucion and Subtrillant ;
 Encreasing of our Medicine els have we nought.
 Ioy eternall and everlasting blisse,
 Be to Almyghty God that never schal miss.

In some Copies I found these following Verses set before this Worke.

EArth out of Earth clensted pure,
 By Earth of him selfe through his nature,
 Rectified by his Milke who can it tye,
 And afterward united with Water of lyfe truly :
 A Dragon lying in his deepe denne,
 Rotting in Water to Putrefie then :
 Leprouse huge and terrible in sight,
 By bathing and balning the Dragon cometh to light ;
 Evermor drowned in the bottome of his Well,
 Tyl all his Leprousie will no longer dwell,
 In his owne Nature he altereth cleane
 Into a pure substance, ye wat what I meane.
I shew you here a short Conclusion, &c.

Hy art thou so Poore and I so Rich,
 Aboundance of Trefure in me thow maist
 In all the World I am nothing so liche;
 As Man that is so progenitous to my kynde,
 The Ryche man on the Poore hath no pity,
 In me therefore have thow affiance,
 It is oft tymes seene in Towne and Cittie :
 He is evyll at ease that hath no Craft nor Scyence.
 The Ryche men of the Poore now have greate dispight,
 That they should wyth thyr cunyng any good thing wyn;
 And to give to the Poore almes they have no delight,
 Lytle is the Charity that is them within,
 And Ensamble of Dives as the Scripture can tell,
 Poore Lazerus at his Gate for default dyed;
 Had he given him Almes he had not gon to hell,
 Now for to repent him truly it is too late:
 Man thou hast no goods but God doth them send,
 Depart with thy Brother as God doth thee Comand.
 Thy lyfe that wyll the better amend,
 Death will with thee make a suddaine hand,
 Thy worldly goods thow schalt forsaken :
 Give every Beast againe his due,
 And than schall thy body be full naked :
 Death on the will nothing rue.

Why so far and I so neare ?
 Hast thou no grace Man me to meete,
 So ofryn as I to the do appeare;
 And yet of me thou takest no keepe,
 In common Mercury thou doest me secke :
 In Alkali and in Alembroke,
 In common Sulphur and Arsenick eke,
 Which makes many a man to dote.
 Common Mercury is not good,
 It bringeth many a man to care;

It makes his Haire grow through his hood,
 And his Purse both thin and bare.
 Mercury and I are of allye,
 But she with me may not compare;
 In nature she is both cold and dry,
 Therefore I counsell thee to beware:
 Many a man she makes full bare,
 Because she lacks humidity,
 On her to spend they would spare,
 She brings many a man to poverty.
 I am she which wise men seeke,
 Mercury, which is most of might;
 Hot and moyst, light and weake,
 Of the Elements I am full right,
 Water, Earth, Aire and Fire,
 Quality, and Quantity, you can never have your desire,
 Without Concoction perfectly,
 Great riches in us be,
 Who hath grace us for to know,
 By vertue of her humidity,
 In the Fire our Stone doth grow.

Thou needy man, where is thy minde?

I counsell thee this lesson leare:

Our Mercury is but of one thing,

In our Vessell thin and cleere.

Common Mercury in him is none,

Neither Gold nor Silver in him none is;

Of Mettalls we make not our Stone,

By proportion more or lesse,

All manner of Mettalls we deny,

Untill the time our Stone be wrought,

All other Receipts we desie

That of the Potecaryes be bought,

With all Spices, save onely Mercury.

Gould with him stands us in steed,
Our Medicine for to Multiplie,
After our Phisicks Stone be Red.

A true Lesson I have thee tought,
Pray for me and forget it nought:
Many Bookes mayst thou see,
That is not writ so openly.
And as I am true Christian man,
A truer Booke findest thou none;
And thou wilt of this Science learne
In riches thou shalt have no peare;
He that made this Booke hath it well preved,
The better therefore he may be beleived;
Therefoe I pray you for charity,
To keepe this Booke very secretly.
If any man this Science of you will crave,
Know he be Sapient that the Coppy shall have
I made it not for every man,
Neither for them that litle good can,
But for me and for my Brother,
Such as have Reason and no other;
Keepe this Lesson well in minde,
Beware thou worke not against Kinde;
And in thy Worke make no greate hast,
That thou labour not in wast:
Worke in light and not in darke,
And ask Councell of a Clerke:
Else may you both lightly fayle,
Without you have both good Counsayle.

Take our Rose with the red Flower,
 Which thou maist know by his Colour;
 And him knock into Plates small,
 A like thin beate over all.
 And with a Corosive good and fine,
 Forthwith drawe the same tyne;
 Of things that be new and good,
 And diverse in Nature and one in Moode,
 And put together with strong grinding,
 In Horse wombe ever abiding;
 In a Vessell good and strong,
 Thou so it rule and thinke it not longe,
 For within a Moneth or litle moe,
 And with his might the Body flo;
 Thy Corrosive will thy Rose so fret,
 Till he be thin as Milke in Meate:
 But how the Corrosive made shalbe,
 I will it shew plainely to thee;
 As I said to thee before,
 Elss knowest thou litle of this lore.

Take Maidens Urine younge of age,
 Ashes; Salt, and Lyme,
 Of him together make a mariage.
 Then the Corrosive is both good and fine:
 For without this Corrosive shortly said,
 Well compound together in One,
 All your Worke is but voyd;
 As Philosophers write every ech one:
 For Doctors both to lay and Clearke,
 Written that our first Warke
 Is to bring our Body all and some;
 And him to reduce in Mercurium.
 Then is our Worke well begun,
 If the first love be thus wone.

Now say Philosophers much more,
Our second Worke if thou wilt know,
Labour with paine and travell therefore :
And God is ready thee it to shew,
To bring our Water into Air,
Of Philosophers the second verse,
Spare not to worke and be not afraid ;
For so it will be without lese,
But yet be wise in the Warke,
For hasty men never lack woe :
And aske the Councell of a Clarke,
For sober thrift is best thereto,
And so Continue night and day
I thee charge, and sleepe thee not,
For in six Weekes truly in fay,
All into Earth it wilbe brought :
So the Fyre continued be,
Every Decoction to even measure,
And after that fyre his quality,
Thou must all the Worke rule,
For when it is in Earth full black,
Then is it our black Stone,
He is so strong he may not lack,
Tyll all thy Worke be y done.

The third degree as I thee say,
Of our Stone now black as pitch,
Thou must him wash with waters gay ;
And make him white for so did Ich ;
And when thou hast washt him cleane,
Then is his blacknes gone ;
Then is he bright and shine,
As Carbuncle or Beril stone :
But ere he come to that degree,
It wilbe labour but thinke not long,

For many a Colours change will he,
Browne, Red, Ruffet, ever amonge :
After that to many other mo,
Greene, Blew, Pale and Whyte,
But all these let them goe,
They are not to thy profit,
And when thou hast thus wrought,
By six weekes and a day,
Then is the Earth truly sought,
A white powder colour'd in fay :
But then spare the fyre,
And bate him even to measure ;
And within a month and litle mo,
The Whyte Stone hath nigh sure done,
Which will shine and melt as wax ,
He must needes Masteries do,
The Spirit and Soule make him so lax ;
That all other kindes he tourne him to.
Then Ferment him with his like,
By joyning of true Decoction,
And feede him forth by litle and litle,
That both together be brought in one,
In Colour sight and Demeane,
That there be no division :
As thou hast wrought so will it prove,
Take heede how thou hast done
In this worke of Conjunction ;
Thou shalt see marvellous greates,
Both going up and coming downe,
Of Colours springing by the heate :
For the soule that is so withheld,
And the spirit that is so bright,
If men it seene say they would,
Certaine it were a wondrous sight,

And all this is past,
 That God and Kinde hath done his cure,
 Of the Whyte Stone be not agast,
 He will not flee but bide the Fyre.
 Now farther if thou wilt Worke,
 To have the ready way,
 Take good heede and be not dull,
 For ile tell thee the truth in fay:
 Hold alwaies as thou did
 Before in the other Stone,
 Thou cannot faile God be thy spede,
 As Clerkes write every one,
 For your Fyre will him dere,
 So it be dry and lastingly;
 Save other while the changing cheare,
 Till he have sottill fasting and slye.
 First I wot well change he woll,
 Into Citrine and pure degree;
 And after that Colour is full,
 He shall never but be White ay,
 After that Tawny and Colour de Pale,
 He changeth often in such lay:
 Till he be Red withouten faile,
 As good Coroll or Rose in May.
 Then dread he nothing I wis,
 Of this Worlds adversity,
 An Emperour of conquest then he is,
 The Philosophers sayne worthy to be:
 And when thou hast thus done,
 And thereof scene the privy,
 Thanke God and Christ his only Son.
 Together with our blessed Lady.

 Ake of the eger bloud that is so Red,
 And distill that by Lymbick till it be bright,
 Therewith dissolve the Philosophers lead,
 Filtering it till it be cleere in sight,
 Evaporating it if ye do right.
 And from the Medicine with strong Fier,
 Distill our Mercury most of myght,
 Rede as blood and strong of Eyre,
 And there you have your Stone I wyffe,
 Conteyning in them all that you neede,
 The Erth thereof true Ferment is.
 Of our purpose yf you will speede,
 In other Bokes whatsoever you Reede,
 From this Doctrine you never flitt,
 But further with these Stones proceede;
 Into foure Elements dividing it,
 Ayre, Water and Oyle well rectified,
 The Earth by boyling make white as Whale bone,
 Againe together them neatly joyne,
 And of them make a precious stone;
 The matter goeth to the White alone,
 This Aristotle taught Alexander his lore,
 The Stone thus fixed make fugitive,
 Againe with Aer reserved in Store;
 And then againe make fix belyve:
 Multiply it in one and more,
 With Nature and Oyle reserved in store,
 Both white and red as you did first,
 This secreet made me study full sore,
 Many a night ere I it wyffe;

For my Master from me it hidd.
 Now is one point yet behind,
 With this Stone that must be done :
 Ingendering him of Water, Ayr and Winde,
 The Red on Sun the White on Moone,
 Molten looke thou cast full soone ;
 And Multiply in them their Tincture,
 And then take of the powder with a spoone,
 And straine it on Mercury hott and pure ;
 And a marvelous Batrell thou shalt se soone
 Betweene that and the said Mercury,
 Either it will turne it Sun or Moone,
 And then thou shalt the Mastery unfold,
 And thus proceeding Multiply,
 In every thing as I have tould;
 And thus endeth our PHILOSOPHY.

He World is in a Maze, and wot you why?
 Forsooth of late a great rich Man did dye;
 And as he lay a dying in his Bed,
 These words in secret to his Son he said.
 My Son quoth he, tis good for thee I dye,
 For thou shalt much the better be thereby ;
 And when thou seest that lyfe hath me bereft,
 Take what thou findest, and where I have it left
 Thou dost not know, nor what my riches be,
 All which I will declare, give Eare to me.
 An Earth I had all Venome to expell,
 And that I cast into a mighty Well ;
 A Water eke to clense what was amisse,
 I threw into the Earth and there it is ;
 My Silver all into the Sea I cast,

My Gold into the Air, and at the last
Into the Fyre for feare it should be found,
I threw a Stone worth forty thousand pound :
Which Stone was given me by a mighty King,
Who bad me weare it in a fore-fold Ringe :
Quoth he this Stone is by that Ring found out,
If wisely thou canst turne this Ring about :
For every Hoope contrary is to other,
Yet all agree and of the Stone is Mother.
And now my Son I will declare a wonder,
That when I dye this Ring must breake assunder:
The King said so, but then he said withall,
Although the Ring be broke in peeces small;
An easy Fire shall soone it close againe ;
Who this can doe he neede not worke in vaine.
Tyll this my hidden Treasure be found out
(When I am dead) my Spirit shall walke about ;
Make him to bring your Fier from the Grave,
And stay with him till you my Riches have ;
Theis Words a wordly man did chance to here,
Who daily watcht the Spirit but nere the neere ;
And yet it meetes with him and every one,
Yet tells him not where is this hidden STONE.

A

Dialogue betwixt the FATHER and the SONNE,
Concerning the two Principles of the BLESSED STONE.

MY Sonne if that Sulphur be absent away, Father.
Our worke is reprov'd what ever they say,
And it is Water & Fire as tru as your Creed
Which constraineth a Body till it be dead :
Of him shalt thou never have your desire,

Till he be blew as Lead through his owne Fire,
I do liken our Sulphur to the Magnet Stone,
That still draweth to her Naturally,
So with our Sulphur the firey Woman Mercury,
When she would from her husband flye.

Father I pray you for Charity, Son.
Where shall I this Sulphur finde ?
For I never did him se with Eye;
Nor never knew him in his kinde.

In our Water my Sonne keepe it in your minde, Father.
Where he will appeare so white as any snow,

Grammercy Father ye be full kinde, Son.
For through your teaching full well I know.

Now teach me the Red stone when it is in minde,
How it is made by Natures Law.

The White and Red be both of one kinde, Father.

Now hast thou my Son all thy desire,
Whose tincture by growing thou shalt it so finde,
Through vertue of the Sun and regiment of Fire
His riches there he doth increase,

Farre passing all that I can name,
If they in Fire shall come in presse :
Gune is their glory but he the same,

For the vertues of the Planets seaven
 Shall have, and also from the Pole of heven,
 Since the *V*World began noe Gemme is found
 Equall him till in vertues all,
 The Saphir, nor the Diamond,
 The Ruby rich behind shall fall,
 So shall the Turkie and Carbuncle :
 If they in fire together shall fight,
 All One except shall loose their might,
 The fire on him hath power none,
 His Elements be so coequall,
 An Incombustible Oyle is this our Stone
 In power farr passing others all.

Son.

In what Element Father is our Sulphur bright?
 Is it in all, or is it in one ?

Father.

In all Sonne he must need be of right,
 For Separacion of Elements we make none :
 And yett in them we can it not see,
 For sensuall matter is he none,
 But equallitie only intellectuall,
 Without which our Stone never fixt be shall.
 Qualitie Sonne alsoe groweth in the fire ;
 Betwixt the White stone and the Red,
 For Colours many to you shall appeare,
 Untill the tyme the Woman be dead :
 The which things if ye shall not see,
 Red shall your Stone at noe time bee ;
 For where the Woman is in presence,
 There is much moysture and Accidence :
 Watry humors that in her bee
 Will drowne and devoure our qualitee,
 Remember and thinke of Noahs flood,
 For too much Water was never good :
 And yet as qualitie is hid in quantitie,

So

So must in Water our Earth be :
 Riches in him thou shalt much finde,
 After alteracions all due to his kinde;
 When Oyle in him is coagulate,
 Then is our Stone body made liquefact:
 When Sulphur Water and Oyle be one,
 Indued with riches then is our Stone.
 I cannot thee tell a richer thing;
 Then is our Stone when he is fire durence,
 Our Fire maketh her so strong.

Father how to make our Stone,
 Fayne would I knowe that have we done;

My Sonne with lent and easie heate,
 The Elements togeather will kindly meate :
 Hastenot to fast whilest they be rawe,
 Keepe well the Fire, beware of the lowe.
 Shutt well the Vessele least out passe the Spirit,
 So shall you all things the better keepe;
 For if the Spiritts doe passe you from,
 Remedy to gett them againe have you none :
 And how marveillous it is the Elements to meete
 Keepe this as your principall secrete,
 At your begining give God the prayse;
 And keepe your Matter in heate forty dayes,
 But so that all things be made cleare,
 Or else you are never the neare :
 And within this tyme itt wil be Black;
 And oft chainge colour till it be White,
 There you may cease and further proceede,
 By mendinge the heate to your mesure indeed;
 And there withall now will I end,
 And to God onely thee Commend.

Son.

Father.

JOHN GOWER

CONCERNING

The PHILOSOPHERS STONE.

AND also with great diligence,
Thei sonde thilke Experience:
Which cleped is Alconomie,
Whereof the Silver multeplie;
Thei made, and eke the Gold also.

And for to telle howe it is so:
Of bodies seven in Special;
With fowre Spirites joynt withall;
Stant the substance of this matere;
The bodies which I speke of here,
Of the Plannets ben begonne,
The Gold is titled to the Sonne:
The Moone of Silver hath his part,
And Iron that stonde uppon Mart:
The Leed after Saturne groweth,
And Jupiter the Brasse bestoweth;
The Copper sette is to Venus:
And to his part Mercurius
Hath the Quicksilver, as it falleth,
The which after the Boke it calleth,
Is first of thilke foure named
Of Spirits, which ben proclaymed,
And the Spirite which is seconde,
In Sal Armoniake is founde:

The third Spirite Sulphur is,
 The fourth Sewende after this,
Arcennium by name is hotte
 With blowyng, and with fires hote :
 In these things which I say,
 Thei worchen by divers waye.
 For as the Philosopher tolde,
 Of Gold and Sylver thei ben holde,
 Two principall extremittees,
 To which all other by degrees,
 Of the mettalls ben accordant,
 And so through kinde resemblant :
 That what man couth awaie take,
 The rust, of which they waxen blake,
 And the savour of the hardnes ;
 Thei shulden take the likenes ;
 Of Gold or Silver perfectly,
 Bnt for to worche it sykerly,
 Betweene the Corps and the Spirite,
 Er that the Metall be parfite,
 In seven formes itt is sette
 Of all, and if one be lette,
 The remnant may not avayle,
 But otherwise it maie nought fayle ;
 For thei by whome this Art was founde,
 To every poynt a certayne bounde,
 Ordeinen that a man may finde,
 This Craft is wrought by wey of kinde ;
 So that there is no fallace in ;
 But what man that this werke begyn ;
 He mote awaite at every tyde,
 So that nothyng be left asyde.

Fyrst of the Distillacion,
 Forth with the Congelacion,

C c c

Solucion

Solucion, Disscencion,
 And kepe in his entencion,
 The poynt of Sublimacion,
 And forthwith Calcinacion,
 Of very Approbacion,
 So that there be Fixacion,
 With temperate hetes of the fyer,
 Tyll he the perfite Elixer,
 Of thilke Philosophers Stone,
 Maie gette, of which that many one
 Of Philosophers whilome write :
 And if thou wolt the names wite,
 Of thilke Stone with other two,
 Which as the Clerkes maden tho ;
 So as the Bokes itt recorden,
 The kinde of hem I shall recorden.

These old Philosophers wyse,
 By wey of kynde in sond ry wise ;
 Thre Stones made through Clergie,
 The fyrst I shall specifice,
 Was cleped Vegetabilis ;
 Of which the proper vertue is,
 To mans heale for to serve,
 As for to keepe, and to preserve,
 The body fro sicknes all,
 Till death of kinde upon hym fall.
 The second Stone I the behote,
 Is Lapis Animalis hote :
 The whose vertue, is proper and couth,
 For Eare and Eye, Nose and Mouth ;
 Whereof a man may here, and see,
 And smell and tast, in his degree,
 And for to feele and for to goe,
 Itt helpeth a man of both two :

The witts five he underfongeth
To keepe, as it to hym belongeth.

The third Stone in speciall
by name is cleped Minerall,
Which the Mettalls of every myne,
Attempreth, till that thei ben fyne;
And pureth hem by such a wey,
That all the vice goth away,
Of Rust, of Stynte, and of Hardnes:
And when they ben of such clenness,
This minerall so as I fynde,
Transformeth all the fyrst kynde,
And maketh hem able to conceive,
Through his vertue and receive
Both in substance and in figure,
Of Gold and Silver the nature.
For thei two ben the extremittees,
To which after the propertees,
Hath every mettall his desire,
With helpe and comforte of the fyre.
Forth with this Stone as it is said,
Which to the Sonne and Moone is laide:
For to the Red, and to the White,
This Stone hath power to profite;
It maketh Multiplicacion
Of Gold and the fixacion,
It causeth and of this babite,
He doth the werke to be parfite:
Of thilke Elixer which men call
Alconomy, as is befall
To hem, that whilome were wise;
But now it stant all otherwise:
Thei speken fast of thilke Stone,
But how to make it now wote none.

After the sooth Experience,
 And nathles greate diligence,
 Thei setten up thilke dede,
 And spillen more then thei spede;
 For alwey thei fynde a lette,
 Which bringeth in povetee and Dette;
 To hem that rich were to fore,
 The Losse is had the Lucre is lore:
 To gette a pound thei spenden five,
 I not how such a Craft shall thrive:
 In the manner as it is used,
 It were better be refused,
 Then for to worchen upon wene,
 In thinge which stant not as thei wene:
 But not for thy who that it knew,
The Science of himselfe is trew:
 Uppon the forme as it was founded,
 Whereof the names yett be grounded;
 Of hem, that first it founden out:
 And thus the same goth all about,
 To such as soughten besines,
 Of vetue and of worthines,
 Of whom if I the names call,
Hermes was one the first of all,
 To whom this Art is most applied,
Geber thereof was magnified,
 And Ortolane and Morien,
 Among the which is Avicen.
 Which founde and wrote and greate partie,
 The practicke of Alconomie,
 Whose bokes plainlie as thei stonde,
 Uppon this Crafte few understonde.
 But yet to put hem in assay,
 There ben full manie now a day,

That knowen litle that thei mene,
It is not one to wite and wene,
In forme of words thei it trete;
But yet thei failen of beyet.
For of to much, or of to lite,
There is algate found a wite:
So that thei follow not the line,
Of the perfect Medicine,
Which grounded is upon nature;
But thei that writen the Scripture;
Of Greke, Arabe, and Caldee,
Thei were of such Auctoritee,
That thei firste founden out the wey,
Of all that thou hast herd me sey,
Whereof the Cronicke of her Lore,
Shall stonde in price for evermore.

VISION OF Sr: GEORGE RIPLEY:
CHANON OF BRIDLINGTON.

When busie at my booke I was upon a certeine night,
This Vision here exprest appear'd unto my dim(med sight,
A Toade full rudde I saw did drinke the juce of grapes so fast,
Till over charged with the broth, his bowells all to brast;
And after that from poysoned bulke he cast his ven ome fell,
For greif and paine whereof his Members all began to swell,
With drops of poysoned sweate approaching thus his secret Den,
His cave with blasts of fumous ayre he all be-whyted then;
And from the which in space a golden humour did ensue, (hew:
Whose falling drops from high did staine the soile with ruddy
And when this Corps the force of vitall breath began to lacke,
This dying Toade became forthwith like Coale for colour blacke:
Thus drowned in his proper veynes of poysoned flood,
For tearme of eightic dayes and fowre he rotting stood:
By tryall then this venome to expell I did desire,
For which I did committ his carkase to a gentle fire:
Which done, a wonder to the sight, but more to be rehear't,
The Toade with Colours rare through every side was pear't,
And VWhite appeared when all the sundry hewes were past,
Which after being tinted Rudde, for evermore did last.
Then of the venome handled thus a medicine I did make;
VWhich venome kills and saveth such as venome chance to take.
Glory be to him the graunter of such secret wayes,
Dominion, and Honour, both with Worship, and with Prayse.

 BELONGING
 TO AN EMBLEMATICAL
 SCROVLE:

Supposed to be invented by GEO: RIPLEY.

Shall you tell with plaine declaracion,
 Where, how, and what is my generacion:
Omogeni is my Father,
 And Magnesia is my Mother:
 And Azor truly is my Sister,

And Kibrick forsooth is my Brother:
 The Serpent of Arabia is my name,
 The which is leader of all this game:
 That sometyne was both wood and wild,
 And now I am both meeke and mild,
 The Sun and the Moone with their might,
 Have chastised me that was so light:
 My Wings that me brought,
 Hither and thither where I thought
 Now with their might they downe me pull,
 And bring me where they woll,
 The blood of myne heart I wiss,
 Now causeth both Joy and blisse:

And

And dissolveth the very Stone,
 And knitteth him ere he have done ;
 Now maketh hard that was lix,
 And causeth him to be fix.
 Of my blood and water I wis,
 Plenty in all the World there is.
 It runneth in every place ;
 Who it findeth he hath grace :
 In the World it runneth over all,
 And goeth round as a ball :
 But thou understand well this,
 Of the worke thou shalt miss.
 Therefore know ere thou begin,
 What he is and all his kin,
 Many a Name he hath full sure,
 And all is but one Nature :
 Thou must part him in three,
 And then knit him as the Trinity :
 And make them all but one,
 Loe here is the Philosophers Stone.

THe Bird of Hermes is my name,
 Eating my wings to make me tame.

IN the Sea withouten lesse,
 Standeth the Bird of Hermes :
 Eating his Wings variable,
 And thereby maketh himselfe more stable ;
 When all his Fethers be agon,
 He standeth still there as a stone ;
 Here is now both White and Red,
 And also the Stone to quicken the dead,

All and fume withouten fable,
Both hard, and nesh and malliable
Understand now well aright,
And thanke God of this fight.

TAKE thou Phæbus that is so bright,
That sitteth so high in Majesty;
With his beames that shineth soe light;

In all places where ever that he be,
For he is Father to all living things,
Maynteyner of Lyfe to Crop and Roote,
And causeth Nature forth to spring;

With his wife being soote,
For he is salve to every sore,
To bring about thys precious worke;

Take good heede unto his lore,

I say to learned and to Clerk,

And Omogeny is my Name :

Which God shaped with his owne hand,

And Magnesia is my Dame,

Thou shalt verily understand,

Now heere I shall begin,

For to teach thee a ready way :

Or else litle shalt thou wyn,

Take good heed what I say;

Devide thou Phæbus in many a parte;

With his beames that byn so bright,

And thus with Nature him Coarte,

The which is mirrour of all light :

This Phæbus hath full many a Name,

Which that is full hard for to know;

And but thou take the very same,

The Philosophers Stone thou shalt not know,

D d d

There]

Therefore I counsell ere thou begin:
 Know him well what it be,
 And that is thick make it thin;
 For then it shall full well like the.
 Now understand well what I meane,
 And take good heed thereunto,
 The worke shall else litle be seene:
 And tourne thee unto mikle woe,
 As I have said in this our Lore,
 Many a Name I wiss it have,
 Some behinde, and some before;
 As Philosophers of yore him gave.

ON the Ground there is a Hill,
 Also a Serpent within a Well:
 His Tayle is long with Wings wide,
 All ready to fly on every side,
 Repaire the Well round about,
 That the Serpent pas not out;
 For if that he be there agone,
 Thou loosest the vertue of the Stone,
 What is the Ground thou mayst know heere,
 And also the Well that is so cleere:
 And eke the Serpent with his Tayle
 Or else the worke shall litle availe,
 The Well must brenne in Water cleare,
 Take good heede for this thy Fyre,
 The Fire with Water brent shalbe,
 And Water with Fire wash shall he;
 Then Earth on Fire shalbe put,
 And Water with Air shalbe knit,
 Thus ye shall go to Putrefaccion,
 And bring the Serpent to reduction.

First he shalbe Black as any Crow,
And downe in his Den shall lye full lowe:
I swel'd as a Toade that lyeth on ground,
Burst with bladders sitting so round,
They shall to braft and lye full plaine,
And thus with craft the Serpent is slaine:
He shall shew Collours there many a one,
And tourne as White as wilbe the bone,
With the Water that he was in,
Wash him cleane from his sin:
And let him drinke a litle and a lite,
And that shall make him faire and white,
The which Whitnes is ever abiding,
Lo here is the very full finishing:
Of the White Stone and the Red,
Loe here is the true deed.

THE MYSTERY OF ALCHEMISTS,

Composed by Sir Geo: Ripley
Chanon of Bridlington.

When ☉ in ♋ and Phoebus shines bright, (ing
The Elements reviving the new Year spring-
The Son by his vertue gives Nature & Light,
And moysture refresheth all things growing:
In the season of the Yeare when the Sun waxeth warme,
Freshly and fragrante the Flowers doe grow,
Of Natures subtile working we cannot discerne,
Nor yet by our Reason we can it not know,
In foure Elements is comprehended things Three,
Animalls, Vegetabills, Mineralls must be,
Of this is our Principle that we make our Stone,
Quality and Quantity is unknowne to many one.

Son.

Quality (Father) would I faine know,
Of what nature it is and what it hath in his kinde.

Father.

As Colours divers which on the ground do grow,
Keepe well this secret (Son) and marke it in thy minde.

Son.

Without Proportion (Father) how should I it know,
This working now is far from my minde.

Father.

Nature and kinde (Son) together do grow,
Quality by waight (Son) shalt thou never finde.

Son.

To seperate Elements (Father) I must needs know,
Either in Proportion which be more or less.

Out

Out of our Principle foure Elements thou shalt draw, Father.
Thou shalt neede nothing else that needefull is ;
Our Principle in quality is so perfectly mixed,
By vertue of the Son and his quality,
So equally Joyned, so throughly fixed,
As nothing so well mixed may be.

This Principle (Father) is but one thing,
Good (Father) tel me where it doth grow.

Son.

Father.

In every place (Son) you shall him well finde ;
By Taft and by Colour thou shalt him well know ;
Fowles in the Ayer with it doe fly,
And Fishes doe swim there with in the Sea,
With Reason of Angels you may it diserne,
Both Man and Woman to governe,
With our fixed Body (Son) we must thus begin.
Of him make Mercury and Water cleare,
Man and Woman is them within,
Married together by vertue of our Fire,
The Woman in her working is full wild,
Be well aware she goe not out ;
Till she have conceived and borne a Chylde,
Then all his Kin on him shal lout ;
In their workes they be unstable,
The Elements they be so raw ;
And in their Colour so variable,
As sometyme like the head of a Crow,
When he is black ye may well like,
Putrefaction must go beforene,
After Blacke he wilbe White,
Then thanke ye God the Chyld is borne.
This Child is both King and Emperour,
Through his region both far and neere ;
All the World doth him honour ,
By the vertue he hath taken of the Fire :

His first Vesture is White and pure,
 As any Christall shining cleere,
 Of White tincture then be you sure ;
 By verture taken of our Fire,
 His first Vesture that is so White,
 Betokeneth his Virginity,
 A similitude even thereto like,
 And according to the Trinity :
 Our Medicen is made of things Three,
 Against which the Philosophers cannot say nay,
 The Father, the Son in one degree,
Corpus, Spiritus & Anima.
 When Nature is with Nature, thou mayst fruite finde,
 By proportion more or lesse,
 In practise hereof many men be blinde,
 Because they understand not what Nature is ;
 His second Vesture as Gold is Red,
 In his Vessell bright shining,
 A Diadem set on his head,
 Richer then any earthly thing.
 His third Vesture is Purple pure,
 Like Sun-beames he shineth bright and clere,
 Of Red tincture then be you sure :
 By the vertue he hath taken of our Fire.
 My beloved Son I commande thee,
 As thou wilt have my love and blessing,
 That thou to God kneele on thy knee,
 Unto him give laude and thankeing ;
 For theis guists of grace geuen unto thee,
 To have trew knowledge of this worthy Scyence,
 That many men seeke by land and sea,
 And cannot finde it for any expence :
 I shall shew thee my Son here a hid Secret,
 Because thou art vertuous in thy living,

Of me else shouldst thou never it weert,
 And for thou art wise in thy Councell keeping,
 And therefore I charge thee on my blessing,
 Not to shew it to any man living,
 For it is the first Principle of our blessed Stone,
 Through which our noble worke is releevd,
 Note well that I shew now to thee my Son,
 If Sulphur be absent our worke is deprived;
 Our Sulphur my Son is Water and Fire,
 Constraining the Body till it be dead,
 Of hem thou hast never thy desire,
 Till he be bloe as any Lead,
 After all this he doth revive,
 That in his Vessell before was dead;
 I can no better in my reason contrive,
 Then to figure him to the greate God head.
 For as there dyed no more then One,
 Howbeit that there be persons Three,
 The Father, the Son by might is one:
 The holy Ghost make our full Trinity:
 A similitude like unto our Stone,
 In him ben things three which be concluded all in one,
 Our Sulphur is likened to the holy Ghost,
 For he is quick, called the Spirit of Slyse,
 In his working of might he is most.
 He raiseth our Body from death to lyse,
 Many (my Son) with him do rise,
 The holy Gospell therein is expert,
 The number my reason cannot contrive,
Multum & quantum fructum adfert:
 I liken our Sulphur to the Adamant Stone,
 That Steele drawes to him naturally,
 So doth our Sulphur the woman,
 When she from her husband would flye.

Son.

I muse greatly (Father) and mervaille in minde,
Whereof this Stone is ingendered,
And also of what manner of kinde,
For I have traveled many a Country,
In vallies low and on hills high,
And spurred therefore of foes and freind,
Yet could I never that Sulphur see,
Nor in any place wat I where him to finde.

Father.

Son he is made of the Elements,
That God hath given both soule and lyfe,
From Mettall he may never be absent,
For he rules both man and wife.

Son.

Father I pray you for charity,
Where shall I this Sulphur finde,
For perfectly I know him not by quality,
Nor yet to fore know him by kinde.

Father.

In our Water Son keepe this in minde,
For there he will appeare as white as snow.

Son.

Gramarcy Father to me ye be full kinde,
For through your teaching full well I it know,
Now Father I pray you for charity,
The while it is in your minde,
To ken the red Sulphur that you will teach me,
And then I trust your Doctrin to finde.

Father.

White and Red Son be both one in kinde,
Now hast thou all thy desire,
Keepe well this secret and close it in thy minde,
His tincture and growing is by vertue of our Fire,
For in our Fire our Stone will grow,
And there his riches he doth encrease,
And so doth no Stone that I do know,
That in the fire will put him in prease;
We liken him therefore unto the Sun,
That to all Elements giveth light.

Never sith the World was begun,
Was any but he of so much might,
Were he never of so high degree,
Saphir, Diamond or Emerald Stone,
The Turcas, or the rich Ruby,
Of all vertuous Stones set ower alone,
The greatest Carbuncle that is full of light,
May not with our Stone Compaire,
For if they in the Fire should fight,
The Carbuncle of vertue should be full bare,
To destroy our Stone, Son that will not be,
The Elements in him be so equall;
He is an Oyle incumbustible,
And of all things most imperiall.

In which Elements (Father) is our Sulphur in?
Is he in all, or in any one?

Son.

In all (Son) he needes must be,
For Separation of Elements make we none,
Sulphur in Elements son we may not see,
By Nature in them he is so privily mixed,
In Elements he is a quality,
Our Stone will never else be perfectly fixed.
Quality (Son) growes also in fire,
Betwixt the White Stone and the Redd,
For many Colours there will appere,
While the tyme the Woman be dead.

Father.

Father must the Woman needes be dead?

Son.
Father.

Our Stone else my Son will never be Redd;
For whereas a Woman is in presence,
There is much moysture and accidence,
Wetnes and humours in her be,
The which would drown'd our Quality;
Perceive well (Son) by Noahs flood,
To much moysture was never good.
Like as quality is hid in quantity,

So must our Erth in Waters be,
 The riches in him thou shalt finde,
 After alteration of kinde,
 His Oyle in him is congelate,
 This makes our Body liquefact,
 Sulphur and Oyle all of one kinde,
 Which makes our Stone rich and couloring;
 I cannot tell thee Son a richer thing,
 Then he is in the Fire during,
 The Fire to him may do no wrong,
 Sulphur of Nature makes him so strong.

Son. How to make our Stone (Father) I would faine know.

Father. In soft heates my (Son) Elements will meete,
 Hast not to fast whilst they be rawe,
 In the Vessell (Son) the better thou shalt him keepe,
 Rule well the Fire and and beware of the Lawe,
 Shut well the Vessell for going forth of the Spirit;
 Soe shall you all things the better keepe;
 For how to get him againe it is strange to know,
 It is hard for some men to make Elements meete,
 Keepe well this Secret Son and God daily praise,
 Put into thy Vessell Water cleare,
 And set it in Fire full forty dayes,
 And then in the Vessell blacknes will appeare,
 When that he is black he will change tyte,
 Many Colers in him then will appeare,
 From coulour to colour till it be white,
 Then it is tyme Son to change the Fire,
 And melt the heat to your desire;
 And if you will have him White still,
 Then must you your Medicine apply,
 A dry Fire put him till,
 And a moyst Fire naturally,
 Till he be made fixed,
 For to take Mercury before his flight,

As he is by nature privily mixed,
Of fusion then he shalbe light,
And if you to his proportion take,
Fine Luna then will he make,
So micle of piercing will he be,
Both fluxible with penetrabilitie;
And (Son) if thou wilt have thy Medicaine Red,
In a dry Fire thou shalt him keepe,
Ever still in one steed,
That never your Vessell come to wet.

So hard, so heavy and so peircing,
(Father) this a wonderous thing,
So hot, so moyst, so light, so wet,
This greate Secret Father will I keepe,
So white, so red, so profitable,
Of all Stones most incomparable.

Son.

He may do more then any King,
He is so rich Son in his working,
Gould and Silver men would faine have,
Poore and rich for it do crave,
They that of it have most aboundance,
Of the people have most obaisance,
To serve them both day and night,
And in the feeld will for it fight,
Therefore Son upon my blessing,
Keepe secretly this precious cunning,
Of thy Councell make neither King nor Knight,
If they knew they would set it light;
For when they have what they will,
God's curse wil come they say the untill,
For had I wist and had I wend,
That commeth evermore behinde,
Our Mercury my (Son) is white and thin,
In our Vessell shining bright and cleere,
Our Sulphur is in him within,

Father.

Burning him more then our dry Fire,
 He fixes him more in one yeare,
 By his naturall working I understand;
 Then doth the Sonne by his dry Fire,
 In yeares a long thousand,
 In short space we may have done,
 When our Medicine thou wilt assay,
 Thou maist make both Sol and Lune.
 In lesse space then in one day.

Son. Father is it Water in the well springing,
 Or is it Water in the river running?

Other Water (Father) can I not finde.

Father. Noe (Son) it is of another kinde,
 Howbeit it is Water cleere;

Our Sulphur in him is soe cleaving;

He may not be departed by any fire;

I tell thee the throath in this thing.

Son. By no fire (Father) how may that be?

Father. Fire he is ever brenning,

Our Sulphur is made of the Sun and such humi-

That in the Fire he is ever during. (dity

Son. The tyme of our working would I know,

In what space might be made our Stone,

By Corne and by Frut (Son) thou maist it wel

Once in a yeare it is afore thee done; (know.

The Sun in the Zodiack about doth gonne,

Through the twelve Signes once in a yeare,

Soe long it is ere we can make our Stone.

Father. Haste not to fast but rule well thy Fire,

The vertue of our Stone few men can tell,

The Elements in him be so mighty,

Abundance of treasure in him do dwell;

For in riches all Stones exceeds he.

The Preface prefixt to Sir Geo: Ripley's
M E D U L L A;
 Which he wrote Ann. Dom. 1476. and Dedicated to Geo: Nevell then Arch-Bishop of Yorke.

RIGHT noble Lord, and Prelate Deere,
 Vouchsafe of me these Verses take,
 Which I present unto you heere,
 That mencion of the Stone doth make,
 Of wise men meetered for your sake.
 For which of you thus much I crave,
 Your gentle favour for to have.

2. This Stone divine of which I write,
 Is knowne as One, and it is Three;
 Which though it have his force and might,
 Of Triple nature for to be,
 Yet doe they Mettalls judge and try.
 And called is of wise men all,
 The mighty Stone that Conquer shall.

3. Disdaine you not nor yet refuse,
 To learne the vertues of them now,
 By which you may if you them use,
 Your selfe preserve and eke know howe,
 Old age to hide, and Youth outshewe.
 And Brasse by them transmuted is,
 And eger Bodyes clensed I wis.

4. Fined also and made full pure,
 And Aurified be at the last.
 The first of these I you assure,
 Right hurtfull is for Man to tast,
 For Life it will resolve and wast.
 Of Corrosives made corrupting all,
 And named is the Minerall.

5. But Animall the second is,
 The third forsooth the Vegetable,
 To cure all things their vertue is,
 In every cause what soe befall,
 Mankinde in health preserve they shall:
 Reneweth Youth and keepeth it sound,
 As trew by prooffe the same is found.

6. And here I will teach you plaine,
 How for to make their Mixtures pure:
 In order faire without disdain.
 I will tell you no Dreame be sure,
 Believe me while my life may dure,
 Look what with mouth to you I say,
 My deedes shall prove it true alway.

7. Yett shall some Figure my Meeter hide,
 Least the Arte with Wings should fly away,
 And soe as vile abroad to slide,
 Whose sence, or Truth cannot decay,
 And without fraude I will display
 The matter plaine on every side,
 And true likewise what soe betide:

8. Although ere this you have heard say,
 That such as practice doth this Arte,
 Their thrift in Ashes seeke alway:
 And learne at length with heavy heart,
 Not more but lesse to make their part,
 Yet be not you dismayed therefore;
 Ne feare nor shrink for it the more.

9. But trust the words Which I you tell,
 For truly I doe flatly say,
 I have both seene and known it well,
 And wittnesse will the same alway,
 This the Marrow called is I say,
 A truer Text full well I wote,
 In all this World finde shall you not.

10. Then as this Writing of our Wine,
Whereof I bring you here a taste ;
Whose heavenly Water pure and fine,
Doth all things worke withouten waste,
To your desire the bodyes fast
It doth dissolve, make light and open
With other things, not yett of spoken.

11. Against Nature yet is it not,
But naturall as may men trow,
Which being cleansed from his spott,
There Phcebus Splendor shall forth shewe,
And cause it fragrantly to grow ;
For how more fragrant it shalbe,
Soe much of Valor more is hee.

12. For Phcebus nature doth surpasse,
And bodyes pure, and eke the sky,
It doth beshine both Corne and Grasse,
The Sonn reneweth from on hyc,
And causeth things to fructifie.
Doth mix, and fix, and natureth,
Drives plagues away and nourisheth.

13. Abandoneth, draweth, and clenseth the Aire,
Maketh dewes sweete, floods and humors dry ,
Maketh softe, hard, sweete and fayre ;
And purifieth Natures perfectly,
By his working incessantly ;
It maketh all things to grow I say,
And chaseth Ugly things away,

14. In Laurell Tree, it is full greene,
In Gold it lodgeth gliftringly ;
It decketh Stones with brightnes sheene,
The shining bodyes are made thereby ;
But if you will more certeinly,
Of Phcebus vertue have knowledging,
Then Saturns Chylid must Issue bring.

15. O Pastor meeke draw Water cleere,
 From buds of Vynes out of a Glasse,
 As red as blood as Gold it were;
 Which Will you give a Gummy Masse,
 As pretious as ever was.
 Thus without fraude made open is by wyse,
 The Arte Which you shall not dispise.

16. It multiplyeth and maketh also,
 Gold Potable know this for trewe,
 By it are things increased soe,
 That health thereby you may renewe,
 To learne those Secreates daily sue,
 Which formakly prolong well may
 Your Life in joy from day to day.

17. For although many hate this Arte,
 Yet it is precious over all;
 Try and discerns within your hearte,
 By all the Lessons mysticall;
 A Gift it is Cœlestiall
 Which here is taught to you him by
 That prov'd it hath Assuredly.

18. This have I written for your sake,
 Not in vaine stile, but order plaine,
 This little Booke of him you take,
 Which frankly doth bestowe his paine.
 To God committinge you againe,
 And all that doth wish well to thee,
 In any place wheresoever they bee.

19. If you unbroken long Would keepe,
 In perfect health, your Vessel still;
 Then for your Cannon looke you seeke,
 Remembring him that hath good will,
 By your assistance to fulfill:
 And in such sort your Worke display,
 As sound may to your lawd alway.

A SHORT WORKE

That beareth the Name of the aforesaid

Author,

Sir G. R I P L E Y.

Ake Heavy, Soft, Cold, and Drye; (ly :
Clenſe him, and to Calx grind him ſubti-
Difſolve him in Water of the Wood ;
If thou can do any good
Thereof, take a Tincture

And Earthy Calx good and pure.
Of this maiſt thou have with thy travaile,
Both Mercury, Water, and Oyle ;
Out of the Ayre with Flaines great,
Fire into the Earth doth Creepe ;
In this Worke if thou wilt winn,
Take heed wherewith thou doſt begin,
And in what manner thou doſt work,
For looſing thy way in the darke ;
And where, with what, and how, thy matter ſhal
I tell and Councell thee as my Friend : (end ;
Make Water of Earth, and Earth of Water ;
Then art thou well onward in the matter.

For thou shalt find hid in the myre,
 Both Earth, Water, Ayre, and Fire :
 I tell thee my Brother, I will not flatter,
 Of our Earth is made our Water :
 The which is cleere white as Snow ;
 And makes our Earth Calcine and growe.
 Blacknesse first to thee doth shew,
 As by thy practise thou shalt know :
 Dissolve and Calcine oft, and oft ; (brought:
 With Congelation till the Body to whitnes be
 Make the Body fluxible, and flowing ;
 With the Earth, perfect, and teyning.
 Then after Ferment is once done,
 Whither thou wilt with Sunne or Moone,
 Dissolve him with the Water of life,
 Ycalled Mercury withouten strife :
 Put the Soule with the Body, and Spirite
 Together in one that they may meete,
 In his Dammes belly till he wax great,
 With giving Drinke of his owne sweate :
 For the Milke of a Cow to a Child my brother
 Is not so sweete as the Milke of his Mother :
 This Child that is so marveilously wrought,
 Unto his Heritage must be brought :
 His livelyhood is so worthy a thing,
 Of abilitie to spend with a King :
 He that beareth all this in minde,
 And understandeth these Parables all ;
 With Seperation he may finde,
 Poore and Rich, great and small ;
 With our Sulphur we make our Antimony, White and
 And thereof we make our Mercury quick, & dead. (Red;
 This is a Mettall that I speake of one of the seaven,
 If thou be a Clerk read what I meane.

There is no Planet of six neither great nor small,
But if he be put to them, he will Calcine them all.
Unto red blood he must be brought;
Else of him thou gettest right nought:
Reach him then with the Wood Water,
Man, and Woman Clothed under one hatter,
In and of them is conceived a Child
Lovely of beauty, meeke and mild;
Out of the Earth with dropps strong,
Nourish the Child in his Mothers wombe;
Till he be come to full age;
And then make thou a Mariage,
Betweene the Daughter, and the Sonne;
And then thou hast the Mastery wonn.
The beginning of this Worke, if thou wilt crave,
In holly Writ thou shalt it have:
Both in Masse Booke and in Psalter
Yea wrighten before the Preeft at the Alter:
And what is Antimony that thou shalt worke,
I have written to thee if thou be a Clerke;
Looke about before if thou canst finde
Plainely written, which maketh men blind:
Our Werke is bringing againe our Mercury,
And that Philosophers call Solucion;
And if thou loose not the uncleane body,
Thou werkest without discretion;
The Inbibition of Water, is not the loosing;
But bringing the Body into water againe turning:
That is to say into such water,
That is turning the Body into his first Matter:
The second Werke is to bring,
Earth and Water to Congealing;
The cleansing of the Third is another
Unto Whitenes; my owne Brother;

With this Water of his owne,
 That is full marvalous to be knowne :
 The fourth werke is distilling
 Of Water, and Earth upswearing.
 And thus hast thou by one assent,
 Earth, Ayre, Water, and Fire ; the four Elements :
 The Ashes that are in the bottome of the Vessell,
 Looke thou dispise them not though left,
 For I tell thee right well,
 There is the Diadem of our Craft.

FINIS.

JOHN LYDGATE

MONKE OF
St. EDMUNDS BURY,

In his Translation of the second Epistle that King Alexander sent to his Master ARISTOTLE.

Han Alysaundre as is Reherfyd heer
This Phylosophre for vertues manyfoold;
Sent unto hym a secret Messenger,
Without exskus to come to hys houfoold,
But he ageyn for he was feeble and old,
And impotent on the tother syde;
And unweldy for to goon or ryde.

But chiefe cause why Alysaundre sente,
A purpoos take and a fantasye,
To declare pleyntyly what it mente;
He wyft in sooth that in Philosophye,
Wyth other secrets of Astronomye:

He was experte and mooste cowde understonde,
Thys was in cheefe Cause of the Kynges sonde.

Powder of Planetys and mevyng of all Sterrys,
 And of every heavenly Intelligence;
 Dysposicion of Pees and ek of Werrys,
 And of ech othyr straunge hyd Scyence,
 As the sevene Goddys by theyr Influence
 Dyspose the Orders of Incantacions,
 Or of sevene Metallys the Transmutacions.

With othir Craftys which that be secre,
 Calculacion and Geomancye,
 Dyfformacions of Circes and Meed:
 Lokinge of Facys and Pyromancye,
 On Lond, and Watir, Craft of Geometrye.
 Heyghte and Depnesse with all Experyence,
 Therefore the Kinge desires his presence.

But for all this within himselfe a thing
 There was a Secre he kept not to disclose;
 Nor to publishe opynly to the Kynge,
 Takeyng Example by two things in a Roose,
 First how the Flower greet sweetnesse doth dispoose:
 Yet in the Thorne men finde great sharpnesse,
 And thus in Konnyng there may been a lykenesse.

In Herbe and Flour, in Writeing, Word and Stoon,
 Ech hath his vertue of God and of Nature,
 But the knowyng is hyd froo many oon:
 And not declaryd to every Creature,
 Wherefor he cast twen Reason and Measure:
 To shape aweye both the Kyng to plesse,
 Somewhat to unclothe and set his herte at ese.

There

There is of ryght a greete difference,
Tween a Princes royall Dignite,
And a twen Commons rude In telligence,
To whom nat longeth to meddle in no degre,
Of Konnynges that should be kept secre,
For to a Kynges famous magnificence,
And to Clerkys whiche have Experience.

Itt cordeth well to search out Scripture,
Mysteries hid of Fowllys, Beeste, and Tree,
And of Angellys moost sotyl of Nature ;
Of Myneralls, and Fysshes in the See,
And of Stonys specially of Three.

Oon Myneral another Vegetatyff,
Partyd on Foure to lengthe a Mannys lyffe.

Off whych I radde oonys among othir Stonys,
There was oon calyd Anymal;
Foure Elements wrought out for the noonys :
Erthe, Watir, and Ayre, and in especyall,
Joyned with Fyre proporcyon maad egal.

I dar seyn breefly and not tarye,
Is noon swych Stoone found in the Lapidarye.

Iradd Oonys of a Phylosophre,
Ageyn ech syckenesse of valew doth moost cure,
All the Trefure and Gould in Crasus Coffre ;
Nor all the Stoonys that grow by Nature,
Wrought by Craft or forgyd by Picture.

Lapis & non Lapis, Stoon of greetest fame,
Aristotiles gaff it the same name.

And

And for I have but little rad or seyne,
 To write or medle of so high mateerys,
 For presumcion some would have disdeyn;
 To be so bold or clymbe in my desires:
 To scale the Laddere above the nyne Speerys,
 Or medle of Rubyes that yeve so cleere a light,
 On hooly shrines in the dirk night.

I was nevir noon expert Joweleeere,
 In suych mateerys to put my sylfe in prees,
 With Philosophres myn Eyen wer nat cleer,
 Nowthir with Plato nor with Socratees:
 Except the Prynce Aristotilees.

Of Philosophres to Alisaundre Kyng,
 Wrott of this Stone the mervaylle in all werking.

In prevy wyse lych to hys Ententys,
 Secretys hyd cloos in Phylosophye,
 Fyrst departyng of the foure Elementys;
 And aftyrward as he doth speceffye,
 Every ech of hem for to recteffye.

And after thys lyk hys Oppynyon,
 Of thys foure to make a Conjunccyon.

In suych wyse performe up thys Stoon,
 Seene in the joynynge there be noone outrage
 But the fals erryng hath founyd many one;
 And brought hem aftyr in full grette rerage,
 By Expensys and outragious Costage.

For lak of brayn they wern maad soe wood,
 Thyng to begynne whych they not understood.

For he that lyst putte in Experience,
Forboode secrees I hold hym but a foole,
Lyke hym that temptyth of wylfull neglygence,
To stonde up ryght on a three foote stoole,
Or sparyth a stewe, or fyssheth a bareyn poole.
Whan all is doon, he get noon othir grace,
Men wyl skorne hym and mokke hys foltish face.

Itt is no Crafft poore men t'assayle,
It causeth Coffers and Chestys to be bare,
Marryth wytt, and braynes doth affray;
Yit by wryting this booke doth declare,
And be Resons lyst not for to spare,
Wyth Golden Resouns in taast moost lykerous,
Thyng per Ignotum prevyd per Ignocius.

Title of this Booke Labor Philosophorum,
Namyd alsoe De Regimine principum,
Of Philosophres Secreta Secretorum,
Tresour compyled omnium Virtutum;
Rewle directory set up in a som,
As Complexions in helthe and sekeneffe,
Dyspose them sylf to mornyng or to gladnesse.

The whych booke direct to the Kyng
Alysandre both in the werre and pees,
Lyke hys request and royall commanding,
Full accomplished by Aristotiles,
Feble for Age and impotent doubtles,
Hoole of corage and trew in his entent;
T'obeye his byddyng this booke he to hym sent.

HOW

*How Aristotle declareth to King
Alysaundre of the Stonys.*

Towching the Stone of Philosophres Oold,
Of which they make moost Sovereyn meneyon ;
But there is oon as Aristotle toold ,
Which alle excelleth in Comparison,
Stoon of Stoonys moost Sovereyn of renoune ;
Towching the vertue of this rych thyng,
Thus he wrote to the most sovereyn King.

O Alysaundre grettest of dignite,
Of al this World Monark and Regent,
And of al Nacyons hast the Sovereynthe ;
Echoon to obeye and been obedyent,
And to conclude the fyn of our entent,
All worldly Trefure breefly shet in oon,
Is declaryd in vertue of this Stoon.

Thou must first conceiven in substance,
By a maneer uncouth dyvyfion ;
Watir from Eyr by a disfeverance :
And fyr from Eyr by a departicion,
Echoon preserveyd from all Corruptyon.
As Philosophres a forme have speccffyed,
Which by Reason may not be denyed.

Watir from Eyr departyd prudently,
Eyr from Fyr and Fyr from Erthe don,
The Craft conceyved devyded truly ,
Withouten Errour or Decepcyon,
Pure every Element in his Complexion.
As it perteyneth pleynty to his parte,
As is remembryd perfyghtly in this Arte.

This Stone of Colour is sometyme Citrynade,
 Lyke the Sonne stremyd in his kynd,
 Gold tressyd maketh hertes full glade ;
 With more Trefour then hath the Kyng of Inde;
 Of pretyous Stoonys wrought in their kynde.
 The Cetryn Colour for the Sonne bryght,
 Whyte for the Morne that shyneth all the nyght.

This Philosopkre brought forth in Paris,
 Which of this Stoonys wroot fully the nature,
 All the Dyvyfion set by grett advys ;
 And thereuppon did his besy cure,
 That the perfeccion long should endure,
 Lyke the entent of Aristotles sonde,
 Which none but he coud well bryng on honde.

For though the mateer opynly nat toold,
 Of this Stoonys what Phylsophres mente,
Aristotiles that was experte and Oold ;
 And he of Paris that forth this present sent,
 And in all hys behefte feythfull true of Entent :
 With Circumstances of Araby Inde & Perce,
 Towching the Stoonys that Clerkys can reherse.

Hermogenes hadde hymselfe alloone,
 With the seyd Phelip that with him was secre,
 Knewh the vertue of every prevy Stone ;
 As they were dispoosyd of Degree,
 From him was hyd noon uncouth prevyte.

This Hermogenes and he knewh every thing,
 Of alle such vertues as long to a Kyng.

THE FIRST CHAPTER.

IN the name of the holy Trinitie,
 I will write of this Worke breiflie;
 Leaving matters of circumstance,
 And promise the truth to advance:
 I will not write Figuratively,
 But declare the Matter plainly,
 And how things must be made to accord,
 By Natures true worke and the helpe of our Lord:
 The World is but one inclosed with heavens round,
 Though divers matters and formes be therein found:
 The Earth this worlds Center borne up by the Aire,
 In kinde hath noe more but being baire,
 And neereft to not being, Philosophers have told,
 In kinde of Complexion is full dry and cold;
 And now for my Figure of rotundity,
 I will shew how Elements accord and disagree:
 And though the Elements be so contrary,
 Yett by heavens Influence they are brought to unite,
 And when once together a body they binde,
 Nought may them loosen without wrecke to the kinde.
 First Fire in Nature is hott and dry,
 Aire differs from Fire in moisture only:
 Earth only for coldnesse from Fire disagrees,
 This Concord and discord every man sees:
 Aire hot and moist of complexion and kinde,
 Water differs from Aire but in heate we finde:

Soe that in moysture we finde them both one;
Naturall heate in Water we finde none;
Water cold and moiste of Complexion is,
Earth differs from Water in drynes I wis:
Earth agrees with Fire in drynes noe doubt,
Thus one in another the Wheele turnes about.
From this round Circle proceeds a quadrant,
Each line unto another an equall distant:
And as the round Figure concludes all in One,
Soe the Quadrant of foure things makes distinction.
From this Quadrant a Fire must proceed,
Which is Animall, Vegitable and Minerall we reede:
And with the Fire I will begin;
Pray God I be not too bold therein.
The whole Composition of this world is fram'd,
Of the Three things which before I have nam'd:
Now to make things of Excellencie,
We must take things neereft Nobilitie;
And as this greate Masse containes things Three,
Soe Blood, Flesh and Bone in the least World we see;
Yett lesse World and greate World is all but One;
Thus still we keepe an Unyon:
Whatsoever itt is that is alive,
Without Blood they may not thrive.
Sperme is Generation of each thing,
Of what kinde soever itt bene;
Blood is Sperme be itt White or Redd,
For without Blood each thing is dead:
Blood containeth the three things I have told,
And in his Tincture hath Nature of Gold:
Without Gold noe Mettle may shine bright,
Without Blood noe Body hath bene fitt of light:
Thus doth the greate and lesse World still,
Hold the Union according to Gods will:

Now of all things Blood Noblest is,
 For nothing in the World may itt misse,
 Blood hath true proporcion of the Elements foure,
 And of the three species I spoke of before:
 The Blood must be the principall matter of each thing,
 Which hath any manner of increasing:
 Mercury in Mettalls is the Blood certeine,
 Sperme in Animalls getts the like againe;
 Vegetable moysture from heaven so good,
 Yett all these three are but Blood:
 Then Blood in procreation is neereft of kinde,
 This Secrett good Brother keepe close in thy mynde:
 And uppon that Condition,
 Which Blood thou shalt take I will make repeticion;
 The true Blood of Mettalls is hard to have,
 And long tyme of gettingt itt doth crave:
 Blood of Vegetables hath moysture greate store,
 And therefore to have itt requireth much labour:
 The true Blood to finde without labour and cost,
 Thou knowst where to have it ere thy witts be lost.
 Seeke out the noblest as I said before,
 For now of the Matter I dare say noe more.
 This Secrett was never reveal'd till this tyme,
 By any Mans writings that ere I could finde,
 But I which by practice have found itt true,
 Knew how things caused things to renew:
 God grant noe Alchymists meete with my Booke,
 For they would have Elixir by hooke or by crooke;
 And he would spend what his Freinds wan,
 And be as neere at the last as when he began,
 And would promise to give men Gold greate store,
 But beware thou of Expence, as I said before.

CHAP. II.

Of the manner of the Worke.

NOW after the Matter the Manner compute,
 How to bring this our Worke aboute:
 First take the Matter crude as itt is,
 Which will cost you little or nought I wis:
 Scarce it soe cleane as it may be,
 Untill from filth itt is all free,
 Which wilbee done in houres three or foure,
 Then will it be cleare from his ill humour:
 Then take the Faces which you shall finde,
 In the same which the Matter left behind:
 Purge him also with the noblest Element,
 Untill that he to Earth be brent:
 Then have you a Stone of wonderfull might,
 With small Cost a secret right.
 Take ye this Stone and use Millers Craft,
 Till it be fine powder and made very soft:
 Then give him the moisture which from him ye tooke,
 Then use him as ye shall finde in this booke.
 But give him noe other Drinke but of his owne kinde,
 For elce you doe not after my mynde.
 Let him drinke noe more then will suffice,
 Beware of Floods I you advise:
 Then search him twice againe as you did before,
 And still put uppon his owne liquor:
 Thus their first Order to passe is brought,
 And your foulest Worke fully wrought.

CHAP. III.

Of the second Order.

NOW the second Manner I will shew plaine,
 How you shall worke it with little paine :
 When your three searings be done after my lore,
 Then breake the Stone as you did before:
 Then must you have one Veschell,
 Which must be made like an Eggshell,
 Into the which Vessell the Matter you must putt,
 Then see that itt be well closed upp:
 The Vessells divided in parts three,
 Whereof two still voyde must bee:
 This Vessell must be set in a kinde heate,
 That the Matter may kindly sweate;
 The Spiritts must not be opprest with Fire,
 For then thou shalt never have thy desire;
 Neither must thy Vessell have cold,
 For then itt will spoile as Philosophers have told;
 But keepe itt in a temperate heate alwayes,
 For the space of fortie dayes:
 Then Blackesse will appeare to sight,
 That Blacknesse thou must bring to be White.
 Take out the Glasse at the forty dayes end,
 And se that from cold thou doe itt defend;
 And set itt in a Furnace with dry fire,
 Till itt be White after thy desire,
 Which wilbe done in Weekes three,
 And dried from his moysture utterly :

Then

Then with the first Water thou first didst imbibe
 Again thou maist feede it att this tyde,
 But give itt noe more, nor you doe thinke
 May suffice at once for itt to drinke,
 This done putrefy as you did before,
 Even in the very selfe same maner,
 And in the said tyme which it stooode before,
 Itt will becom of blacke Colour,
 And in the same Order if it congeale White,
 Then is your Worke both perfect and right;
 Now you must goe lerne the Bakers occupacion,
 How he Leavens Bread by Fermentacion;
 And truly to Ferment take noe plate of Gold,
 But parte of that the plates doe hold.
 You know that if Sol shew not a faire Tincture,
 Itt will be had but in little honour,
 Then Tincture of Gold is a most noble thing,
 With a grace to noble men of our workeing;
 For that true proverbe doth well accord,
Base things besitt not a noble Lord.
 Now have I told you what Ferment is,
 To teach you to Ferment I will not misse;
 This Chapter is now brought to an end,
 And now the third Order to shew I intend.

CHAP. IV.

Of the third Order of this Worke.

RECIPE Sol that is pure and good,
 And see that from him you take his pure blood,
 Your Stone you must divide in parts three,
 And the fourth of the Ferment must be.

If you will have for Red, and White too,
 To Red after this Order you must doe,
 And the White after the same,
 Must be ferment with Lane by name,
 And the matter equally divyde
 One for the Red, the other for the White.
 Another like Vessell for the White you must looke,
 As before is taught you in this Booke.
 When your Ferments to your matters be put,
 Then your Vessell close you must shut;
 And sett it to Putrifye as you did before,
 The full tyme as I said of yore:
 And use itt in every degree,
 As in the next Chapter before you may see.
 But looke that you knowe your two Ferments assunder,
 Or elce of your folly itt were great wonder:
 And when from his Blacknesse you have brought itt
 Then have you Elixir of wonderfull might: White,
 Your Red to his perfection is not fully brought,
 But your White is perfectly wrought.
 Your Red with most strong heate must be fedd
 In a close Furnace untill itt be Redd:
 When itt is Redd and will melt like waxe,
 Then of all that should be nothing laxe.
 Now have you a Stone of wonderfull might,
 Which will take Mercury before his flight,
 And command him to stay, and cause him to bring
 All Mettalls unto him, and call him their Kinge,
 And make such obedyence without Digression,
 That of him they shall all take Impression;
 Now have you a Stone of wonderfull power,
 Which containeth the three Species and the Elements
 Fire in Colour, Water by Effusion, (foure:
 Earth to sight without delusion,

Aire is in Water all men doe knowe,
 And thus the foure Elements accordeth nowe:
 As for the three Species I will shewe,
 How in your Stone you may them knowe:
 Tincture for Blood pertaineth to the Animall,
 Moysture the Vegetable part possesse shall;
 All Earth is Minerall without any doubt,
 Thus keepe we in one Circle and never goe out.
 Now have I my Figure perfectly wrought,
 Yett of the Center I have said right nought.
 A Center is a pricke of whatsoever itt be,
 Without any manner of divisibilitie;
 And made as Nature doth well provide,
 So as no Accident may itt divide:
 Only by hand but in the Quantitie,
 But by noe Element seperate the Qualitie;
 If in greate Fire you sett it downe,
 A true Salamander itt wilbe found;
 If in the Water thou throwe I wis,
 It will live there as doth a Fish;
 If in the Aire you cast it up hye,
 There will it live, and never dye:
 If in the Earth thou bury itt fast,
 Then will it remaine there, and ever last.
 Thus can no Element divide without doubt,
 The Center which our Wheele turnes about:
 Now how to Multiply your Medicine I trow,
 Would doe you much good for to knowe;
 For unlesse you know howe to Multiply,
 Your Medicine will be spent quickly:
 Then would itt put thy minde to much paine,
 To thinke that thou must make itt againe:
 Therefore the next Chapter shall teach thee right,
 To Multiply this Stone of wonderfull might.

C H A P. V.

How to Multiply.

NOW in this Chapter I meane to shewe,
 How to Multiply that thou may knowe :
 If Iron to the Load-stone be not put certainly,
 Itt will decreace wonderfully ;
 The Species of all things both more and lesse each one,
 Are mainteyned by reason of Multiplication ;
 Then if they be not Multiplied they decay,
 But Multiplication makes them be all away.
 All things after Conception receive naturall Food,
 To mainteine their kind as Nature seeth good :
 Soe likewise our Stone must needs Multiply,
 Or elce the Species of that Stone will dye :
 And Multiplication must needs be of such thing,
 As the thing multiplied takes best likeing.
 Fire which burneth perpetually,
 If Matter want Fire will dye ;
 But for to feed our Stone rightly,
 The way I will shewe presently.
 Take your Glasse and Medicine withall,
 And in a warme Fire sett itt you shall ;
 And when itt begins to liquefy,
 Put common Mercury to itt by and by ;
 And itt wilbe devoured anon
 By vertue of heate that is in our Stone,
 And as much as you putt in quantitie,
 Soe much doth your Medicine augment truly :
 Yett you must have reason not for to cloye,
 With overmuch cooling, kind heate thereby :

And

And as of a Dragme you will make a Pounce,
 You may well do itt, if you keep round ;
 And when it is Multiplied sufficiently,
 Then from the Fire set it by.

A man in this Land once I knewe,
 That marred that he made, and so may yowe ;
 Except ye doe as I have taught,
 And then neede you to feare nought.
 Another I knewe which wanted good direccion,
 And at once spent all at one projection.
 These knew not howe itt should be multiplyed,
 Which things I have taught you at this tyde ;
 But see that the Mercury wherewith ye Multiply,
 Be made soe cleane as itt may be.

Now to make him extend his perfection,
 It is needfull to know how to make projection :
 Whereof in the next Chapter I will treat,
 For of Multiplicacion I will noe more speake.

CHAP. VI. Of Projection.

NOW lacke we but onely this Lesson to take,
 Perfectly projection for to make :
 Take one parte of the Medicine, and of γ h or Tinn,
 But see that you make them exceeding cleane ;
 And when your Mettall doth Liquefy,
 Then cast in your parte of Medicine quickly.
 Then will it be brought to such a passe,
 That all will be as brittle a glasse ;
 Take the brittle substance as it is,
 And upon an (100.) to take doe not misse.
 That 100. uppon 1000. soe still increase you may,

And project noe more when your Tincture doth decay.
 This projection is sure without any doubt,
 Thus is our Wheele turned round about.
 In what Vessell to project I need not to tell,
 For a Maister of his Arte knoweth it very well;
 To project on Mettalls nowe you knowe,
 And to project on mans body nowe will I shewe.
 First the Body must be purged well,
 And by swetting and bathing be made suttell.
 And when you are cleane according to your minde,
 Take a dragme of your Medicine with the Quintessence of Such a suddeine alteration itt will showe, (Wine;
 As you need not to feare Corruption noe moe :
 Nowe of his Vertues I need not to declare,
 They are fully shewne by others elce-where.
 Now to the holy Trinitie I thee commend,
 Thanking him my Worke is at an end :
 Chargeing thee this Secret from bad men to keepe,
 Though with greate Importance of thee they itt seeke ;
 And beware itt goe not from thy hand,
 Except to a perfect honest man.
 By Bookes the true Worke I could never finde,
 Therefore left I this Booke behinde,
 That to whose share soever itt might fall,
 By itt they might know our Secretts all.
 God grant noe Multipler meete with my Booke,
 Nor noe sinister Clerkes thereon to looke;
 Then will they pay their debts surely,
 And build Churches, and Steeples very hye ;
 Keepe itt from these folkes I thee pray,
 As thou wilt answere before God att last day :
 For whatsoever hath bin said to our worke doth accord,
 Therefore give honour, prayse, and thanks to our Lord;
 Holy and Reverend be his Name,
 Which to me vile Synner hath revealed the same.

THE HERMET'S TALE.

IN Pilgrimage one onely thing I found
Of worth in Lemnes nere to Vulcan's shopp,
A Chrifstall founteine running under ground ;
Between a Vally and a Mountaines topp.
Pleas'd with this sight, I bid a Hermite tell
The story of the place, who there did dwell.

Within this Vale a hallowe dusky Cave
There is (quoth he) of greate Antiquity,
Where plumes of Mars blew greene and red you have :
Torne from his crest for his Iniquity.
The Troope of Smiths, as he for Venus lay,
Surpris'd and tooke him, yett he gett away.

For as the Cyclops him in tryumph brought,
To halting Vulcan to receive his doome,
They lifted up his beaver, and found nought
But vacant place and Armour in the roome.
Of th'armour then they thought they had good prize,
But working it they found itt scyendarize.

The Smiths amaz'd finding themselves deluded,
Satt all in Counsaile in their Masters Denne ,
Deliberating well, at length concluded,
There is no equall War twixt Godds and men,
Lett's finde the Angry God and pardon crave,
Lett's give him Venus our poore selves to save.

They

They fought in Heaven Mars knew his fact so bad,
 He came out there, then one began to tell,
Saturne turn'd from his Throne, a Place had
 Not far from thence, hard by this Christall Well.
 Thither they wen, and found two Gods alone,
 Sitting within a darke, but glittering throne.

Downe fell old Vulcan on his crooked knee,
 And said forgive, O mighty God of Warr,
 My servants and my selfe (once God as yee)
 Then use thy will with Venus my faire starr.
Saturne (quoth Mars) and I must not yet part,
 Though shee for whom th'art pard'ned hath my heart.

With this the Cuckold with his sweaty Troope
 Went to his Forge and seem'd to make a legg,
 Att every steppe, where halting made him stoope,
 In thanks to Mars, granting what he did begg;
 In whose remembrance you shall ever have
 Syndars, and fetters in that hollow Cave.

But lett me tell you all that then befell,
Iove seeing this, meaning the Smith to right,
 Sent downe a winged God, he trusted well,
 Disguis'd in habitt of a shineing light,
 Which to the Vally from the Hill's high topp,
 Affrighted all the smiths in *Vulcan*s shopp.

A voyce was heard from Ioves Embassadour,
 To summon Mars t'appeare before the Gods:
 With Saturne forth came Venus Paramour:
 Thinkeing with might to gett of right the odds:
 Downward came he 9. myles, they upward fower,
 All mett in mist, he fledd, they nere went lower.

Vulcan

Vulcan came hobling up to se what's done,
He findes nor light, nor Gods, but other shape;
To witnesse of this fact he calls the Sonne,
Who streight cryes Murther, and made hast to scape:
Some dyeing Soule groan'd forth, Apollo stay,
Helpe wise Apollo ere thou goest away.

With this Apollo lookeing round about,
Espies this fountaine knowes the voice was here,
And boweing downe to finde the party out,
Himselfe unto himselfe doth streight appeare.

There gaz'd he till a sturdy showre of rayne
Tooke wise Apollo from himselfe againe.

Farewell Apollo then Apollo sayd,
To morrow when this storme is fully past,
Ile turne and bring some comfortable ayd,
By which Ile free thee ere the latter cast.

Then did itt cry as if the voyce were spent,
Come sweete Apollo, soe itt downwards went.

Vulcan went to his Forge, the Sonne to bed,
But both were up betimes to meete againe;
Next morne after the storme a pale soule dead
Was found att bottome of this faire Fountaine.

Smith (said Apollo) helpe to lade this spring,
That I may raise to life yonder dead thing.

Then Vulcan held Apollo by the heele,
While he lades out the Waters of the Well;
Boweing and straining made Apollo feele
Blood from his nose, that in the fountaine fell.

Vulcan (quoth he) this Accident of blood
Is that or nought must doe this Creature good.

He spake the word, and Vulcan sawe itt done,
 Looke Sol (said he) I see itt changeth hue,
 Fewe Gods have vertue like to thee ô Sonne,
 From pale itt is become a ruddy blue;
Vulcan (quoth Phæbus) take itt to thy forge,
 Warme it, rubb it, lett itt caste the Gorge.

Thus Vulcan did, itt spued the Waters out,
 And then itt spake and cry'de itt was a cold;
 Then Vulcan stufte and cloath'd it round about,
 And made the Stone as hott as ere itt would.
 Thus fourteene dayes itt sickly did indure,
 The Sonne came every day to se the cure.

As itt grewe well the Colours went and came,
 Blew, Blacke, White, Redd, as by the warmth & heate,
 The humours moved were within the same,
 Then Phæbus bid him put it in a sweate;
 Which Vulcan plyde soe well, it grue all Red,
 Then was itt sound, and cald for drinke and bread.

Stay (quoth Apollo) though itt call for meate,
 Digestion yett is werke, 'twill breede relapse,
 By surfett, therefore ere you lett itt eate,
 Some little exercise were good perhapps,
 Yett had itt broath alowde the strength to keepe,
 But when 'twas on his leggs it would scarce creepe.

Sol sawe some reliques left of th'ould disease,
 A solutine (quoth he) were good to clense,
 With which the sicknesse he did so appease,
 Health made the Patyent seeke to make amense;
 Who went away three weekes, then brought a Stone,
 That in projection yeelded ten for one.

This did he lay downe att Apollo's feete,
And said by curcing one th'hast saved three :
Which three in this one present joyntly meete,
Offering themselves which are thine owne to thee.
Be our Physitian, and as we growe old,
Wee'le bring enough to make new worlds of Gold.

With that this Hermite tooke me by the hand .
And ledd me to his Cell ; Loc here (quoth he)
Could'st thou but stay, and truly understand
What thou now seest, thou knowst this Mystery.

*I stayd, I saw, I tryde, and understood,
A Heav'n on Earth, an everlasting good.*

D I S C R I P T I O N
of the S T O N E.

THough Daphne fly from Phæbus bright,
 Yet shall they both be one,
 And if you understand this right,
 You have our hidden Stone.
 For Daphne she is faire and white:
 But Volatile is she,
Phæbus a fixed God of might,
 And red as blood is he.
Daphne is a Water Nymph,
 And hath of Moysture store,
 Which Phæbus doth consume with heate,
 And dryes her very sore.
 They being dryed into one,
 Of christall flood must drinke,
 Till they be brought to a white Stone:
 Which wash with Virgins milke,
 So longe untill they flow as wax,
 And no fume you can see,
 Then have you all you neede to aske,
 Praise God and thankfull be.

The standing of the Glasse for the tyme of the Putrifaction, & Congelation of the MEDICINE.

THe Glasse with the Medicine must stand in the fyre
Forty dayes till it be Blacke in sight; (desire,
Forty dayes in the Blacknesse to stand he will
And then forty dayes more, till itt be White,
And thirty in the drying if thou list to doe right;
And then is the Sulphur perfectly Calcinate,
To drinke up his moysture for him, being preparete.

In this tyme the Glasse neither open nor shutt,
But still let him stand all the aforesaid dayes,
Not once from the Furnace that ye take him upp :
For by Cooling the Matter the Medicine decayes,
Therefore you must Fire continue alwayes,
In one measure and temperatenes of heate,
Untill all be White, and the Sulphur compleate.

This heate sufficeth for this principle one,
Which is the cheife ground of our Secretts all,
Without which Knowledg thou must not make the Stone,
If thou labour thy lyfe tyme, not prosper thou shall,
Therefore merry beware thou doe not fall.

But first truly learne, before thou beginne,
And so to true workeing thou shalt the better wyne.

Follow this Booke, and wander not aside
 Out of the way, to the left hand, nor the right,
 But streight betweene both directly you guide
 Thy Worke, soe as I to thee doe write,
 For in this Booke I will thee plainly excite,
 How thou shalt make the Philosophers Lead,
 That is Elixir to the White and the Redd.

And then the Golden Oyle called Aurum potable,
 A Medicine most meruelous to preserve Mans health,
 And of Transmutation the greatest that can bee,
 For in the same Oyle is nothing but wealth;
 Then glorious he is in the power of himselfe:
 For noe sicknesse can stand where he is in place,
 Nor povertie dwell in the pleasures of his Face.

Enigma

Ænigma Philosophicum.

T Here is no light, but what lives in the Sunne;
 There is no Sunne, but which is twice begott;
Nature and Arte the Parents first begonne:
 By Nature 'twas, but Nature perfects not.
Arte then what Nature left in hand doth take,
 And out of One a Twofold worke doth make.

A Twofold worke doth make, but such a worke
 As doth admitt Divisiō none at all
 (See here wherein the Secret most doth lurke)
 Unlessse it be a Mathematicall.

It must be Two, yet make it One and One,
 And you do take the way to make it None.

Lo here the Primar Secret of this Arte,
 Contemne it not but understand it right,
 Who faileth to attaine this formost part,
 Shall never know Artes force nor Natures might.

Nor yet have power of One and One so mixt,
 To make by One fixt, One unfixt fixt.

*In some Coppies I have found these Verses placed before Pearce the Black Monk,
upon the E L I X I R.*

AN and Woman God hath wrought,
And full mykle fruite forth they brought,
So multiplyeth the workes of our heaven
And yet come they but of one thing. (King
Now quod Marlin what may that be ?
The flithe of the Yearth so say we:

Yearth it was, some Men would say nay,
And yet was it nether cleane yearth sand ne clay,
But the feces of yearth it was of Colour grey,
Which then turned to yearth as it on yearth lay.
The Water turned to blude to make man stronge,
The Ayre and Fire was medled theare amonge.
How be Ayre and Fire quod Marlin ?
Through the workes of our Lord quod Martin.
For the brightnes of the holy Ghost is the Aire,
And the lightnes that gafe lyfe is Fyre.
Wheare hast thowe goe too Scolle to learne all this ?
For that thou sayest is right true I wisse ;
And I suppose it in thic thought,
That with iiii. Spirits it must be wrought.
Nay your Spirits are too wilde quoth Marlin againe,
Therefore I will not medle with them certaine:
I will have a Spirit made by kinde naturally,
That will abide with every body kindly ;
Such a Spirit could I macke quod Marlin,
And yet men would hold yt but in veyne.

And yet of all workes it is the best,
 Lest of Cost and most surest:
 For if it should faile then were we done all,
 And therefore for the most parfitest worke we it call;
 It is so rich when it is wrought,
 Though all the world were turned to nought:
 As mennye rich bodyes agayn make would he,
 As ever were or ever should be.

Take Earth of Earth, Earths Brother, &c.

I have seene an old Coppy of the said work of Pearce the Black Monk, to the end of which these following Verses were joyned.

NOW of this Matter derke and nothing clere,
 An Exposition I doe make here;
 Wherein I charge you secre to be,
 That friend ne foe doe yt se;
 Erth hyd within the bodies center is most fine,
 Water of Wood Effell of Wine,
 For by the moyster of the Grape,
 This centrall Earth who can it take;
 It and Sercion do our Maistry make,
 For it shall become Mercuriall,
 And after that Essentiall.
 But now beware that you not faile,
 For then you loose your greate travaile,
 Whan you have drawne owte of the Gum,
 All the Mercury that wyll come,
 Understand that Lycowres three
 In that Mercury conteyned be;

The firſt is the Watur of lyfe Ardent,
 By Bath departed that is moſt lent;
 It burneth as Aquavite by live,
 And is called our Mercury attractive,
 Wherewith is made Earth Chriſtalline,
 Out of all Collours Metallyne:
 I ſpeke no more thereof as yet,
 For in this worke we neede not it.
 Then runneth a Water after thilke,
 Litle in quantity white as mylke;
 Whych ys ſperme or nature of our Stone,
 That is earneſtly fought of many one:
 For of Man, Beſte, and every thyng,
 Sperme is there begynyng,
 Therefore we our Mercury do it call.
 Whych ys found here and there and over all,
 For wythout yt ys nothyng lyvyng,
 Wherefore yt ys in every thyng:
 As well in thyngs moſt preciouſe,
 As in thyngs moſt vyle and odious;
 Of yt they have there firſt nature,
 Thys moyſter to you as now is clere,
 Thys ys the Mercury that we call
 Vegetable, Minerall and Animall:
 Our Quickſilver and our lac Virginis,
 Our Water permanent forſooth yt ys;
 Wyth thys Water Mercuriall,
 We waſch the fylth Originall
 Of our Erth tyll yt be whyte,
 Lyke a Gumm that floweth lyte,
 By dry fyre after that ſchale cume
 Oyle wherewyth we make red Gumm:
 Wych ys our Tincture and our Sulfur vive,
 The ſoule of Saturne the Golde of life.

Our Tincture and our airy Gould,
 Wych before was never so plainly tould ;
 God graunt that I do no displeasure
 To hym in fulfilling your desire.

Now Elements be divided every one,
 Wyth thys Oyle make red your Stone;
 Owre Gumms two then have schall ye,
 Wythout the wych no Elixir may be.
 They go the Body and the Spirits betwixt,
 Wythowte the wych our Ston cannot be fixt,
 And makyth of hym in a lytle space,
 Two Elixirs by Gods Grace :
 Whereby are trewly alterate,
 All Metalline Bodies into a better state,
 Wyth Sol and Luna equall to be,
 To helpe us in our necessitie.
 Now thanked be God most gracious,
 Wych hath this Secret lent to us,
 Hys grace therewyth to us he leave,
 To our Soules helth us for to meve.

THIS

This following Fragment in some copies I have found placed at the end of the aforegoing Exposition of Pearce the Black Monke. In others, immediately before and bearing this Tytle,

A CONCLUSION.

TAKE Wynde and Water, white and greene,
And thereof draw a lac Virgine;
Where some it call a water cleere,
The which water hath no Peere;
And then make your Fier stronger,
When the white fume doth appeare;
Chaunge your Receiver and continue longer:
And then shall you see come a Fire,
Red as blood and full of Yre.

*Quod dicitur menstruum fatens, & sol philosophorum,
In quo fit nostra dissolutio, & congelatio.
Sublimatio, attractio, & etiam fixatio,
Et Sulphuris nostri, sive foliati creatio.*

With

With hic and with hac thus may ye do,
 As Husband and Wife together them wed;
 Put them in a chamber both two,
 And shet fast the dore when they be a bed.
 The woman is both wanton and wilde,
 With her husband she cannot rest,
 Till she have conceived a Child;
 Of all his kin he shall be best.
 He is a Childe of the Elements
 Both by Father and by Mother,
 None so worthy in presence,
 Not perfect Sol his owne Brother.
Sol and Luna owe unto him obedience,
 And all that him needes they to him bring,
Saturne doth to him obefance,
 Howbeit he is next of his kinne:
 There is neither Emperour or Kinge,
 But of his presence they would be glad,
 If he from them were one yeare wanting;
 In their hearts they would be full sad.
 In riches he exceedeth all other,
 The Elements in him are so even,
Luna is his Sister, and Sol is his Brother,
 His Father dwelleth among the planets seaven.
Nulla virtus mineralibus where shall we him seeke,
Sit tibi principium principale Councell we must it keepe;
Reperitur ubiq; localis by way in every streete.

An other Conclusion.

First Calcine and after Putrefie,
 Dissolve, distill, sublime, discend and fix
 With Aquavite oftymes wash and dry;
 And make a marriage of Body & Soul the Spirit betwixt.
 Which thus together naturally if ye cannot mix,
 Then shall the Body utterly dye in the flix.
 Bleeding and changing Collours as ye shall see,
 In bus and nubi he shall uprise and descend;
 First up to the Moone and after up to the Sun,
 Onely shipped within a litle glazen Tunne.
 When he commeth thether, then is all the Maistry wonne,
 About which Journey great goods ye shall not spend,
 And ye shall be Glad that ever it was begun;
 Patiently if ye list, to your worke to attend.
 Who so shall our Pearle and our Ruby make,
 Our Principle let him not forsake:
 For at the beginning if his Principle be trew,
 And that he can by craft so him bake;
 Trewly at the end his Worke shall him not rew.

The whole Scyence.

T Here is a bodi of a Bodi,
And a Soule and a Spryte,
Wyth two Bodyes must be knete.

There ben two Erthys as I the telle,
And two Waters wyth hem do dwelle;
The ton ys Whyte the tother is Red,
To quick the Bodies that ben ded.

And oon Fyre in Nature y hydd,
And oon Ayre with hem that doth the dede.
And all hyt commeth out of onn kynde,
Marke thys well Man and beare yt yn mynde.

T Ake Mercury from Mercury which is his wyfe,
For Mercury wife to Mercury maketh greate stryfe:
But Mercurys wyfes Wyfe,
To Mercury maketh no stryfe.

A ND thou wed Mercury to Mercury with her wyfe,
Then shall Mercury and Mercury be merry with-(outen stryfe:
For Mercuries Wyfe to Mercury maketh greate stryfe,
But Mercuries wyfe's wyfe to Mercury maketh no stryf.

A Riddle to you I will propose,
Of a Comon thing which most men knowes,
Which now in the Earth very reefe doth grow,
But is of small Price as all men know;
And that without roote, stalke or seede,
Wherewith of his kinde another to breede:
Yet of that nature, that it cannot cease,
If you plant it by peeces it selfe to increase,
Right heavy by kinde, yet forced to fly,
Starke nought in the purse, yet good in the Eye,
This something is nothing which seemeth full strange,
Having tasted the fire which maketh the change:
And hath many Collours yet sheweth but one,
This is the materiall of our STONE.

I Asked Philosophy how I should
Have of her the thing I would,
She answered me when I was able,
To make the Water malliable,
Or else the way if I could finde,
To mesure out a yard of Winde:
Then shalt thou have thyne owne desire,
When thou canst weigh an ounce of Fire:
Unlesse that thou canst doe these three,
Content thy selfe, thou get'st not me.

L Et the old man drinke wine till he pisse:
 The meanes to the blest Stone is:
 And in that menstrous water drowne,
 The radiant brightnes of the Moone,

Pag. 6. lin. 1. TO the honor of God——

From the first word of this Proeme, and the Initial letters of the six following Chapters (discovered by Acromonossyllabiques and Syllabique Acrostiques) we may collect the Authors Name and place of Residence: For those letters, (together with the first line of the seventh Chapter) speak thus,...

Thomas Norton of Brisseto;

A parfet Master ye maie him trowe.

Such like Fancies were the results of the wisdom and humility of the Ancient Philosophers, (who when they intended not an absolute concealment of Persons, Names, Misteries, &c.) were wont to hide them by Transpositions, Acrostiques, Isoagrammatiques, Symphoniques, and the lyke, (which the searching Sons of Arte might possibly unriddle, but) with designe to continue them to others, as concealed things; And that upon the Question no other Answer should be returned, then the like of the (a) Angell's to Manoah. [His name was Peli, to wit, admirable and secret.] (a) Iudg. 13¹⁸.

In imitation of whome, tis probable our Author (not so much affecting the vanity of a Name as to assist the lovers of Wisdom) thus modestly and ingenuously unvailes himselfe; Although to the generality of the world he meant to passe unknowne, as appears by his owne words:

(b) If oz that I desire not worldly fame,
 What your good prayers unknowne shall be my name.

(b) Nort. Ordinal. pag. 6.

(c) Iohn Pitts from Iohn Bale, and (d) he from Robert Record, relates, that this Thomas Norton, was Alchymista suo tempore peritissimus, and much more curious in the Studies of Philosophy then others, yet they passe some undecent and abusive Gensures upon him, with reference to this vaine and frivolous (d) De Script. pag. 666.

Science, as they are pleas'd to tearme it, (and a better opinion I find not they had even of the Hermetick learning it selfe.) Indeed, every one that is educated a Scholler, is not borne to aff. Et or be happy in every Art, some love one, some another, but few All. And this ariseth from the various Influences of the Stars, which beget sundry Inclinations and Affections in Men, according to the different Constitutions and Temperatures of their Bodies; so that commonly what either a man does not affect, or know, he despises or cendemnes, yet seldome with any shew of Reason. But it is no good Conclusion for Blinde men to affirme the Sun has no light, because they were never so happy as to see it. For though thy selfe (saith Conwrath) art ignorant of a Matter, 'tis not denied to others to know the same. However, our Author was so happy as to become a Master of this Science very early: which he learned in (e) forty dayes, and when he was

In the time of Hen 8. there flourished Nyne Brothers of the family of the Nortons and all Knights, one of them (viz.) Sir Sampson Norton, Master of the Ordinance to the said King (an Office of greate Honour, and not usually conferred but upon Men very eminent) lyes buried in (i) Fulham Church nere London, whose Tombe was adorned with severall Hermeticke, Hieroglyphicall paintings, which have lately perisht by the Ignorant & ale of those that understood them not.

Pag. 111. 7. That no Man, for better ne for worse,

Doubtlesse Norton was truly sensible of the high injuries done to learned men through the Erronious Transcriptions of their Bookes, and had shared in the unimaginable misfortune which thereby befell the then Students in Philosophy, for he lived in those tymes that could not afford him the use of any other Bookes save onely Manuscripts (Printing having not lerved an Apprentiship to k) The first Print-England (k) when he wrote this Ordinall) & in that regard he layes this weighty ting-Presse was charge upon unfaithfull Scribes who negligently or wilfully alter their Copy, set up in West- whereby the wariest Students are encombred with doubts, and misled, or plunged min. Abbey by into unhappy Errors. Symon I slip.

How ordinary a fault this was amongst the Transcribers of former times An. 1471 and may appeare by Chaucer, who (I am confident) tooke asgreate care as any man William Caxton to be served with the best and heedefullest Scribes, and yet we finde him com- the first that playning against Adam his Scrivener for the very same: praised in there.

But as in other Artes and Sciences the fault is scarce pardonable, so chiefly in Hermetique learning, where the Injury may prove irreparable.

(m) And chaunging of some one Syllable,
May make this Woke unprofitable.

m) Ord. p. 11.

Pag. 33. l. 13. If I shulde write I shulde my fealty break
Therefore Mouth to Mouth I must needes speake.

THis is part of the Letter which Norton's Master wrote when he invited him to come and receive the Secret by word of Mouth, for without breach of his Oath he durst not commit it to writing, lest he might cast the Childrens Bread to Dogs.

In like manner Aristotle refused to communicate to Alexander by Letter, things apperteyning to this Mystery, untill a personall meeting might allow him to do it viva voce: for thus writes Lydgate out of Aristotles Secreta secretorum.

There be Secrees of Materis hyh and lowe,

Hyd in Nature conceyld and secree,

Which Alyandre desired for to knowe;

By Aristotles a certyn prebitce,

That specified cloos in hym self kept he,

Which was delayed of grete providence,

Till he hymself came to his presence.

And this was for fear his Writings should come to the view of such whose Eyes were not worthy the perusall of so sublime Secrets, and thereby suffer under the contempt of the prophane Vulgar, or by wicked men be abused to wicked uses. (For a Secret discovered will not faile of doing Injury to one party or an other) which (if by his meanes it should happen) might render him Criminall before God, and a presumptuous violator of the Celestiall Scales.

Cap. 2.

However the ancient Philosophers have used writings, and they as well obscure as obvious, whereby the Ignorant might be more Ignorant, but the Wise understand and profit, the one be deceived, the other alured: And like Aristotle who (publishing his Aromaticall Discipline and) being therefore taxed by Alexander (because he alone had learned them of him) answered Se scripsisse, &

However, they seldome left the World before they left some written Legacy behind them, which (being the issue of their Braine) stood in roome and place of Children, and becomes to us both Parent and Schoolmaster, throughout which they were so universally kinde, as to call all Students by the deare and affectionate Tytle of Sons (t) (Hermes giving t) in Pimand. the first President) wishing all were such, that take the paines to tread their Fathers stepps, and industriously follow the Rules and Dictates they made over to posterity, and wherein they faithfully discovered the whole Mystery;

In these Legitimate Children they lived longer then in their Adopted Sons, for though these certainly perished in an Age, yet their Writings (as if when they dyed their Souls had been Transmigrated into them) seemed as Immortal, enough at least to perpetuate their Memories, till Time should be no more. THE Conjecture has much of probability in it which speakes this the Wife of Will. Cannings, who was 5. tymes Major, of Bristol, contemporary with Norton, and whose wealth was farr beyond the best of those tymes, as appears by that notable Worke of his in building Saint Mary of Radcliff without the Walls of Bristol, into which Church there is a Stately ascent upon many Staires, so large withall, so finely and curiously wrought, with an arched Roofe over head of stone, artificially Imbowed; a Steeple also of an exceeding height, that all the parish Churches in England which hitherto I have seene (saith judicious (a) Camden) in my judgement it surpasseth many degrees.

What was contained within the lower compasse of the said T. which in the Original Manuscript was like a Capitall Secretary T. seemes (in my judgement) a Coate of Armes, for although it was not drawne in the forme of a shield or Scutcheon, yet within the compasse of the Letter (which I take to be the field) was Azure, a Gryphon Rampant, with Wings displayed, Argent. Pa. 61. li. 7. But the cheife Mistis among Sciences all
 For the helpe of this Tree, is Magick naturall,

Judiciall Astrologie is the Key of Naturall Magick, and Naturall Magick the Doore that leads to this Blessed Stone.

Howbeit, the Ignorance and Malice of some times, and the common Custome of ours has most falsly and abusively called Necromancy (and what other Arts are raised from the Doctrine of Devils,) Magick; without affording that just and due distinction which ought to be made betweene them: and what greater Injury to learning then without Distinction to confound Laudable knowledge, with what is Impious and Devilish? For, if there be any thing in (what we call) Magick, other then a searching into those hidden vertues which God has been pleas'd to bestow upon created things (though closely lockt up by the generall Curse) whereby we may aptly and naturally apply Agents to Patients, I say, if in it there be any thing else, they are only subtill falsehoods that shelter and shroud themselves under that Tytle, and which would gladly be esteemed Leaves of that Plant, from whose Root they never sprung. And therefore is it not lesse absurd, then strange, to see how some Men (who would have the World account them learned, and whome I beleive to be so learned, as to have read and found what Latitude is due to the word Magus, how it is accepted by the Judicious, and what a vast difference there is, betweene the Doctrine of a Magician, and the abuse of the Word) will not forbear to ranke True Magicians with Conjurers, Necromancers and Witches (those grand Impostors) who (n) vi. n) Paracel. de.
 olently intrude themselves into Magick, as if Swine should enter into a faire and de- occult Phil. cap.
 licate Garden, and (being in league with the Devil) make use of his Affi- 11.
 stance in their workes, to counterfeit and corrupt the admirall wisdom of the Magi, between whom there is as large a difference as betweene Angels and Devils M m m 2 The

The Magick here intended, and which I strive to Vindicate, is, Divine, True, of the Wisdom of Nature, & indeed comprehendeth the whole Philosophy of Nature, being (o) a Perfect Knowledge of the works of God, and their Effects. It is that, which (p) reduces all naturall Philosophy from variety of Speculations to the magnitude of workes, and (q) whose Mysterries are far greater then the naturall Philosophy now in use and reputation will reach unto. For by the bare application of Actives to Passives it is able to exercise a kind of Empire over Nature, and worke wonders: and 'tis from the ignorance of such marvelous Operations that the Ignorant, (viz. the most learned in other things (as well as the Illiterate) if they be not learned in this,) either by an unwarrantable adoration esteeme them as Miracles, which onely are the workes of Naturall or Mathematicall Philosophy: or else (which is an Errour as wide on the left hand) forthwith censure and slander those truly Naturall as Diabolically, because wonderful strange and beyond the randome of their Apprehensions. The latter of which might as well say (r) Jacobs practising to make his Lambs of a Py'd Colour was performed by the assistance or ministry of the Devill, and as well condemn the use of Phisick, because the Devill has taught Witches divers harmful and uncharitable uses of Herbs, Minerals, Excrements, &c.

And as in some dull ages, and among some Grosse Spirits it has proved dangerous to be Learned, Witnesse our Renowned Roger Bacon, whom (Together with Artepheus, Arnold, de villa nova, who were Philosophers of known reputation & credit) (s) Wierus reckons among the Deplorati ingenii homines (t) all whose Workes fairely written and well bound, were by Religious pretending Sciolists dam'd as Devillish, with long Nails through them fastned to desks in the Franciscan Library at Oxford, and there with Dust and Moths consumed: Even so our other famous Country-man [Profound Ripley] was also abused, (u) who after his death is said to have been branded with the name of a Necromancer. Pope Silvester the second pass'd for a Magician (in the worst sence) because he understood Geometry; and about 150. yeares agoe (so blind an age was it,) that to know Greece and Necromancy were one and the same thing; in opinion of the Illiterate. However, let the Ignorant scoffe and attribute that to Decoyt and Illusion which is the proper worke of Nature produced by exquisite knowledge, I am confident the ingeniously learned will approve and admire it.

But to reare off that ugly viçard which Envy has placed before the Face of so Divine a Beauty, and to make way for the meaning of our Author, I thinke it necessary (in the first place) that I touch upon the Word, that gives a name to the Professors;

And that is Magus (primitively a Persian word) which onely signifies or imports a Contemplator of Heavenly and Divine Sciences, a studious Observer, an expounder of Divine things, a name (saith (w) Marcellus Ficinus) gratious in the Gospell, not signifying a Witch or a Conjurer, but a wise man and a Priest. And in truth a true Magician, acknowledges God, to be the true Cause and Giver of life and vertue to Nature, and all Naturall things, of the Causes of which things (as also of (x) Divine) is the whole scope and effect of all their Writings and Discourses:

In the Next place, that I give the Definition of Magick (because as (y) Myrandula sayes) it is an Art which few understand and many reprehend, and therefore of necessity to be clearly evinc'd:) Receive it from a learned hand: youle finde it worth your observance.

Magick, is, the Connexion of naturall Agents and Patients, answerable each to other, wrought by a wise Man to the bringing forth of such effects as are wonderful to those that know not their causes. Thus Hee. Paracelsus called it (z) a most secret z) De Occult. and hidden Science of supernaturall things in the Earth, that whatsoever is impossible to be found out by mans Reason may by this Art. And shortly after to cleere it from imputations adds, that tis in it selfe most pure and not defiled with Cerimonies nor Conjurations as Necromancy is. Phil. cap. 11.

Agreeable to both (but more copiously delivered) is that of Corn: Agrippa, who affirms, (a) Magick to containe the profoundest Contemplation of most secret things, together with the nature, power, quality, substance, and vertues thereof, as also the knowledge of whole nature: That instructs us concerning the difference and agreement, of things amongst themselves, whence it produceth its wonderful effects, by uniting the vertues of things through the application of them one to the other, and to their inferiour suitable Subjects, joyning and knitting them together throughly by the powers and vertues of superiour Bodies. This briefly is an account of that Learning, whose Operations and Effects (being full of Mysteries) was by the Ancients esteemed as the highest and sacred Philosophie, the fountaine of all good doctrine: Animadverto (saith Pliny) summum Literarum claritatem, gloria nquz, ex hac scientia antiquitus, & penes semper petita. a) De Occult. Phil. lib. 1. ca. 2.

What hath been hitherto said, will not (I presume) offend the Eeres of the most Pious, for here is no Incantations, no Words, no Circles, no Charms, no other fragments of invented Fopperies; nor needs there any: Nature (with whom true Magicians only deale) can worke without them, she findes Matter, and they Art, to helpe and assist Her, and here's All.

To instance the Generation of Frogs, Lyce, Wormes, Insects, &c. The worke of a Philosopher is there in onely to (b) strengthen the Seeds of Nature, (for the alone Workes) and so to quicken them that they hasten the worke of Generation (and by such meanes Tho. Aquinas supposes Pharo's Magicians, produced Frogs) insomuch as it seems to the Ignorant not to be the Worke of Nature, (that usually operates more leasurely,) rather the Power of the Devill. But they who are learned in those Arts, marvell not at such working, but Glorifie the Creator. To whose Honour alone these Operations must chiefly tend, for (c) he is best praised in his workes, and we knowing him in and by these visible things, may through such knowledge understand his more Secret and Invisible things, and thereby be better inabled to Glorifie him, then men otherwise can. b) Guli. Par. de leg. cap. 24.

Now I deny that any measure of understanding, in naturall Magick, how large soever, or the utmost and farthest search we can possibly make into that pure and primitive knowledge of Nature, to be a prying into those Hidden Secrets, which God would have concealed and ranked among the number and nature of those things he has prohibited us to search into, (as I know there are that will tell you it is, and they such as weare the Coat, and would be loath to want the reputation of Schollars) And this is fully manifested from Adam, who (d) before his Fall was so absolute a Philosopher, that he fully understood the true and pure knowledge of Nature (which is no other then what we call Naturall Magick) in the highest degree of Perfection, insomuch, that by the light thereof, upon the present view of the Creatures he perfectly knew their Natures, and was as able to bestow names suitable to their Qualities and Properties, d) Gen. 2. v. 19.

e) Bac. advance-
and 43.

For, This was a larger and cleerer Ray of the Light of Nature, then all the industry of man (since the Fall) was able to hope for or attaine unto, and (to attest the allowance) bestowed upon him by God himselfe: Nor was it this Naturall knowledg that introduced his Fall, or can be any Offence or Sin in us (were it possible) to arrive at his Perfection. No certainly, Adams transgression (for which he fell) was of a higher Nature, [even that proud inquiry into the (e) knowledg of good and evill, with no lesse intent then to make a totall defection from God, and depend wholly upon himselfe and his free will.]

Besides, tis worthy Observation, that God in constituting Moses to be a Governor over his owne people, seemed as willing to make choyce of such a one for that high Office, as was (f) learned in all the Sciences, then in request with the Egyptians, among whom Magick was the chiefe. And we find that upon Salomon's Prayer to God for *Wisdom*e he granted him a Heart as large as the Sea, and therein lodged so greate knowledge of Humane things, that he penetrated whatsoever the understanding of Man might comprehend: and (to manifest the inoffensiveness of Naturall Magick,) never reckons it up in all his Refractations. Though he thoroughly understood it, and in his practise attempted the highest Experiments, which had it been unlawfull, certainly he would not have omitted.

Thus much for a Preparative. And now that I may come closer to what Norton intends, and bring Magick neerer to our purpose ; We must understand that the Order and Symmetry of the Universe is so settled by the Laws of Creation, that the lowest things [the Subcelestiall or Elementary Region] should be immediately subservient to the Midle ; the Midle [or Celestiall] to those above ; and these [the Supercelestiall or Intelligible] to the Supream Rulers becke. With this it is further to be knowne that these (g) Superiours and Inferiours have an Analogicall likenesse, and by a secret Bond have likewise a fast coherence between themselves through insensible Mediums, freely combining "in Obedience to the same Supreme Ruler, and (also to the) benefit of Nature : Infomuch, that if we take the said Harmony in the Reverse, we shall finde that things b Supercelestiall may be drawne down by Celestiall, and Supernaturall, by Naturall. For this is the Maxim of old Hermes, (i) Quod est superius, est sicut id quod est inferius.

And upon this ground (k) Wisemen conceive it no way Irrationall that it should be possible for us to ascend by the same degrees through each world, to the very Originall world it selfe, the Maker of all things and first Cause.

But how to conjoyne the Inferiours with the vertue of the Superiours (which is marrying Elmes to Vines) or how to call out of the hidden places into open light, the dispersed and seminated Vertues, (i e. Vertues in centro centri latent,) is, the work of the Magi, or Hermetick Philosophers onely ; and depends upon the afore said Harmony. For,

They know that the Production of things is Naturall, but the bringing forth of the vertue is not Naturall : because the things are Create, but the Vertues Increate.

Hence it is that the Power and Vertue is not in Plants, Stones, Minerals, &c. (though we sensibly perceive the Effects from them) but tis that Universall and All-piereing Spirit, that One operative Vertue and immortall Seede of worldly things, that God in the beginning infused into the Chaos, which is every where where Active and still flowes through the world in all kindes of things by Univerſall extenſion, and manifeſts it ſelfe by the aforeſaid Productions. Pag. 72. li. 25. Taſted our White Stone a parte.

U Nleſſe the Medicine be qualified as it ought, tis death to taſt the leaſt Atom of it, becauſe its Nature is ſo highly Vigorous and ſtrong above that of Man; For if its leaſt parts are able to ſtrike ſo fiercely and thoroughly into the Body of a baſe and corrupt Mettall, as to Tinge and Convert it into ſo high a degree as perfect Gold, how leſſe able is the Body of Man to reſiſt ſuch a force:

force, when its greatest strength is far inferiour to the weakest Mettall? I doe believe (and am confirm'd by severall Authors) that many Philosophers (having a desire to enjoy perfect Health;) have destroyed themselves by adventuring to take the Medicine inwardly, ere they knew the true use thereof, or how to qualifie it to be received by the Nature of Man without destruction.

Pa. 88. li. 15. — The Red Stone is preservative,
Most precious thing to length my life.

THis is the Stone which some builders up of life have refused, when in truth it was the cheife Stone in the Corner; It being produced from that undefiled vertue which is yet left with the Creature (as a small remainder of the First Blessing) and able to make a (q) perfect union betweene the Body, Soule and Spirit, whilst our lively Fire, (that Medium between the Body and Spirit) by receiving this Ætheriall Medicine consisting of heavenly vertues (that consume the Impurities and Superfluities of the Body) is delivered from all Impediments, and the Body forced to agree with that incomparable Nature into which it is changing by so sweete and powerfull Compulsions, and consequently life Pro-rogued.

Astouching the Prolongation of life, wee meete with some Presidents in Histories, and they not Fables, where by the Application of things inward or outward, the Spirit hath bene renewed, the Body strengthened the Vitall and Animall faculty quickned, decrepid and withered Age renewed, & Life enlarged. Besides these Relations, we perceive Nature is so courteous to some kind of Creatures, as the Hart, Eagle, and Serpent, that she affords them meanes to obteine the benefit of Renovation (here Nature teaches them Naturall Magick, for tis no other) and why then may it not be granted to Man if sought after? Nay the (r) consideration of this Favourable Blessing afforded to Animals has been the principall ground whence many Philosophers have addicted themselves to the search of this Mistry, hoping that might not be denied to Man, upon his search, which is bestowed gratis upon the Creature.

It is apparent that our (s) Diseases proceed chiefly from Transplantation (though I deny not but some Hereditary Corruption is intail'd upon Posterity, from the decaying, mouldering, and rotten Natures of our Ancestors) for, by what we Eat or Drinke as Nourishment; the corrupt and harmfull, nay deathfull qualities, which the (t) Divine malediction lodged in created things, is removed from them into our Bodies, and there grow up and multiply till (having heightened the Sal, Sulphur and Mercury, into an irreconcilable Contestation, through the impurities wherewith they are loaded and burthened) they introduce a miserable decay, which consequently become a Death: and this is the sooner hastned if thereunto we adde the heavy load of Luxuriousnesse and Glutony. Yet is not this Death Naturall but Accidentall, and (as may appeare by what has been said) a (u) Death arising out of the fruits of the greate World which grows up by Transplantation, the Rebellious Disobedience of man provoking God to plant a Death in every thing that he had made, by the Curse wherewith he had cursed the Earth. And to this the Doctrine which the (w) Angell taught Esdras is agreeable.

And though it is appointed all must dye, against which Decree no Elixir has power.

power to resist, yet this Medicine is a remedy for the particular corruption of Man, to keep back those greifes and diseases which usually accompany & molest Old Age; insomuch, that that Death which man eates in his Bread may be brought to a Seperation, and consequently (in the comfort of an Uninterrupted Health) spin out his thread of life to the longest end of that Nature fallen from Originall Justice. For tis a certaine truth that what we receive into our Bodies, of that, Nature findes two Substances, the (one with a Gladsome appetite,) she retaines to feede Vitality, the other (with an abhor'd dislike) she expells, as not onely uselesse but Putrefactive and Dangerous: and if thereupon we throughly advise with our selves we must needes confesse Her way is best to be imitated, in seperating the Pure from the Impure, (which are joyned together in every thing) before we make use of them, and where she does manifestly Substrait and Divide, let us not there add and multiplie; for doubtlesse the Facts (y) profit nothing, nay in sick persons they plainly opprese the penetrating vertue of the Spirit it selfe, and commit that seperating Art to the diseased Body, which through weaknesse is not able to performe the Taske.

The Brevity of Life came in with the Fall of Adam, and though some of the Antients before the Flood lived almost a thousand yeares, yet certainly their lives were prorogued by the use of this Medicine, with which they well knew how to seperate and correct the obnoxious Qualities of all things, and I much question whether the generality of Persons then lived so long, or onely those who were the (z) true Ancestors; of Abraham, they not being alwaies the eldest and first begotten of the Patriarks, but such as God chose out of the Family to continue the line, and had (by the permission of God, as a singular and peculiar blessing) this Secret Traditionally committed to them.

Hence some affirme that Norton neither had nor knew how to make the Red Medicine, but that's not so, for to the time of publishing his Ordinall, 'tis true, he had not a second time gon about to make it, and why?

Wherefore

Pag. 99. li. 37. Wherefore they being in warke of Generation,
Have most obedience to Constellation.

Here our Author refers to the Rules of Astrologie for Electing a time wherein to begin the Philosophicall worke, and that plainly appears by the following lines, in which he chalkes out an Election fitly relating to the Businesse.

In the operative part of this Science the Rules of Astronomie and Astrologie (as elsewhere I have said) are to be consulted with.

c) Par. Sapient.

(c) If or in Astronomie thou must have right good feeling,
Or else in this Booke thou shalt have simple believing.

So that Elections, (whose Calculatory part belongs to Astronomie, but the Judiciary to Astrologie) are very necessary to begin this worke with; and the paines that Norton hath taken manifests no lesse, most Authors hinting the same, although we take but little notice thereof. For

d) Ord pag. 60.

(d) Such simple kindes unformed and unwrought,
Must craftily be guided till the end be sought.
All which season they have more obedience,
Above formed Natures to sterr's Influence.

Generally in all Elections the Efficacy of the Starrs are used as it were, by a certaine application made thereof to those unformed Natures that are to be wrought upon; whereby to further the working thereof, and make them more available to our purpose. (g) For since both inferiour and superiour Causes concur to every effect, it followeth that if the one be not considered as well as the other, this Negligence will beget Error. And by such Elections as good use may be made of the Celestiall influences, as a Physitian doth of the variety of Herbes. Agreeable to which is that of Ptolomy Aphor. 8. A Judicious man helps forward the Celestiall operation, even as a discreet Husbandman assists Nature in his plowing and preparing the Ground. But Nativities are the Radices of Elections, and therefore we ought chiefly to looke backe upon them as the principall Root and Foundation of all Operations, and next to them the quality of the Thing we intend to fit, must be respected: so that by an apt position of Heaven, and fortifying the Planets and Houses in the Nativity of the Operator, and making them agree with the thing signified; the Impression made by that Influence, will abundantly augment the Operation.

h) Sir Chr:

Heyd. Def. of

Altrol. pag. 363

And this is upheld by very evident reason of Nature, (h) for (saith a learned Gent. whose Defense of Iudiciall Astrologie (so long since published) stands hitherto firme & unconfuted, notwithstanding all the whistling Assaults of any Adversary) the Celestiall Influences never cease to flow into us, and therefore not unlikely that the like position or Configuration to that under which we are borne, may by like impression and influence increase and strengthen the operation of the former, more then it would if the Nativity were considered alone. And upon these grounds Norton advises to make Elections like those he layes downe.

i) Unless

i) Unlesse then your Nativity pretend Infection,
In contrariety to this Election.

i) Ordin p. 100

Which is the same in effect with that of (k) Protony, where he saith to this purpose, viz. " Though an Election of a Day or houre be well made, yet " will it prove of little advantage unlesse suitably constituted to the scheme " of the Nativity, because else it cannot divert that evil which in the Nativity " the Planets threaten: and hence it comes that Actions Thrive or Miscarry (though begun at one and the same time,) according as the position of Heaven then agrees with the Nativity of the Persons that manage them.

k) Aphor. 6.

As touching the Necessity of Elections, to be used in Dyet, Building, Dwelling, Apparell, and the severall Actions of our Life, let any that would be satisfied, read Marcellus, Ficinus, Hesiod, Cato, Virgil, Varro, Columella, Pliny, who (and generally all Philosophers) ordered their affaires of planting, sowing, lopping, &c. by them.

For in those things (here below) which have no sence (as well as those that have) the Heavenly Influences alwaies make Impression according to the measure and Capacity of the Subject, and doe evidently manifest their Dominion in them, (l) for nothing is more powerful then their Influences, when Impression is once made. Witnesse their power in Plants, Herbes, Corne, and what is Vegetable, whose Seeds diversly prosper, or decay, according to the state of the ☽ with the ☉ at the time of their sowing. This the Husband-mans Experience can tell the world, and the Saw's Annuall Accesse and Recesse makes manifest to the sence.

pag. 219.

And great Reason there is in Nature why the Moons condition ought chiefly to be observed, for she is the Planet neerest the Earth, and appointed as it were the Vehiculum of all other heavenly Influences unto what is Sublunary, and in that regard she is properly called (m) An Instrument of the Armies from above: according to whose present Condition things are steered; for if she be Fortunate by good Aspects, happy by Position, swift of Course, and increasing in Light, things thrive apace and flourish; But the contrary if she suffer Impediments. We may ordinarily observe how poorly and slowly the Seeds of Plants grow up, nay many times languish and degenerate into an unkindly Quality and Taste, if sowne in the Waine of the Moone, and the Reason is because the Moisture and Sapp that should feed them is exceedingly diminished; yet it is the fittest tyme for cutting downe Timber, or what else we would preserve from decaying.

m) Eccl. 43. 8.

(n) Thurneisserus (among many other admirable and usefull Observations) gives us the Position of Heaven under which severall Plants are Impregnated with the greatest vertue, the gathering of which at such times, for Physicall uses, deserves to be taken notice of; for the notable difference that evidently appeares betwixt their virtues and the vertues of such as are gathered without that Consideration. In a word, by Elections we may Govern, Order and Produce things as we please: Faber quisq; Fortuna propria.

Pag. 100. li. 1. Is a direct and Arrie Ascendant.

IN this and the first Ten following lines, are laid downe the Authors Rules for framing an Election by, agreeable to which he erects you Scheames (about the Latitude of 51. degrees) that are placed before the sixth Chap. which I have caused to be exactly Copied from the Originall, though some Planets, I must acknowledg, are not placed in that exact order (for houses and signes) as Astronomicall Rules direct, and the Doctrine of Astrologie requireth. For Example, In the first House of the first Figure you have ♀ in 7. degr. of ♄, the Ascendent in 2. degr. of ♄, and then the ☉ in the 18. Degr. of the same signe; whereas the 2. degr. of ♄ being fewer degrees of that Signe then 7. (wherein ♀ is placed) should Antecede it. Againe in the second Figure you have both ♀ and the ☽ in the 11th House thereof, who should of Right be posited in the 10th. because the 20th degree of ♊ is the Cuspe of the 11th, and therefore all Planets in lesser degrees of that Signe are falling into the 10th. Besides you have ♀ placed in every Figure so remote from the ☉, that Astronomers must count it absurd, since she is never above 48. degr. Elongated from him; and yet in the third Figure she comes not within the compasse of a * Aspect, nay in the second she is almost in 8 to him.

For their Position; I could have placed them in Houses according to Art, but I rather let them stand as I found them in the Originall, being well assured they were thus Posited by Designe, and not through Ignorance or Mistake; for our Author manifests himselfe a learned Astrologian, and too wary a Pen-man to be guilty of either. And though it may seem contrary to Art for the Position of ♀ to be so far distant from the ☉, yet tis agreeable to his Rule of Election that she is so often placed in the 4th House (especially seeing the Signe falls out to be there in which she is exalted) because he appoints the Lord thereof to be fortunate,

Withall, the Planets as they stand here placed in Signes and Houses are not so as that these Figures were the Elected times for the Authors owne Operations (or any others in that Faculty) but are rather fained and invented, onely to bring them within the compasse of his Rules. And to satisfie my selfe herein, I have taken some paines to Calculate the places of the Planets for severall years about the Authors time, but cannot finde the three Superiors and place of the ☉ to be in those Signes wherein he has posited them.

It is also worthy of our Observation to see how the Author continues his Vailes and Shadows, as in other parts of the Mystery, so likewise in the very Figures of some of the Planets, for he does not exhibite them under the Characters commonly now (or then) used, but Hieroglyphically in Figures agreeable to their Natures, yet (p) diversitie of Names (or Figures) makes no diversitie in the things they signifie: For ♄ is pointed out by a Spade, ♃ by a Miter, ♅ by an Arrow, ♆ by a beautifull Face, ♇ by the figure (in those daies) usually stamped upon the Reverse of our English Coyne: Onely the ☉ and ☽ are left us in that fashion the Auspicious bestowed upon them.

For that Art is as secret as Alchimie.

Astrologie is a profound Science: The depth this Art lyes obscur'd in, is not to be reach't by every vulgar Plumer that attempts to sound it. Never was any Age so pester'd with a multitude of Pretenders, who would be accounted (and stick not to style themselves) Masters, yet are not worthy to weare the Badge of illustrious Urania. And (oh to be lamented!) the swarme is likely to increase, untill through their Ignorance they become the ridiculous object of the Enemies to Astrologie; (would that were all,) and Eclipse the glory of that light, which if Judiciously dispens'd to the World would cause admiration; but unskilfully expos'd, become the scorne and contempt of the Vulgar.

He that understands no more of Astrologie (nor will make a further use of it) then to quack with a few Terms in an Horary Question; is no more worthy to be esteemed an Astrologian then Hee who hath onely learnt Hebrew may be accounted a Caballisticall Rabbi. Tis true, he may be so fraught with words, as to amuse the unlearned, with the Canting noyse thereof, but what is that if compared to the full and intire knowledge of the Language? Yet of this sort at present are start up divers Illiterate Professors (and Women are of the Number) who even make Astrologie the Bawd & Pander to all manner of Iniquity, prostituting Chast Urania to be abus'd by every adulterate Interest. And what will be the issue (I wish it may prove no Prophecie) ere long Astrologie shall be cried down as an Impostor, because it is made use of as a Stale to all bad Practices, and a laudable Faculty to bolster up the legerdimane of a Cheate. And besides having now growne famous by the true Predictions of some of her able and honest Sons, shall grow into as much disgrace and infamy, by the unskilfull Prognosticks of ignorant Illegitimate Bastards: who rather then they will accuse themselves when they faile of truth in their Judgments, will not stick to condemne Astrologie it selfe as defective and lame, in what their slothfull negligence or ignorant blindness was not able to finde out. And therefore Norton here speaks truly, that Astrologie (take it with all its Comprehensions) is as Secret or Mysterious as Alchimie, and as difficult to be thoroughly and perfectly understood.

There are in Astrologie (I confesse) shallow Brookes, through which young Tyroes may wade; but withall, there are deepe Foards, over which even the Gyants themselves must swim. Such is the Doctrine of Nativities, Directions, Annuall Revolutions and what else depends thereupon, belonging to Man, the little World: and beyond these, those of Comets, Eclipses, Great Conjunctions and Revolutions, that refer to the greater World. These are subjects of Eminency, and being judiciously handled Magnifie the Art. But,

I know some few Artists have satisfactorily manifested what excellency of Skill there is in Judging an Horary Question, and how much of truth may be

Pag. 104. li. 20. Obtaine therefore to fetch breath from your Nostrils.

IN regard of the violent Nature of the Medicine which is deadly indeed, because its Nature is so infinitely strong above Mans, that it overcomes his Spirits and poysons him; Norton therefore lets fall a hint, what Parts an Operator ought to Arme, and whence to fetch Breath: Meaning thereby, that those Orifices of the Body be closely stopt (through which there is so open a passage, that a Strong vapour would fly as speedily as lightning into the inmost parts) while the Vessell is opening. But how to breathe the while is the Difficulty. We have Practises something neerer it, as of those who attempt to lye long under Water, &c.

And therefore let this be a Caution sufficient to young Practisers in this Science, that when they worke upon a Matter, and bring it (as they suppose) to some perfection, if they can indure the opening of their Vessell without being Armed, they may rest satisfied that nothing is more certaine then that their Matter is not the Philosophers Mercury, and their Practise erroneous.

Pag. 106. li. 21. In the yeare of Christ MCCCCCLXXXIII.
This Worke was begun ———

IN the search I have made after Authentique Manuscripts to compleate this Worke, a private Gentleman lent me a very faire one of Norton's Ordinall, which I chiefly followed; yet not admitting to compare it with fourteen other Copies. It was written in Velame and in an auncient fat Hand, very exact and exceeding neate. The Figures (whence I caused these herewith printed to be Grav'd) being also most neatly & exquisitely lym'd, and better work then that which was Henry the seventh's own Booke, (as I am informed by those that have seene both.) It had placed in the middle and bottome of the Compartiments of Flowers, Birds and Beasts, the Nevell's Coate of Armes, with others which that Family quartered. This induced me to believe it to be the Originall (or one exactly Copied from it) presented by the Author to George Nevell then Arch-Bishop of Torke, who was a most wealthy and Magnificent Bishop; as appears not onely by the rich (a) Jewell he offered at Becketts Tombe, but for the greate and stately Entertainment he provided at More in Hartfordshire for Edward the 4th. to make which more Magnificent he brought forth a (b) vast Treasure of Plate, that he had hid during the distractions of former yeares, all which the King seised upon with his Money and Goods then valued at 20000*l.* (a farre more considerable sum of Money in those dayes, then now;) and made of the Arch-Bishops Mitre (set with precious Stones) a Crowne for himself.

I have beene informed that there was greate Correspondency betweene this Arch-Bishop and the Hermetique Philosophers of his time, and this is partly confirmed to me from Ripley's (c) Dedication of his Medulla to him, Ann. 1476. as (c) See the Preface also the presentation of this of Norton's Ordinall; for though I finde the said face. Arch-Bishop dyed the same yeare this Ordinall was begun to be written, yet the certaine time of that yeare I cannot yet learne. But it was towards the latter end thereof, when his Successor (Lawrence Booth) was Consecrate, viz. (d) 25. d) Godw. Sept. Besides, in all probability he lay not long sick, because he dyed (at Blithlow) upon a (e) Journey from Torke: So that the Booke might be finished and presented, (or if not presented, yet intended) before he dyed, though begun but the same yeere.

Pag. 107. The Compounde of Alchymie, &c.

THIS Worke (which is also called the Twelve Gates) was pen'd by Sir George Ripley, and formerly (f) set forth in print by Ralph Rabbards; I have compared it with severall other Manuscript Copies, amongst which I happily met with one written neere about the time that Ripley lived, (and in these Streames of Learning the more clearest and without the least of Mixture is to be found neere the Spring-head,) the which I most relyed upon. Yet where they differ, the Reader (if this Copy please not) may make use of the former.

It appears at the end of this (g) Worke, that it was written in the yeare 1471. (g) Pag. 193. which I the rather take notice of, because I have met with a kind of Retraction of Ripley's beginning,

Felix quem faciunt aliena pericula cautum.

Wherein he beseeches all men, wheresoever they shall meete with any of his Experiments written by Him, or that go under his Name, (from the year 1450. to the year 1470.) either to burne them or afford them no Credit, being written according to his esteeme, not prooffe; and which (afterwards upon tryall) he found false and vaine: for so long was he seeking the Stone, but in the truth of practise had not found it, till towards the end of that year, and then (saith He) Inveni quem diligit anima mea.

So that this Treatise of the 12. Gates being wrote the year after, is unquestionably to be relyed upon, because pen'd from a grounded experimental Practise, as him selfe Testifies in his Admonition,

i) Anno 1649:
k) *Pref. ad O-
per. G. Rip.*

Ludovicus Combachius (who hath (i) lately set forth divers of Ripley's Works in Latin) tells us (k) that he then had in his hands these Twelve Gates rendred in most pure Elegiacque verse, by one Nicholas May upon the Command of the Emperour Rudolph the second, and that he could willingly have added it to that he published, (which was translated out of English into Latine verse by Sir Edw: Kelley) for the better understanding thereof, but that the Copy was none of his owne.

l) Printed at Toloufe.

The learned Faber, (1646.) bestowed much Paines and Cost in publishing to the world (l) Basilii Currus Triumphalis, and others, in one Volume. In the Argument of which Booke Georgius Riplæus Anglicus doctissimus & mirandus in quo nihil falsi & supervacui ad metallorum omnium proprietates & naturas manifestandus, is thus Ingeniously acknowledged. He further assures that his Workes are worthy to keep pace with the best Philosophers; and knowes that Policie in Printing is surest, and takes well with the Judicious, to begin with a good Work, and end with the best; to which place he refers ou Ripley. But I must needs tell the Reader that in pag. 338. and so to the end, he is by mistake called Triplanus instead of Riplæus. There are other the like notorious faults which the Printer (most likely) is guilty of, as giving Isaac Holland the name of Irsacus. Cornelius Drebbel he prints Tornelius, (and sometimes Fornelius) Prebellianus; and besides these, further causes of Exception to other parts of the Work (too many to be mentioned here) amongst the rest where Faber sayes they were all rendred into Latin out of Dutch, and that this peece of Ripley's, which he there calls Triplanus de lapide Philosophorum (but is indeed an Epitomy of these 12. Gates) was by one Nicholas Barnard a Philosopher Translated out of Dutch into Latin, intimating withall that it was Originally written in the German Tongue; which is very false, injurious to our Author, and dishonourable to our Nation.

Thus much for the Work, and now to say something touching our Author. Philemon Holland in his Translation of Gambden's Britania Printed 1636.

is pleased to take the liberty to tell us that the place of his Nativity was (m) m) fol. 295. Ripley, a Village in the County of Surrey, and calls him a Ring-leader of our Alchemists, and a mysticall Impostor. This Imputation of Mysticall Impostor smells more of Ervious dislike then faithfull Account, and therefore I'll passe it by. But as to the place of his Birth, I am induced to believe it to be about Yorkshire, (not that he was a Foundling at Ripley in that County, or of so obscure Parents, that the name of the place of his Nativity must be impos'd upon him in defect of a better) No certainly, his Name, Relation, and Kindred discover him to be the Sonne of a Gentleman; and though I cannot exhibite his Pedigree, yet it appears in some ancient Manuscript Copies of his (n) Medulla (which I have seene) that his Relation of Kindred lay in the Northerne parts, where (he saith) "he had divers Kindred, Gentlemen of Yorkshire and Lincolshire, as Teversall, Ripley, Medlay, Willoughbie, Burham, Waterton, Flemming and Talboyes, who (as he there complains to the Arch-Bishop Nevell, to whom he dedicated that Worke) were by the Conquering Sword of Edward the fourth, (God so permitting) lamentably destroyed. 'Tis also considerable that his Ecclesiasticall Promotion hapned to be at Bridlington, a (o) Towne in the East Riding of Yorkshire.

p) Pref. to his 12. Gates.

And probably such his Advancement, might be procured rather in that Country where his Kindred and Friends lived, and himself that Country-man, then if he had been a Stranger.

I determine not whether Holland has done the learned Antiquary or profound Philosopher the greater Injury, in what he puts downe concerning the place of his Birth; for I must let the world know, 'tis not to be found in the Originall Latin which Cambden published Anno 1607. nor can I learne that there was any other Impression, to the time of Translation, nor in probability could there be when Holland (q) fell to worke immediately upon the coming out of the said Impression in 1607. and set forth his Translation within foure Yeares.

q) Postscript to Camb. Brit.

So that I cannot but wonder at the Boldnesse of this Translator, not onely in adding many things of his owne score, but for abusing so learned a Philosopher with the Term of Mysticall Impostor, and putting it upon the Account of an Author, who should he thus vilifie one of so cleere a Reputation, ingenious Schollars might have just cause to question the Candidnesse of his Pen in other things. But this kind of liberty I finde Holland hath taken in other parts of that worthy worke, The effects whereof, hath rendred Banbury (amongst others) much beholding to him for an eminent Flour: For, where Cambden fames it for (r) Cheese onely, he addes Cakes and Zeale: Neither of which are to be found in the Originall, though doubtlesse both in the Towne, and for endo Causo no-better purpose then to be boasted of. r) Nunc confici-tissimum to. 266

But to leave this Digression & returne to Ripley. Pitts tells us, "He was a Man s) Pitts de illu-
" of a Quick, & (more then can be expressed) curious Wit, and that Totam serē str. Aug. Scrip.
" suā aetate in pēscrutandis rerū Naturaliū occultis & abstrusis Causis & effectibus
" consumpsit; He wasted almost his whole Life in searching out the occult and " abstruse Causes and Effects of Natural things. And that he might more

"copiously and plentifully study Philosophy, and accomplish what he conceived
 "his mind, he boldly travailed through France, Germany, and Italy, where he "grew into familiarity with severall of the most Learned men.

Leland saith truly, that he (t) laid the foundation of his Studies in Italy, for there indeed he had the bleffing first to see Projection.

(u) In Romanis parvibus nuptiis Mercurii,
Accidit post studium semel quod interfui.

'Tis further testified, that He alwayes either (w) Writ, or Learnt, or Taught something; He was perfectly learned in all the liberall Arts, and well red in all manner of Philosophy; a most famous Mathematician, a Rhetorician and Poet, (x) per eam atatem, non vulgaris effectus. Combachius styles him (y) Author precul dubio dignus, qui ab Amatoribus Chemiae sedulo evolatur, cum in sermone apertus sit, rotundus & planus, nec ullis spinis aliorum more obsitus:
 A worthy Author without exception, who is diligently studied by the lovers of Chimistry, forasmuch as he is open, well compact, and plaine of delivery, and not wrapt in any Thornes, after the custome of others. Habet insuper (saith the same Author) cum Lulii scriptis magnam affinitatem, ut unus alterum explicet, &c.
 Besides, he hath great Affinity with the Writings of Lully, insomuch that the one explaineth the other.

Amongst other parts, abroad, he visited the Isle of Rhodes, and resided there for some time with the Knights of the Order of Saint Iohn of Ierusalem. An Ac- quaintance of mine hath in his custody certaine private Observations of an En- glish Gentleman of good quality and credit, who in his Travells abroad, Ob- *serve*s (amongst other things) that in the Isle of Malta he saw a Record, which declares that this Sir George Ripley gave yearly to those Knights of Rhodes
 100000*l.* towards maintaining the war (then on foot) against the Turks.

But at length, that he might bid his farewell to the World, and wholly consecrate himselfe to God, and betake him to his private Studies, upon his
 (z) returne into England he obtained an Indulgence of Pope Innocent the eighth, that for the future he might be and alwaies discharged and freed from the burthen of the Ceremonies and Observancy of his Order; but in regard the Chanons admit such things, he became a (b) Carmelite in the Monastery of Saint Butolph, which (saith Leland) is a famous (c) Mart Towne nigh the Banks of the River Lindsey: This River I take to be the River Witham in Lincolnshire (anciently called (d) Lindis) which passing from Lincoln, runs towards the maine Sea by Boston, more truly called (e) Butolphs Towne, (for it carried that name from Butolph, a most holy and devote Saxon;) And if you observe Cambdens Map of Lincolnshire, you shall see St. Butolph stands neere to Boston. So that in all likelyhood this was the place of Ripley's Retirement, where he continued an Anchorite untill his Death, and was there Buried Anno 1490.

The probability whereof, may be further confirm'd from his Mcduella, where it appears he had then (f) a great desire to return into England, and to that end therein became a Suter to the Archbishop of Yorke, that by his meanes he might obtaine an abiding place in some Religious house, within his Dioces. Which Archbishop presently after dying, he could not performe, but not unlike Ripley having still an earnest longing thereto, (because it was his native Countrey,) might without doubt otherwise effect.

And whereas Bale saith he obtained Pope Innocents Indulgence upon his returne into England, and thereupon became a Carmelite, An. 1488. It is manifest from the aforesaid Medulla, that at the writing thereof, which was in 1476. (at least 12. yeares before the time Bale makes him to enter into that Order) he had this Dispensation, for so he tells the Archbishop: And if so, then it must be either (g) Sixtus the fourth, or Paul the second (his Predecessor) that must grant it unto him. In Man, which helpeth Diseases all.

Physick is a divine Science, even Gods Theologic; for the Almighty wrote his Scripture in that language, before he made Adam to read it. The Ten Fathers before the Flood, and those that followed, together with Moses and Salomon, were the great Physicians in former Ages, who bequeathed their heavenly knowledges knowledge of naturall helps to those they judged as well worthy in honesty and industry, as capable thereof: and from their piercing Beames all Nations enlightened their Tapers. Abraham brought it out of Chaldea, and bestowed much thereof upon Egypt, and thence a refulgent Beame glanced into Greece. The Coicks and Æsculapian Family, &c. God greatly encouraged to serve that Age. Democritus and Hypocrates supported Ruinous Mankind, with their Phisicall administrations, and Schollers successively supplied their places for at least 400. yeares, untill Galen undertooke by his strong Abilities and incessant Paines to vivifie the then dying Genius of Phisick: which hath since most nobly beene Augmented, by the stupendious paines of Arabians and Europeans.

And in the Progresse this Science has made into severall parts of the World, we may finde, that God hath evermore been pleas'd to call upon the stage thereof in sundry Ages, some choyce and eminent Men, whom (by the Illumination of his blessed Spirit) he hath furnished with ability to reade the Characters of his blessed will, writ in that ample and sacred Volume of the Creation, and the severall Pages of individuall Natures. And further, to testifie his care of his Creatures, hath also given them Balme in their hands to stoppe the over-spreading contagiousnesse of bainefull Diseases. But to contract the Rayes of my Prospective to our owne homes, the Phisicians Colledge of London doth at this day nourish most noble and able Sons of Art, no way wanting in the choycest of Learning; And though we doe not, yet the World abroad has taken notice of sundry learned Fellowes of that Societie, as Linacres, Gilbert, Ridley, Dec, Flood, &c. and at present Doctor Harvey, who deserves for his many and eminent Discoveries, to have a Statue erected rather of Gold then of Marble.

Neverthelesse, it has beene observed in other parts that we English will sooner abuse and detract from the worth of any of our owne Nation (though never so well deserving) then render them what they justly merit by a worthy Applause: And rather cry up a Frie of Illiterate Quacks (for every Galen hath his Plague, [a mounting ignorant Thessalus] that cheate the poore and simple of their Money, and (I with they did not) often in Conclusion murder their over-credulous Patients;) then give the learned Phisitian the due (h) Honour God has appointed us to pay him.

Now as God hath formerly shed most eminent Beames of the first light upon a few particular Men (as it were to gratifie the deserving Labourers at all times of his day;) So I am confident there are yet most noble seeds of that light of Nature appointed to spring up for the Benefit of Posterity. The Glory whereof we see hath shin'd in other Horizons, shortly it will draw neere to ours; and that which with incessant Toyle cannot yet be Discovered, shall in those dayes be freely Revealed to some that little dreame of it. I am more then Confident Succession will meete with many advantages and helpes, which this corrupt and ingratefull Age deserves not, nor shall have; because we deride, what Posterity will adore with a lasting admiration: The Circuit of that great and Sabbathicall Conjunction of the two Superiour Planets which began An. 1603. in the Fiery Triplicity, will Illustrate, Enlarge, and Refine Arts like the tried Gold, It shall produce more pregnant and famous Philosophers by Fire, (I mean such as is Etheriall) then yet the world ere saw; and so purifie some ingeingenious Inquisitors, as to make them fit Mettall for Angells to Project on. This Fiery Trigon shall not passe, before that God make manifest what he commanded former Ages to keepe Secret, Where old Hermes his Ætheriall Phisick (viz. this Quintessentiall Water which Ripley here speakes of, and which is shall be Restored; whose perfect and incorruptible Qualities of Heate, Cold, Moisture and Drinse are able not onely to Nourish, Fortise, and Encrease the Vital Spirit, but Digest, Correct and Consume all Impediments and Corruptions, those hurtfull and Impure Seeds which crept in with the Curse, (and joyning themselves with the Good,) have ever since (like a growing Tyde) encroached so far upon the Body of Man, till he is almost overwhelm'd and ready to Perish.

But it is to be acknowledged that those Chemists deserve a considerable share of Honour, who, for want of this Ætheriall and Universall Medicine (which God hath hitherto granted to few) zealously apply themselves to finde out a Particular one, (that sedulous Industry may afford to more) and to raise up a Body of Phisick, from those (k) Three Principles which are to be found in every k) *Boff. Body, because compounded of them; (though strongly lockt up) namely Sal, Sulphur, and Mercury: (to which De Clave of late adds two more, viz. Earth cap. 4. and Phlegme) and so comfortably relieve decaying Mortality, and heale Diseases by the meanes they are Cured.

In the painefull and curious search of which Experiments, where there is more of Nature that still lyes hid, (yea she is as Infinite in her Productions, as the Minde of Man can be Unsatiable, in the search) let the satisfaction the Ingenious Artist findes in one Truth, leade him cheerfully on to make Inquisition after a further, perhaps the Event of his Labours may discover a Perfection in the knowledge he hunts after, and Providence may be as kinde to so diligent an Inquisitor, as Nature is to the Ant, who bestows Wings on her in her declining Age, as a reward for her former Labours.

And albeit I magnifie Chemicall Phisique, yet I do not lessen the due commendations that belong to Galenicall: nor dare I, when so great an Hermetick Philosopher as Arnoldus de villa Nova has taken so much paines to Joyn them together. And besides him, it has been the worke of Maierus, Faber, and many other conscientious Philosophers, to reconcile them. Who laying aside (indeede abhorring) all thought of Faction, conceive nothing to come neerer the Divinity of Nature, or be any way more gratefull to God and Good men, then to help the Afflicted, and relieve the Sick; nor greater Charity then to bestow health, and support desisted Nature. Nor is Galenicall Phisick hard to come by, it being at all times easy to be met with, the Superficies of the Earth never denying us some thing or other for Medicine, and they, Milde, Gentle, and Safe for weake and tender Natures. Moreover, it is observed by Nollius and others, that where God strikes with any Disease, in those parts he also sends forth a Plant that he endowes with vertue to cure it. And truly I cannot but admire at those snarling humours, who make it their Taske to disparage what they affect nor, (nay oftentimes what is beyond their owne worth) and rent those noble parts of Art asunder, which Nature has conjoynd in an harmonious Agreement, and whose wide breaches, honest hearted Philosophers endeavour to make up by a friendly Reconciliation, it being not to be denyed, but that each hath their peculiar Eminencies for which they deserve both Praise & Honour. For my owne part, I am none of the Detractors from Learning, but beare an Universall affection to Arts, and am in freindship with each of their particular Branches; Nay even in those I understand not, for I am perswaded by the satisfaction I have received in things which before time I knew not, that there may be something deserving of my faire Opinion, in what I am yet to know.

It has proved a great (l) Error in some Practitioners, who (tumbling up and downe their owne Speculations) seeke out for Truth in the Little world, and withdrawing themselves too much from the Contemplation of Experimentall Naturall Observations, neglect to looke for it in the greate and common World: When certainly such may far sooner arrive at that Truth they seeke for in Man, if they would but observe the Beginnings, Change, declination, and death of all things, in and upon this inferiour Globe, and compare their virtues with our owne internall Natures, for they are certainly (m) united by a Noble, excellent, and secret Harmony and Relation.

And having found the true Originall and Cause of Diseases, then further to search after a proper remedy; for all Diseases are not cured by one sort of Physick (save that which is Ætheriall and Incorporeall) And therefore according to the Doctrin of (n) Paracelsus, such as are bred from so light a cause as the impure Seeds of Vegetables, viz. Meate, Drinke, Fruits, Herbes, and the like Elementary things, may be very easily cured with the Secrets of Hearbes, Roots, and such like mild and tender Medicines, of which sort Galenicall Physick is more plentifully furnished then any of the rest. Those that are produced from the more rude and knotteer Qualities of Mineralls, and what is cast within the Compass of that Tribe, the Chemicall Physitian must expell by the power and force of his Metalline Sulphurs, &c. Vegitables being (in this Case) too weak to Master and Dissolve their tenacious and coagulated Spirits: Those which are derived from the Influences of Heaven, must be removed by Plants, &c. Magically gathered and prepared, or by Sigills, &c. framed or made under suitable Positions and Aspects of the Planets, and impregnated with the rayes of Celestiall Vertues, for without opening the Bodies, Infusing superiour Influences, and (by an additionall Artifice) fixing them to the said Bodies, their own ordinary vertue (be Elections never so propitious) hath not strength enough to conquer Diseases of that Nature: and severall of these choice Secrets (of Nature and Art united) I my selfe have prepared, made and Experimentally verified. Finally, where Diseases happen by Supernaturall meanes, as by Inchantments, &c. none of the other three are able to remedy the same, save onely Magicall and Superclestiall meanes, by and through the Vertues of particular Intelligences, Or the Red Medicine wrought up to the highest degree of Perfection. And in such cases the Hermetique Philosopher must appeare, who

Therefore let all men cease to wonder why so many Diseases seeme incurable; when many times being Supernaturall we judge them Naturall, and the true Causes unknowne, no sutable Medicamen is administred.

And whereas I have toucht upon Sigills, I thinke it will not be remote from this discourse, if I give a little satisfaction to my Reader therein; Though perhaps it may be esteemed as a thing of too daring a Nature for my Pen Nor am I ignorant how some, most learned Men, have extremly suffered under the heavy and sharp Load of unworthy and rash Calumny, for manifesting or defending this Doctrine; but it hath only beene (such is their Glory) by those that could never sufficiently Answer their Arguments.

The framing of Sigills, Lamels, Talesmes (for all depend upon one Radix) is a piece of Learning as (p) Ancient as the Babylonian and Caldean Magi, (who first found out the Secret power of Figures) a chiefe part of their Magick, And practised by the greatest Philosophers in the Easterne World; Where remaine to this day, (as evident Testimonies of their first Invention) very many and ancient Talesmes, the miraculous effects whereof were admired and approved throughout all Aegypt and Persia: although (I confesse) their Name and Use be yet scarce knowne in these parts of the World; Or if, onely to such whose Wisdome thinkes fit to conceale and preserve the knowledge thereof, from the hands of the senselesse and profane.

Among all other Philosophers (famous for this kinde of knowledge) Apollonius Tyaneus was the (q) mightiest, and his Workes (in my Opinion) most Stupendious: Who though the Envious and Ungratefull World, has throwne some dirt upon him, to blemish the Innocency of his Operations, yet he never deserved other then well; all He did being for the (r) good thereof, and not for hurt; He was no lesse a Pious then Illustrious Philosopher, His whole Life being strict and vertuous, and his Death not blasted with any scandalous Exit. And for a justification of his Praxis, take this Testimony of Iustinus, who, saith (s) that he was a Man skillfull in the " Dissent and Consent of all naturall Powers; and who wrought wonderfull things by the meanes of this Science; " (which were only Naturall and not Miraculous;) For which purpose, he " made choyce of such fit Subjects, as might conduce to the perfection of " what he intended to Effect: And indeed God did not withstand those " Workes of his, in regard they were done by the knowledge of Naturall things, " for the use and benefit of Man.

What I have further to say, shall onely be to shew what Naturall powers, Sigills, &c. Graved or Imprest with proper Characters and Figures, and made under certaine peculiar Constellations may have. Albionazar, Zahel, Haly, Albategnus, and divers other Arabians, give us severall examples of such as have been cured of the biting of Serpents, Scorpions, Mad dogs, &c. by Talismanicall Figures: And in other Authors we meete with a world of (t) Stories which tell what Admirable effects they have wrought being rightly prepared, (which should I here mention, would swell beyond the limits of my Discourse) But this peece of Art is of extreme difficulty, and not to be performed by every one that takes it in hand.

As for the use of such Characters, Letters, Words, Figures, &c. Formed or Insculped upon any Matter we make use of, we are led to it by the president u) See Crollius of Nature, who Stampes most notable and marvelous Figures upon (u) Plants, de signat. inter.

Roots, Seeds, Fruits, may even upon rude Stones, Flints, and other inferiour Bodies.

Nor are these remarkable Signatures made and described by Chance, (for there is a certaine Providence which leades on all things to their end, and which makes nothing but to some purpose,) but are the Characters and Figures of those Starrs, by whom they are principally governed, and with these particular Stamps, have also peculiar and different vertues bestowed upon them. What Artists therefore doe in point of Character, is onely to pursue the Track, that is beaten out by Nature; And by how much the more the Matter whereupon such Impressions are made, is suitable to the Qualities of those Starrs whose Characters it is signed with: By so much more apt and inclineable it will be to receive those vertues that shall impower it to produce an Effect, in things whereunto it's applied.

Neverthelesse, this is not all, for this Body must have as it were a Soule infused, and be Impregnated with a Celestiall vitality, or else it remains Ineffectuall and Dead. In which respect other meanes must be found out before we can obtaine that Effect. And therefore we are to Consider, that the Soule of the World is not confined, nor the Celestiall Influences limited, but doe indifferently emit and communicate their Vertues alike, as well to things Artificially made, as to those that are Naturally generated, though sometimes they are more, at other times lesse vigorous and powerfull, according to the different Aspects under which they are wrought: In which regard a fit Election must be built up from the foundation of Astrologic, suitable to the Nature of the Operation proposed, which being effected, and the Stars finding a figure aptly disposed for receiving them, they forthwith Impresse their vertue, which they retaining doe afterwards operate in that they finde to be semblable. And this is not strange if we reflect upon the Vulgar experiments of the Loadestone, who communicating its vertue to a peece of Iron (a thing made fit by Nature to attract and reteine) that Piece thereby becomes of strength to communicate this vertue to a third. But if we should consider the Operations of this Magnet thoroughly (which proceeds onely from a Naturall Principle) there is no other Mystery, Celestiall, Elementall, or Earthly, which can be too hard, for our Beliefe.

Moreover, these Celestiall vertues and peculiar Gifts are not infused into Individual and particular things, by the Idea, and by means of the Soule of the World alone, But also are invited thither, through the Obedientiality of their Matter, and a certaine aptitude and likenesse that these Inferiours beare to their Superiours; which being once taken in, they thereupon contract and reteine (besides such as they receive from their owne Species) those naturall Vertues and Roots of the Starrs, wherewith they suscite and stir up the Influences of the Celestiall Bodies; who are (as it were by compact when United) Obligated to Operate in and for that purpose, which the Artist appoints them. And more especially if the Minde of the Operator be vehemently inclined towards the same. For that through the strength and Efficacy of the Imagination and Passion, (being seriously intent upon any Operation) is joyned with the Minde of the Starrs and Intelligences, and as sodainly fitted with Vertues, as if it were the proper Receptacle of their Influences, and consequently helpes more effectually to infuse their Vertues into our Workes: And the reason is, because there is an apprehension and power of all things in the Minde: Whereupon all things having having a naturall Obedience to it, have also of necessity an Efficacy; and more to that which desires them, with a strong and intent Desire.

Notwithstanding, all these Wonders are not wrought but by the Cooperation of second Causes disposing of the Corporall Matter, God (the first cause of all things) having variously distributed these vertues to every one as he pleaseth, who by his Command and appointment are necessitated to produce their Effects.) Which Matter (by reason of its Purity or Inequality may cause the Celestiall vertues to erre in their Actings, (for certainly Influences may be hindred, and prove ineffectuall through the indisposition or insufficiency of the Matter.) And therefore it is no ordinary Speculation to awaken the sleeping Spirit which lyes bound up in the straight Prison of the Body; to invite and allure that propitious Spirit to descend from Heaven, and unite it selfe with that which is Internall; and there withall to convey a Vinculum thereinto, that is of power to hold fast and fix the Celestiall Influences, from recoyling back into their united Centers.

This is the Series and Order of Nature conjoyn'd with Art: and this, and all this must be effected, before one true Magickall Operation can be performed.

THough I cannot yet satisfie the Reader who was the Authour hereof, and therefore must Register it, (together with Experience and Philosophy, the Hermets Tale) amongst the Anonymi: yet I can assure him He gives exceeding good advice to the Student in this Science, where he bids him be Secret in the Carriage on of his Studies and Operations, and not to let any one know of his Undertakings, but his good Angel and Himselfe: and such a close and retyred Brest had Norton's Master, who

To such therefore I shall only adde Chancers Councell which may prove of no litle advantage if they remember it.

THE Figure cut in Brasse and placed in Page 210. is an Hieroglyphicall device of Cremer sometime Abbot of Westminster, and Scholler (in this Science) to Raymond Lully, which he caused to be painted upon an Arched Wall in Westminster Abbey, where now the Statues of our Kings and Queenes are set in their respective Habits.

I met with it Limned in a very Ancient Manuscript, before the old Verses that follow, which there seemed to serve as a Preface to that Worke which beares the TYtle of Hermes Bird. In it is conteyn'd the Grand Misteries of the Philosophers Stone, and not more Popish or Superstitious then Flamell's Hieroglyphicks portraied upon an Arch in St. Innocents Church-yard in Paris; Notwithstanding it has pleased some, to wash the Original over with a Plasterers whited Brush. As also (of late) to breake in Pieces the Glasse Window behinde the Pulpit in St. Margarets Church at Westminster, wherein was fairely Painted (but unhappily mistaken for a Popish Story) the whole Processe of the Worke, in this manner.

The Window is divided into three Parts: In the Outermost whereof upon the right hand was drawne a Man holding a Boy in his hand, and a Woman with a Girle in hers, all standing in upright, naked postures, upon a greene foliate earth: The Man and Woman had Fetters, wherewith their Feet seemed to be chained to the ground, which Fetters were presented as falling from off their Legs. Over the heads of these persons were the Sun and Moone placed, and painted of a sad darke red Colour.

Within the Left side of the Window was a Beautifull Young man, clad in a Garment of various Colours, bearing a Yellow Crose upon his Shoulders, his Body Encircled with a Bright Glory, which sent forth Beames of divers Colours, He stood upon an Earth intimating Oculus Piscium.

At the Foot of the Middle Part of the Window was a faire large Red Rose full spread, which issued Rays upward, and in the Middle an exceeding bright Yellow Glory. Above the Rose was the Figure of a Man rising with Beames of Light spread about his Head (somewhat like the Posture used to expresse Christ's rising from his Sepulchre) He had a Garment of a Reddish Colour, deepned with Red and heightened with Yellow; In his left Hand, a White Stone, which he held towards the Persons arising in that part of the Window on the Right Hand; and in his Right Hand he held forth a Red Stone towards Him, whose Garments was of various Colours.

In the uppermost part of this Window over the Figures was Transversely written as followeth:

Omnes gentes adepti plaudite quia dominus frater vester.

In the Middle Part.

S at mittens spiritum sanctum, ecce nova facio omnia celum & (2) t . . .

In the Third on the Right Hand.

Factus quasi unus ex sa angelis tibi ———

Under these Figures in the Left side of the Window were the Stawels and the Martyns Coates of Armes quartered; And at the bottom of the Right side thereof, was this Coate of Arms placed, (viz.) Argent, a Cheveron * Embatelled, Gules, & Vert; which for the rareness of Bearing I thought fit to Blazon, and withall (because upon very diligent search among the Records of English Coats of Armes it is not to be found) in hope it may come to the view of such, who (if not at home) may from abroad produce the Bearer, and consequently bring

Which Piece (as 'tis thought) was written Originally by Raymund Lully (or at least made English by the afore mentioned Cremier) and that upon this Occasion.

Cremier travelling into Italy fell into the acquaintance of Lully, and so exceedingly wrought upon him by his persuasions that he (a) brought him over into England, where within two years (but after thirty years erroneous Experiments) he obtained the Secret from him. And afterwards bringing Lully to the sight and knowledge of Edward the third, upon some deepe Engagements and Promises that the King entred into to prosecute a Warre against the Turkes in person, to bestow somewhat on the House of God, but nothing in Pride or Warring against Christians,) he was content permissioe Divina Regem sua Arte divitem facere. Which when the King had obtained, he brake his Promise, turned his Designe against France (the first Expedition being (b) Anno 1337.) and finding that Lully (after he had seene him violate his faith in destroying Christians in stead of Mahumetans) refused to further his Ambition with new supply of Gold, He clapt him up in the Tower, where he lay a long time, and seeing no possibility of Release, begun to study his Freedom, and to that end made himselfe a Leaper, by which meanes he gained more Liberty, and at length an Advantage of escaping into France, where in all probability he pen'd this Piece.

Pag. 233.

The Tale of the Charon's Peoman.

One Reason why I selected out of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, that of the Charon's Teoman was, to let the World see what notorious Cheating there has beene ever used, under pretence of this true (though Injur'd) Science; Another is, to shew that Chaucer himselfe was a Master therein.

For, in this Tale Chaucer sets forth the deceipts in Alchemy to the life, and notably declaimes against all such villanous Pretenders, who being wholly ignorant of Art, have notwithstanding learnt the Cunning, to abuse the World; And this paines he tooke (as himselfe professeth) meerly

c) To the intent that men maie beware thereby.
And for no other cause truly.

c) Chan. Teom. Tale.

Herein following the President of all sincere and conscientious Philosophers, then whom, the Injur'd world cannot more condemne the abuses of these Im-

postors that disgrace the Art, in that they are continually advising to shun them as spreading Infection; and setting out Lights and Directions, that may serve as so many Land marks, (if we will but take notice of them) to make us avoyd the Rocks of their Fraud and Deceit, which will otherwise split us.

The famous Art of Physick is not more abused, with Quacking Mountebanks; nor that other of Astrology more injur'd by some nibbling Sciolists and ignorant Juglers: then this Divine Science hath suffered by the Legerdemaine of some Pretenders. What though some Moderne Chemists rove beyond the Latitude of their Profession, (being hurried on by a Covetous thirst, to obteyne this Arcanum Dei, this Thesaurus incomparabilis;) and by operating in strange Matters, & torturing of various Bodies, bring Disparagement upon this worthy Science; yet we ought not therefore to confound praise-worthy Arts, with the Abuses which Impostors shuffle into them; or for the fallensse or corruption of the bad, condemne the pure and good: If so, Religion it selfe (as well as other Learning, and Professions) would scarce be exempt from the like blemishes, and wounds, if not destroyed and buried in scornfull Ignorance.

This is the Misery, (and tis not ultra Caduceum for me to speake it) that there are a Generation of People that rush headlong into the acquaintance of such Men, there's nor staving them off, much like the doting Idiots which so eagerly courted Chaucer's Chaucer, after whom and certainly the lucre of that will fix a Curse upon their Endeavours, and plunge them headlong into an unfathom'd depth of Misfortune.

If what hath been delivered be not of force to make men watch over their undertakings, and heedfully avoid the Springs and Gins that are ordinarily laid to intrap them into Ruine; but that on the contrary they carelessly slide into a Venture upon any Tearms, Ile leave them with this incouragement, Yeom. Tale.

Now as Concerning Chaucer (the Author of this Tale) he is ranked amongst the Hermetick Philosophers, and his Master in this Science was Sir John Gower, whose familiar and neere acquaintance began at the Inner Temple upon Chaucer's returne into England, for the Troubles of the Times towards the latter end of Rich: the second's Raign had caused him to retire out of their Danger into Holland, Zeland, and France.

He is cited by Norton for an Authentic Author, in these words ;

p) Ord pag. 42.

p) And Chaucer rehearseth how Cytans is the same.

Besides he that Reads the latter part of the Chanon's Yeoman's Tale, wil easily perceive him to be a Judicious Philosopher ; and one that fully knew the Mystery.

Master Speght (in that commendable Account he gives of Chaucer's life,) is perswaded he was borne in London, from something intimated in his Testament of love. But Bale saith, He was (q) Nobili loco natus, and that neere unto Oxford, for (saith he) Leland had Arguments which made him believe he was borne either in Oxford-shire or Bark-shire. But what those Arguments were we now know not, yet may believe them to be of considerable weight, because they were doubtlesse such as he gathered in his 6. yeares laborious search into the Libraries of our English Monasteries and Colleges, being furthered by the liberall Encouragement and Commission of Hen. 8 And had it not been for his indefatigable pains, All that was notable in this Nation (r) had in all likelyhood beene perpetually obscured, or at best, but lightly remembered, as uncertaine shadowes. Neverthelessse the fruits of this famous Antiquaries labours, are no where now intirely to be seene, unlesse dispersed through the workes of some other men, who have most arrogantly and unworthily made them their owne : amongst the rest I perceive Polid. Virgil stole much Tymber from this worthy Structure, with part whereof he built up his Workes, the rest be enviously burnt, for thus I finde Lelands Ghost Complaining.

But begging Pardon for this Digression, (being on the behalf of so deserving a Schollar) I return to Chaucer. Pitts Positively saies he was born in Wodstock, of noble Parents, and that Pairé habuit Equestri Ordinis Viū, his Father was a Knight. And this may not be unlikely if we Consider, that not onely the Name is as Auncient as (r) William the Conqueror's time, but that some of the Family have beene both of large fortunes and good quality. For we finde (u) that Edw the 1. heard the Complaint of Iohn Chaucer in the Damage of 1000 l. And also, that there was in the Raigne of H. 3. and Ed. 1. one Elias Chaucer, of whom (w) — Edwardus dei gratia, &c. liberate de Thesauro nostro Elia Chauscicr' decem Solid: With which (x) Characters our Geffrey Chaucer is written in the Records of Ed. 3. and Rich. the second.

But wheresoever he was Borne, his Education was chiefly in the University of Oxford in Canterbury-Colledge, (y) (suppressed by H. 8. and now joyned to Christchurch) though for some time he studied at Cambridge.

He quickly became a Witty Logitian, a sweet Rhetoritian, a pleasant Poet, a grave Philosopher, a holy Divine, a skilful Mathematician, his Tutors therein were Frere John Son, and Frere M. Lenne, (a) (Friars Carmelites of Lynne remembred with honour in his Treatise of the Astrolabe) and moreover (I may safely adde) an able Astrologian, for almost in every Worke he inter-weaves most sound and perfect Astrologie. Mr. Nicholas Brigham built this Marble Monument to his Memory, the true Pourtraicture whereof I have cauſed to be exactly graved in Brasse, and placed in page 226. There was formerly round the ledge of the Tombe theſe following Verſes, but now no remainder of them left.

The Picture of Chaucer is now ſomewhat decay'd, but the Graver has recovered it after a Principall left to poſterity by his worthy Schollar Tho. Occleve, who hath alſo theſe Verſes upon it.

I Am perſwaded this VVorke called by the Name of Dafstin's Dreame; has beene turned into Engliſh Verſe by ſome later Philosopher; for in his dayes we meete with no ſuch refined Engliſh, and in Latin we have his Viſion with which (in effect) this agrees.

The Time he liv'd in is not certainly knowne; I finde none that mention it; but tis beleev'd it was long ſince. Our Country-man (l) Bale ſpeaks of him yet, yet throwes at him and this Science some uncomely abuses: Nevertheless he calls him Alcumistica arithmetate sua primus & in Anglia Magister unicus; the Prime Alchymist of his Age, and the only Master thereof in England; A Producer and Foreteller of things which (it seemes in his apprehension) he could not attaine to by Nature; He made a diligent search into all things that might possibly be found out in Chemistry, insomuch that he boldly wrote and published severall Experiments.

And though (m) Pitts renders him a very Poore man, and layes the blame upon his owne Artifice; (being so much addicted to Alchymie,) yet questionlesse (if he were Master of such learning as they confesse him to be, and his Poverty were not voluntary;) he might have advanced himselfe to riches when he pleased. He wrote these following Bookes, Ludovicus Combachius in his late Collections of some of Ripley's Workes, put this of Pearce the Black Monk's among them under the Title of Terra Terre Philosophice; and publishes it as Ripley's: and withall that Tytle [Terra Terrarum] which (o) Pitts also gives to one of his Workes may seeme to insinuate this; But I conceive all are not Ripley's which walk under his Name, for questionlesse, many Pieces are (of late Tymes) fathered on him which he never wrote; Bale has not this at all among the Catalogue he delivers of what was Ripley's. And I have met with it in so old a Manuscript under the tytle of Pearce the Black Monke, that the Hand (as I Judge) speakes it to be antienter then Ripley's Time. o) Pag. 677.

VV Ho to pitch upon for the Author, I was a long time ignorant of, yet at length I happily met with an old Manuscript (and it was the ancientest Hand-writing I ever saw this Piece written in) to which was affixt the Name of Richard Carpenter, and thereupon I have Intituled it, Carpenter's Worke.

- p) Ifface. Chron. I finde that in Anno 1447. John Carpenter then Bishop of Worcester (p) founded the Colledge at Westbury neere Bristol, (mentioned (q) before to be Augmented by William Cannings: (r) by "pulling downe the old Colledge, and in

Besides this he built the Gatehouse at Hartleborough, a Castle neere and (s) belonging to the Bishop of Worcester; and did severall other Workes of Piety and Charity.

r) Godw p. 442.

This Bishop Carpenter is supposed to be Brother, or neere Kinsman to Richard Carpenter our Author, and accounted an Hermetique Philosopher. He was Contemporary with Norton, and Cannings; and for the most part lived neere unto them, at the aforementioned Westbury; nay he had so great Affection to that Place (not unlike for the Societies sake of Norton and Cannings or for some speciall Blessing he met with there) that (r) he intended to have it honoured with a part of his Style; and to have taken upon him the Name of Bishop of Worcester and Westbury, which though he could not effect, yet chose it for his Buriall place where he lyes Inter'd.

In another old parchment Manuscript (and that a very faire one) I met this Worke, Prefaced with what followes.

Aske ye of the Clerkes that holden them so wise, what is the whete that most be sowne in the Erth, and whedere it is nourished forth hot or cold. For if it were in heate, it scholde never rote without cold and moisture. Also sey to hem alle, al that ever was comen of on, but it is dissebered in thre, as Fadere, and Sone, and Holy Ghost, One way there is, and no moe. Also loke which is the Fader and Hodere of alle Metallez, For if thou draine or take eny other manner chinge than his owne kynde, thou ledest all thy werk: For looke whennys he cometh, and in his owne Hoderes bely nourish him forth, and when he is of age nourish him forth with his owne Hoders mylke, and gif him is owne Hoders mylke.

Pag. 278. The Hunting of the Greene Lyon.

IN the Camp of Philosophy, Bloomfield reckons up a Worke that beares the Title of the Greene Lyon, and amongst other Impostors (of his Tyme) calls the Vicar of Maldon, (but in some Copies Vicar of Walden) the Author; and consequently esteemes the Worke spurious,

T Thomas Charnock (the Author of the Breviary of Naturall Philosophy) had the happinesse to have Two Masters that made him inheritor of this Secret; The first was he, whom here he Mentions, and it seemes

w) Was a Priest in the Close of Salisbury.

w) Enigma de Alch.

This he further confirms in his Breviary, thus:

x) Master J. S. his name is truly,
Nigh to the City of Salisbury his dwelling is,
A Spiritual man forsooth he is.

It seemes he had some acquaintance with this Priest, and in that time bent his Studies this way, Infomuch that the Priest falling sick (whilst his Worke was a going) thought Charnock deserving of it; for He

This Worke Charnock continued going, till unhappily it perisheth by Fire upon a Newyears day at Noone; probably it might be An. 1555. for that fell out in the first and second of Phil. and Mar. and in those yeares of their Raigne (which was parte in the year 1554. and parte in 1555.) he (z) received the Secret from the aforesaid Priest, as himselfe Testifies. At which time he was about 30. or 31. yeares of Age (though he intimates he was about 28. yeares old when he first met with the Prior of Bath) for Ann. 1574. he was 50. yeares old, as appears at the end of his (b) Fragments, which I Copied from his owne Hand.

Charnock is his name, of Tenet that Isle.

i) Chap. 5.

Tenet or Tainet is an Isle that lies in the East part of Kent, and the Birth-place of Charnock; however though he might be born there, yet he dwelt about (i) Salisbury, when he first met with his Master Bird. He calls himself the Unlettered Schollar, and by severall Fragments and Notes that I have seene of his owne Writing, it does not appeare, that he understood much Latin, or knew how to write true English; yet though he wanted the Shell he obteyned the Kernell, and had the good fortune to meete with that in plaine English, which many (who have the assistance of other Languages) goe without; Thus we see by him, that God hath not excluded all who are Masters of no other then their own Language; from the happinesse of understanding many Abstruse and subtill Secrets; I could instance severall in this Science: and this very Consideration invited that noble Fraternity of the R.C. to publish their Fame and Confession in Five severall Languages, to the end the unlearned might not be deprived and defrauded of the knowledge thereof. Nor was the Processe (which all Students may take notice of) tedious or long in delivering to Charnock. For thus he saith,

He lived in the Rank of an Ordinary man, else I presume his Quality might have priviledged him from being Prest for a Common souldier. And from a Memorandum of his owne hand, it may be gathered, that he practised Chirurgery; for thereby it appeares He bargained to have Five Markes for healing the Leg of one Richard Deane, for the payment of which one John Bodin and William Lawly became Suretyes.

SOME will have this to beare a double Conſtruction (either that Ripley was Boy or Servant to a Chanon, as being bred up under a Chanon while a Boy; or that it was one who was Ripleys Servant, and brought up with him when young; to whom Ripley (finiding him. faithfull) might commit the Secret) and ſo leave it uncertaine whether Ripley or his Scholler was Maſter to the aforeſaid William Bird. But I rather conceive the latter moſt probable; for, Ripley, (1) dyed about the yeare 1590. and the time that this Bird communicated this Secret to Charnock, was at leaſt 64. years after. So that queſtionleſſe this Bird was too young to be acquainted With ſo weighty a Mystery at the time of Ripley's death. What time he dyed, is uncertaine, but after the yeare 1577. I meete with nothing under his owne Hand, although severall yeares before that, his Pen lay not still; for in divers spare places of his Bookes he incerted sundry Notes, to the which most commonly he affixt a Date; some whereof I have published in this Theatrum.

THe Author himselfe also calls this VVorke the Camp of Philosophy, and the Practick thereof he styles by the Name of his last VVill and Testament. Pag. 324. Sir Edward Kelle's Worke.

I Cannot give my Reader an Account of Sir Edward Kelley, but I must also men ion that famous Artist, Doctor John Dee; (whose last VVill and Testament followeth Sir Edw. Kelle's Worke) He being sometime his Intimate Friend, and long Companion in Philosophicall Studies, and Chemicall Experiments; Till at length the worthy Doctor (leaving him in Germany) returned for England, and so by Providence, escaped from being his further Companion; in that straight Confinement which Sir Edw. Kelley suffered, (by command of Rudolph the 2. Emperour of Germany) at Prague.

Touching

Touching Sir Edward Kelley, he was borne at Worcester, the Scheame of whose Nativity (Graved from the Originall Calculation of Doctor Dee, and under his Hand) I here Exhibire.

Which may be gratefull and acceptable unto such that can read the Language of the Heavens: Inſomuch, that therein they ſhall finde out more concerning him, then Story has left us. For, whereas he by ſome is called Philosophus Dubius, ſomewhat a better Opinion might be hence Collected, and that from the Poſition of Mercury Lord of the Ninth, (the Houſe of Knowledge, Wiſdome and Science;) and who is placed upon the Cuſpe thereof in Virgo, where he is exceeding Strong, and Fortunate, in Dignities; Eſſentiall and Accidental, [viz. in his owne Houſe, and Exaltation, Direct, and Swift of Courſe, free from Combustion, and in the Tearme, and Face of Venus; to whom he applies by a partile Sextile.] Venus alſo is Angular, and beholding the Cuſpe of the Ninth Houſe, by a Sextile; All which (with Conſideration that the Degree Aſcending is in the Tearmes of Mercury,) doe truly render him a Man of cleere Underſtanding, quick Apprehenſion, an excellent Wit, and of great propenſity to Philoſophicall Studies. And indeede, by all Reports he was very Ingenious, and a continuall Searcher, in the abſtruſe and difficult Secrets of Philoſophy and Chymiſtry.

Yet for all this, he could not eſcape the hard Cenſures and Scandalls of thoſe that underſtood not what he did; which the Dragons Tayle in the Aſcendant, was was at all times ready to further and promote, and from whose Position the Nature of those abusive Aspersions may be (Generally) gathered: and partly from a Story which VVever in his Fuxerall Monuments inserts, where, though he make him an Adel in the worst part of Conjuratiou, and backs his Relation with some Formall Circumstances, Yet that nothing was done in the Nature he Relates, good and sound Reasons (too tedious to be touched here) induce me to believe.

As touching Doctor Dee, he chiefly bent his Studies to the Mathematicks; in all parts of which he was an absolute and perfect Master. Witnesse his Mathematicall Preface to Euclids Elements, wherein are enumerated many Arts of him wholly invented (by Name, Definition, Propriety, and Use) more then either the Grecian or Romane Mathematicians have left to our knowledge: with divers and many Annotations, and Inventions, Mathematicall, added in sundry places of the said Booke: Together with severall Pieces of Navigation, Perspective, and other rare Mathematicall works of his in Manuscript.

His Epistle prefixed to Iohn Field's Ephemerides 1557. De usu Globi Caelestis to Ed. 6. De Nubium solis lunae ac reliquorum Planetarum, &c. Distantiis, &c. to Ed. 6. Astronomical and Logistical Canonis to Calculate the Ephemerides by; De stella admiranda in Cassiopeae Asterismo. An Advice and Discourse about the Reformation of the Vulgar Yeare, speak him a learned Astronomer.

And lastly, that he was a good Astrologian, and a studious Philosopher, his 300. Astrological Aphorismes, His 120. Aphorismes De praestantioribus quibusdam naturae virtutibus. Monas Hieroglyphica. Speculum unitatis, (being an Apolgie for our famous Frier Bacon) His Cabala Hebraica compendiosa Tabula, with many others, afford no small Evidence to the World.

All which and many more (in severall other kinds of learning) as History, Heraldry, &c. written by him before the year 1583. Some time He bestowed in vulgar Chemistry, and was therein Master of divers Secrets, amongst others he (p) revealed to one Roger Cooke, the Great Secret of the Elixir (as he called it) of the Salt of Metals, the Projection whereof was One upon a Hundred.

His great Ability in Astrologie, and the more secret parts of Learning (to which he had a strong propensity and unwearied Fancy;) drew from the Envious and Vulgar, many rash, lewd; and lying Scandalls, upon his most honest and justifiable Philosophicall Studies; and many times forced him out of the bitterness of his Soule (which was even Crucified with the malice of Impudent Tongues) most seriously and fervently to Apoligize. Nor could he enjoy Tranquility in his Studies, but was oftentimes disquieted and vexed with the sower dispositions of such as most Injuriously Scandalized both him and them, Insomuch that the (q) yeare he went beyond Sea his Library was seized on, wherein was 4200. Books, and 700. of them Manuscripts (a Caveat for all Ingenious and eminent Philosophers to be more wise then to keep any dear or Excellent Books in their own Houses.) And tis most probable that at this time his before mentioned Speculū unitatis, might fall into those hands, that would never since suffer it to see the Light, which might occasion the Learned Selden to say, this

(r) Apolgie was long since promised by him; but intimating it was never Writ. An. 1592. (s) Master Secretary Walsingham, and Sir Tho: Georgewere sent to his then dwelling house at Mortelack by vertue of a Commission, to understand the letter to the Archbishop of Canterbury.

These kind of Persecutions were stil Multiplied upon him, and he sometimes Personally agreed by them: for about the yeare 1594. he was under a kinde of Restraint, which occasioned him to (t) write to the Lady Scydmore to move the Queene that either he might declare his Cafe to the Body of the Council, or else under the Broad-seale have liberty to goe freely where he pleased. t) 28. Oct. 1594.

And thus much concerning these two famous men in severall; now shall I give the Reader an Account of their joynt Actions abroad, as also what relates to Doctor Dee after his returne into England: which I shall doe from an unquestionable Authority, even Doctor Dee's Diary, all written with his owne hand; where I shall take the larger Field to walke in, because I move upon so certaine ground: some of which passages may please (if not concerne) the Reader. For I think it not fit to suffer such Eminent Lights longer to lie in Obscurity, without bringing them forth to the view of the World.

'Tis generally reported that Doctor Dee, and Sir Edward Kelly were so strangely fortunate, as to finde a very large quantity of the Elixir in some part of the Ruines of Glaffenbury-Abbey, which was so incredibly Rich in vertue (being one upon 272330.) that they lost much in making Projection, by way of Triall; before they found out the true height of the Medicine.

And no sooner were they Masters of this Treasure, then they resolved to Trauell into Forraigne Parts, where falling into acquaintance with one Albertus Laskey a Polonian Prince (which came into England the beginning of May, An. 1583.) on the 21. of Sept. following, They, their Wives, Children, and Families, went beyond Sea with the said Prince.

And whether they found it at Glaffenbury (as is aforesaid) or howsoever else they came by it, 'tis certain they had it: for at Trebona in Bohemia (whither they were come to (u) dwell) Sir Edward Kelley made (w) Projection with one u) Sept. 4. 1586 small Graine thereof (in proportion no bigger then the least graine of Sand) w) Dec. 9. 1586 upon one Ounce and a Quarter of Commou Mercury, and it produced almost an Ounce of most pure Gold. This was done to gratifie Master Edward Garland and his Brother Francis, and in their presence; which Edward was lately come to Trebona, being sent thither to Doctor Dee, from the Emperour of Muscovia, according to some Articles before brought, by one Thomas Symkynson. I also finde this Note of Doctor Dee's, Jan. 5. 1586. Donum Dei 2. ounces. E. K. Moreover, for neerer and later Testimony, I have received it from a credible Person, that one Broomfield and Alexander Roberts, told him they had often seen Sir Ed: Kelly make Projection, and in particular upon a piece of Metall cut out of a Warming-pan, and without Sir Edwards touching or handling it, or melting the Metall (onely warming it in the Fire) the Elixir being put thereon, it was Transmuted into pure Silver: The Warming-pan and this piece of it, was sent to Queen Elizabeth by her Embassador who then lay at Prague, that by fitting the Piece into the place whence it was cut out, it might exactly appeare to be once part of that Warming-pan. The aforesaid Person hath likewise seen in the hands of one Master Frye and Scroope, Rings of Sir Edward Kelly's Gold, the fashion of which was onely Gold myre, twitted thrice about the Finger: and of these fashioned Rings, he gave away, to the value of 4000l. at the Marriage of one of his Servant Maides. This was highly Generous, but to say truth he was openly Profuse, beyond the modest Limits of a Sober Philosopher.

During their abode at Trebona, they tried many Chemicall Experiments (to see whether they could make that Iewel they posselt, (the particular account of their operations I neede not here relate) yet I cannot heare that ever they accomplished any thing sonely I finde the 27. of Aprill noted by Doctor Dee with severall expressions of Ioy and Gladnesse, as ——— Hæc est dies quam fecit Dominus. Againe ——— Misericordia Dei magna, and lastly, ——— Omne quod vivit laudet Dominum. And to testifie what they meant, he writes upon the 30. day following, Master Edward Kelley did open the Great secret to me. God be thanked.

Whiles they lived at Trebona, Sir Edward Kelley went dives times to Prague, and the 15. of Ian. 1587. he went into Poland, but returned the 9 of Febr. after, And 'tis probable these Journeys were made in quest after some famous Chemists. Things were not carried here so privately, but Queene Elizabeth had notice given her of their Actions, whereupon she used severall meanes by Letters and Messagers to invite them back into England, where it was believed she had so far prevailed that Master Simkinson and Master Francis Garland's Brother

x) 8. Dec. 1587 Robert, coming from England to (x) Trebona supposed they had beene ready to come over to England upon the Queenes Letters formerly sent them. And y) 1 May 1589. though Sir Edward Kelley staid behinde, yet Doctor Dee (y) left Trebona and and came for England. But whether occasioned by some unkindnesse received from Sir Edward Kelley or falling out of their Wives, or the Solicitation of Queene Elizabeth (or all these concurring) I am not yet certaine, nor unlike but each of them might contribute to their Seperation.

For that there was some Greate and Wonderfull unkindnesse past from Sir Edward Kelley, appeares, by his sending for Doctor Dee, the beginning of Ian. 1588. under shew of Reconciliation, and discovering more then an Ordinary Intimacy and Compliance about that time, which faire shewes the good Doctor notes with this prayer. God leade his heart to all Charity and Brotherly love: As also by Letters sent from Doctor Dee to Sir Edward Kelley and his Wife the end of March following, requiring at their hands Mutual Charity, which (x) after upon Mistris Kelley's receiving the Sacrament she gave her hand to Doctor Dee and his Wife in Token of Charity. But it seemes these things were not cordiall but onely outward; for 9. Sept. following, (the Lord Chancellor coming to Trebona) the Rancour & Disimulation was more evident to him, and it seemes grew up to a greater height then he could beare. And thereupon he thought wisely to avoid the further Danger by leaving Germany which occasioned him to (a) deliver to Sir Edward Kelley the Powder, the Bookes, the Glasse, with some other things, and thereupon received his Discharge in writing under his Hand and Seale.

While these Discontents continued, severall Letters past between Queene Elizabeth and Doctor Dee, whereby perhaps he might promise to returne; At b) 1. Mar. 1589 length it so fell-out, that he (b) left Trebona and took his Journey for England.

The ninth of Aprill he came to Breame and had not stayed there three dayes, but the Landgrave of Hesse sent Letters of Civill Complements to him, and within three dayes after, Doctor Dee presented him with his Twelve Hungarian Horses

Horses, that he bought at Prague for his Journal. (c) Here that famous Her- c) 27 June metique Philosopher, [Doctor Henric Kunrath of Hamburg] came to visit 1589. him: The 16. of Nov. he went thence to Szade, where he met with Mr. Edward Dyer going Embassador for Denmarke, who the year before had beene at Tre- bona, and carried back Letters from the Doctor to Queene Elizabeth; He was a great Correspondent of Doctor Dee, and as earnest a Searcher after the Stone.

The 23. of Novemb. following, he arrived at Gravesend having beene out of England 6. yeares 2. Moneths and 2. Dayes, and the 9th of Decemb. presented himselfe to the Queene at Richmond, where he was favoured with a kinde Reception.

Being settled againe at Mortclack, the Queene used to call at his House to visit him, and shewed her self very Curteous to him, upon all Occasions. Against Christmas 1590. she sent him Two hundred Angels wherewith to keep his Christ- mas, and a hundred Markes against Christmas 1592. she likewise sent him word by Mr. Thomas Candish, to doe what he would in Alchymie and Philosophy, and none should controule or molest him: and not unlike by the Queenes example, divers Personages of Honour at Court, frequented his Company, and sent him many Gifts, from time to time. Amongst others Sir Thomas Jones most nobly offered him his Castle of Emlin in Wales, to dwell in, free with all Accomoda- tions.

His Favour was faire at Court, the Queene her selfe bad him finde out something for her to bestow; yet all the preferment he gain'd was the (d) d) 8. Dec.
Grant of the Chancellorship of St. Pauls, and the 27 of May 1595. his Patent 1594.
 past the great Seale, for the Wardenship of Manchester, whither He, his Wife,
 Children, and Family came the 14. of Feb. 1596. and the 20. day following was Installed, and in this Wardenship (wherein he had the unhappinesse to be often vext with the Turbulent Fellowes of that Colledge) dyed, deserving the Com- mendations of all Learned and Ingenious Schollers, and to be remembred for his remarkable Abilities.

After Doctor Dee came into England (as is before remembred) Correspon- dency was still maintained betweene him and Sir Edward Kelley, in Letters sent by Mr. Francis Garland and others; (and some expectancy of Sir Edwards comming over: (e) Mr. Thomas Kelley (his Brother) putting the Doctor in e) 23. Dec. hopes thereof likewise) but at length Sir Edward was clapt up close Prisoner 1589.
 by the Emperour (for he had so unwarily and openly managed the Secret, that it had given the Emperour occasion to carry a strict Eye over all his Actions, out of a desire to be sharer, with him in his good fortune) yet it seemes the Emperour set him at (f) Liberty, and Doctor Dee had notice of it the 5. of f) 4 Oct. 1593 Decemb. after. And though he began to grow into the Emperours favour, in hopes to be entertained into his service (for so he certified Doctor Dee by Letters in August 1595.) Nevertheless he was clapt up againe into Prison, and attempting to make his Escape out of a high Window, by the teering of his Sheetes, which were tyed together to let him downe, he (being a weighty Man) fell and broke his Leggs, and thereof dyed: (The Ascendent then coming by Direction to the place of the (g) Moone with Latitude, the being Lady of the 8th. g) See the house in the Radix and posited in Aquarius.) And this is one report of his Scheme of the Death; others there are, but Doctor Dee mentions none at all of the manner Nativity.

A Dialogue betwixt the Father and the Sonne.

f) Placed in
pag. 338.

THIS Dialogue is there placed among the Anonymi, in regard I then knew not the Author, but afterwards I met with the intire (i) Worke, and found it to be that of Ripley's, which is called the Mystery of Alchymists, and that this Fragment was but drawne out of it, only drest up with another Tytles; which if the Reader compare he shall readily finde.

For the want of sense in some parts thereof, as also in other Elder Pieces; I hope the Dimin's of the Taper will be excused where there was no cleerer light to be found. For though (like the Sun) they may seeme to have some Spots, yet the candid Peruser must confesse they are not without their peculiar Glories. The truth is, some Passages through them were so obscure and dark, and the Paths I followed so rugged and uneven, that I could neither stay in them without manifest disparagement, or goe out of them without some Danger: and from my discoveries fraught thence, I am well assured I might have more contented the Reader, could I have satisfied my Self better. However, I durst not adventure to Rectifie what I found amisse; but thought it better to leave it to the Iudgement of each that takes the paines to study them, then obtrude my owne sense, lest what I judge an Emendation, others may sensure as a Grosse fault: and withall ever remembring the strict Charge the generality of Philosophers have continually given to succession, not to meddle or alter any of their Workes; I, (even in what I feare are manifest Imperfektions) dare not but most inviolably observe them, and amongst them all this Credible and Trusty Philosopher is not unworthy of our taking notice of, who thus requires the same.

k) Therefore in Charite and for the Lords sake,
Let no man from my writing take
One word, or add thereto,
For certainly if that he do,
He shall have malice fro which I am free,
Meaning Truth and not subtilty.

Pag. 368. lin. 5.

And also with grete diligence.

l) Lib. 4. fo. 26.

THIS Piece is the Worke of Sir John Gower, and Collected out of his Booke (1) De Confessione Amantis. He is placed in the Register of our Hermetique Philosophers; and one that adopted into the Inheritance of this Mystery, our famous English Poet, Geoffry Chaucer. In this little Fragment it appeares he fully understood the Secret, for he gives you a faithfull account of the Properties of the Minerall, Vegitable, and Animall Stones, and affirmes the Art to be true.

This Craft is wrought by wey of kinde,
So that there is no fallace in.

And againe,

The Science of himselfe is trewe,
Upon the forme as it is founded.

He was an eminent Poet, and hath (m) written the story of the Golden Fleece, like an Hermetique Philosopher: which Philosophicall veine is to be traced through severall other parts of his Works. The first acquaintance betwene Him and Chaucer began at the Inner Temple, where Sir John Gower studied the Lawes, and whither Chaucer came to follow the like course of studies upon his returne out of France. He was (saith Piers) a (u) noble and learned Man, Galfredo ferè per omnia similem, quique eundem prorsus habuit omnium studiorum suorum propositum finem, resembling Geoffry almost in every thing, and who had surely the same proposed end of all their Studies; they soone perceived the similitude of their manners, quickly joyned in Friendship and Labours; they had dayly meetings and familiarity, and all their endeavour was to refine and polish their Mother Tongue, that there might appeare the expresse footesteps of the Roman Eloquence in our English Speech. m) Lib. 5. n) pag. 573.

This appeares by Chaucer's sending to Gower his Troylus and Cressida after he had finished it, for his perusall and amendments.

o) O Mozall Gower, this Booke I direct
To the, and to the Philosophicall Stroke
To vouchsafe, ther neede is, to correct,
Of your Benignitees and Zeles good.

o) See the end of Troylus and Cres.

And surely these two added so much of splendour and ornament to our English Ideome, as never any the like before them: for they set foote to foote, and lovingly contended, whether should bring most honour to his Country both endeavouring to overcome, and to be overcome each of other, they being not only the Remembrancers but Imitators of him,

*Quod lingua Catonis & Enni,
Sermonem patrium ditaverit, & nova rerum
Nomina protulerit.*

p) Stow Margens it, that he was no Knight; yet we have it (q) from Bale p) Surv. fo. 450. that he was Vir Equestri Ordinis, of the Order of Knighthood, and Leland sayes q) Cent. 7. 524. that Abillustri stemmate originem duxit, that he had his Originall from an Illustrious Pedigre.

He (r) built a great part of St. Mary Overies Church in Southwark; and r) Stow. Ann. when death had snatched out of his bosome his deare Companion Geoffry Chaucer, he then prepared a resting place for his owne Body in the Chapell of Saint Iohn in the said Church where he founded a Chauntry. He was very old and blind when he dyed, and lived but two yeares after Chaucer. He had a stately Monument erected, wherein was his whole Portraiture cut in Stone in the Wall on the North side of the said Chapell. The Haire of his Head Aburne long to his Shoulders, but curling up, and a small forked Beard; on his Head a Chaplet, like a Coronet of foure Roses, a habit of Purple, (Mr. Speght sayes Greenish) Damaske downe to his feete, a Coller of Esse of Gold about his Neck, the Ornaments of Knighthood, under his head the likenesse of three Bookes which (among severall others) he compiled, the first Speculum Meditantis, written in French, the second Vox Clamanis written in Latin, the third Confessio Amantis, pen'd in English, which last was printed the 12. of March An. 1554. His Armes were these, Argent, a Chevron Azure, three Leopards heads thereon Or, their Tongues Gules, two Angels Supporters, and on the Crest a Talbot.

Introduction

Among the Harley collection of manuscripts in the British Library are six volumes written at the end of the seventeenth century which should be of great interest to students of Hermeticism, but which have not yet received much attention. These can be collectively described as 'The Treatises of Dr. Rudd' and they comprise Mss Harley 6481-6486. They seem not to be originals but rather are copies made by a certain Peter Smart in the period 1699-1714.

These documents are of value in that they are compilations of esoteric material from the early seventeenth century, particularly from the Rosicrucian period. At the least, the existence of these manuscripts shows a continuing exploration of the Hermetic tradition into the early eighteenth century.

The manuscripts range over magical, alchemical and Rosicrucian material. We can summarize their contents as follows:

- Ms6481 This is described in the Harley Catalogue as follows—
"A quarto containing Dr. Rudd's Treatise of the miraculous Descensions and Ascensions of Spirits, verified by a practical examination of the principles in the Great World—the second part professes to contain some choice Rosicrucian Chymical medicines, wholesome and fit to keep the body in health and lustiness, until the appointed time of death, that is when the soul separates from it. And then teaches the harmony and composition of the human soul, and then conducts it to the source from whence it came. This and the following volumes to 6486 are full of mystical reveries."
- Ms6482 A Treatise on Angel Magic
- Ms6483 "A quarto, containing all the Names, Orders, and Offices of all the Spirits Salomon ever conversed with: the Seals and Characters belonging to each Spirit: and the manner of calling them forth to visible appearance. Some of these Spirits are in Enoch's Tables described in the former volume, but their Seals and Characters, how they may be known are omitted, which are therefore in this book at large set forth."

- Ms6484 Dr. Rudd's Treatise of the Talismanical Sculpture of the Persians, or the manner of making Images under certain constellations
- Ms6485 Primarily an Alchemical compendium comprising three longish texts:
The Rosie Crucian Secrets
A Dictionary of Alchemical term
 A Translation of Michael Maier's "Of the Laws and the Mysteries of the Rosicrucians"
 (Although 'Rosicrucians' are mentioned in the text of "The Rosie Crucian Secrets" this is primarily a philosophical-practical work on alchemy. At the top of every fourth or fifth folio is the note "the first (etc) sheet of Dr. Dee" indicating perhaps that this item has been copied from a larger manuscript that the author understood to have belonged to Dr. Dee. It is, however, most unlikely that this work was written by John Dee.)
- Ms6486 An exact copy of "The Chymical Wedding of Christian Rosenkreutz," claiming to be "translated from the original Latin by Peter Smart, Master of Arts, 1714." However, it is nothing other than a copy of the Ezechiel Foxcroft English translation published in 1690. Smart claims or deludes himself to be copying from an ancient manuscript with marginal notes by Dr. Rudd. These marginal notes are in fact from the printed edition of the work.

Frances Yates examines this manuscript in her Rosicrucian Enlightenment, chapter 14. Although recognizing it as a copy of the Foxcroft translation, she finds it interesting that Peter Smart thought himself to be copying a work which stemmed from John Dee, and he especially emphasises the 'Hieroglyphic Monad' symbol which appears in the margin of the Foxcroft edition (the First Day).

Frances Yates further suggests that the 'Dr. Rudd' was Thomas Rudd, who published an edition of John Dee's Mathematical Preface to Euclid in 1651. The Treatise contains a reference to Selden (1584-1654), a renowned antiquary and oriental scholar, confirming that the treatise would have been written down in the middle of the seventeenth century at the earliest. It seems likely that Rudd was heir to esoteric material from the late sixteenth century (period of John Dee) and the early decades of the seventeenth century (the Rosicrucian period); one can thus speculate that he might have been in the circles of Arthur Dee, John Dee's son, who worked in a more alchemical direction than his father, and continued his esoteric studies well into the seventeenth century.

Two other items in the Harley Collection show Rudd to have been a Hebrew scholar sympathetically inclined toward the Jews. Ms6480 is a Hebrew grammar by Rudd, while 6479 is described in the catalogue as "a quarto, containing a defense of the Jews and other Eastern Men, where it is proved that many things are falsely imposed upon the Jews and the rest of the Eastern Men that never were..."

The Treatise on Angel Magic is a compendium of western occult traditions about Angels and related spirits. Dr. Rudd has gathered material from a broad spectrum of primary sources available to him. We can identify some of these quite easily as:

The Three Books of Occult Philosophy of Henry Cornelius Agrippa,
The Lemegeton or Lesser Key of Solomon,
 Reginald Scott's book on Witchcraft,
Malleus Malleficarum, and
The Arbatel of Magic.

Rudd also seems to have had available a secret tradition about the Enochian Tables of John Dee, which he reveals in a section entitled 'Clavis Enochiani,' the Key of the Tables. This is one of the most important items in this compendium, for it gives us an insight into the use of these seven squares, corresponding to the seven planets, and identifies some of the beings and symbolism associated with these enigmatic magic squares. Although Rudd does not provide an exhaustive account of this system, I believe that with the hints he has here given, it would be possible for an experienced occult scholar and practitioner to work out the full system underlying these squares, and the master diagram within which they are integrated.

The second main section of the work is Dr. Rudd's "Nine Hierarchies of Angels and their Conjunction to Visible Appearance." This is a most interesting item, for here Rudd reveals himself as a practicing magician, rather than merely a collector or scholar of esoteric material.

He reveals in the structuring of his conjurations an almost obsessive concern with identifying the invoked spirit as a 'good' Angel. There is a hint of paranoiac insecurity about getting in touch with an 'evil' spirit. Consequently, his conjurations are hedged around with tests to trap and make an 'evil' spirit reveal its true colors. Rudd reveals himself here as being immersed in a dualistic picture of the spiritual world. This dualism also shows itself in other sections of his manuscript, particularly in the sections on Demons or Witches and Enchanters, and the fact that he sets great store by the Malleus Malleficarum, that tissue of lies and propaganda dreamt up by two Dominican Inquisitors to justify their unwholesome imaginings.

Rudd's 'Nine Hierarchies of Angels with their Invocations to Visible Appearance' reminds one of the atmosphere of the John Dee and Edward Kelley workings. Dee and Kelley also were almost obsessively concerned with whether they had invoked a 'good' or 'evil' spirit, and went to great lengths to develop methods of working which could protect them against stray 'evil' spirits. Indeed, both Dee and Kelley remained uncertain, even years after they had ceased to work together on their Enochian magic, as to whether the spirits they had then contacted were 'good' or 'evil.'

The question of dualism is of great import in esotericism.

Western occultism has been much influenced by the Kabbalistic stream which, being the esoteric tradition of the Jewish peoples, could not help but have the polarized naive dualism of the Jewish patriarchal religion impressed into its symbolism and method of working. The formative idea of the Fall of Man being linked with a 'Fall' of rebel Angels, which then became 'Demons' bearing special relationship to Man, lay at the heart of this spiritual dualism. Norman Cohn, in his excellent book Europe's Inner Demons (1975), which I recommend to be read in conjunction with this Treatise, shows how this view was consolidated in history from the twelfth century and led to the establishment of a stereotyped picture of the Magician figure, conjuring Demons, making pacts with the Devil, etc., and later also regrettably brought about great suffering through the projection of such dualistic archetypes onto women, in the witchcraft persecutions.

With the greater understanding of the psyche that has arisen since the identification of the realm of the unconscious within our being, and the recognition by Jung and others that these different facets of the psyche must be integrated in order to avoid pathological conditions arising through repressing in a dualistic way a side of our being, esotericists and occultists in the twentieth century have been able to see more clearly the dangers of dualism and seek for a balanced esotericism.

It has, therefore, become obvious that occultists of an earlier time, especially during the transition of the middle ages into the Renaissance, were strongly influenced by the prevailing current of dualism that was given fresh energy through the impulse of naive Protestantism.

Before this period magicians could work naturally to invoke spirits without any great inner qualms. They saw that such spirits were, after all, part of God's creation and worthy of the occultist's attention. The earliest grimoires, the books of conjuration, describe elevated spiritual rituals that would not be out of place in any religious tradition, requiring fasting, abstention and a period of celibacy, prayers to God, purification and remission of sins, and petitions and addresses to the supreme God, in whose name they undertook their occult work. One suspects that few priests or bishops of the time took their church rituals quite so seriously as their magician contemporaries.

With the inpouring of the dualistic philosophical view into the collective consciousness, which one sees beginning in the twelfth century or thereabouts, these magical exercises or rituals are seen in a different light, both by outsiders to the experience and by the practitioners of the art itself. From that time on, ritual magic becomes plagued by dualism, and the magician's healthy relationship to the realm of spirits, his personal exploration through ritual of the spiritual world, becomes diseased by a concern about 'evil.'

This 'evil,' of course, we can see as being nothing else but an encounter of the magician with his unconscious mind, though it was to be many hundreds of years before this realm was recognized by our consciousness in such a way that the possibilities of an integrated relationship transcending dualism could come about.

Magical philosophy and ritual thus suffered an intrusion of the naive dualistic preoccupations of churchmen and scholars, struggling with their polarized patriarchal Christian religion whose internal contradictions were beginning to impinge upon their consciousness during the transition of the medieval period into the Renaissance.

The results of this struggle within the collective psyche of man can be seen mirrored in this Treatise on Angel Magic. Here, we have a compendium of material on 'Angels,' the spiritual beings of God (under a dualistic theology). But in order to fully describe these Angels and the means of working with them, Dr. Rudd has to outline a list of other spirits which under the same dualistic theology he must identify as 'Demons.' Thus he lists 'good' and 'evil' spirits, their characters and operation, and later has to expand at length on ways of avoiding working with 'evil' spirits.

It is interesting that he occasionally uses the word 'daemon' in place of 'demon,' where he experiences internal contradictions as to whether the being is 'good' or 'evil'. Thus Socrates' 'daemon'—his spiritual genius. In this earlier sense a 'daemon' meant a 'spirit' and was not colored with associations of good and evil.

The Treatise on Angel Magic gives us, in a sense, a thin slice of the collective psyche of Western humanity seen through the being of a magician who, sensitive to the reality of the existence of the realms of spiritual beings, nevertheless has to struggle with the prevailing naive dualism inherent in the Western religious tradition, which had been imported into his psyche. Rudd's struggle to unite these poles of dualism in his magical philosophy is quite transparent and should be of continuing interest in our time, when the process of integration, though collectively embarked upon, is in no sense completed. We can often witness our contemporaries descending into the same primitive dualisms that lived in and motivated peoples of earlier times, projecting such dualistic archetypes upon individuals, nations or events. This dualism which still lives in the atmosphere around us and within us, is perhaps the greatest problem that Western humanity has to face. We can only hope that an integration of these polarities in the Jungian sense can lead to a personal and societal 'individuation' that can heal this disease of the psyche.

The section on the Enochian tables is of great interest. The only primary published source of this is Casaubon's A True and Faithful Relation of what passed for many years between Dr. John Dee and some Spirits (1659), which is an edited version of some of Dee's Spiritual Diaries. It is certainly not a 'true and faithful relation,' but rather betrays Casaubon's hand in editing the material to show Dee in an unfavorable light. Casaubon was essentially a propagandist against Hermeticism and his motives in publishing his version of the Spiritual Diaries were to discredit Dee and tarnish his reputation. He even went so far as to describe it in his Preface as a 'work of darkness.' Included as a frontispiece illustration to his book is the famous diagram (shown on page 19) of the setting of the Holy Table with the enigmatic Enochian Squares around the sevenfold star. This was to be used in conjunction with the Seal of Aemeth, which I have included as a frontispiece illustration to this volume (the original wax version is still preserved in the British Museum), which tied together this sevenfold symbolism. However, the meaning of the letters and symbols on these squares has never been fully explained by any present day occultist, but I believe that the tradition which Rudd here records can be of value in helping scholars and esotericists to further unravel the intricacies of the system. It is especially important that, in the description of the Seven Tables, mention is made of two Angels from the Steganographia of Johannes Trithemius, thus for the first time providing documentary evidence that Dee's Enochian system bore some direct relationship to Trithemius' Angel Magic.

I have published this work because it seems to me to be an important compendium on Angel Magic, fairly summarizing the Western esoteric tradition at the end of the seventeenth century. Further, it includes the unique material on the Enochian Tables that is in itself of great value. Finally, I feel this work to be important to scholars and historians as its supposed author Dr. Rudd reveals the atmosphere of entrenched dualism within which he worked, which colored and charged his own perceptions, and no doubt those of his contemporaries. The Rudd Treatise was never meant to be published. It was, rather, a private 'commonplace book' or perhaps a reference book for a group or order of occultists working closely with Dr. Rudd. The Harley manuscript, as we realize, is merely a copy made in the early 1700's by Peter Smart, who was likely to have been one of Rudd's circle. The existence of this manuscript indicates the continuity of an occult system of Angel Magic, stretching from the workings of John Dee and Edward Kelley in the late sixteenth century into the early eighteenth century. I believe it to be an important link in the chain of the transmission of esoteric traditions.

For this edition of Harley 6482, I have transcribed the text in its entirety from the 283 folios of the original, and have not edited out any sections or otherwise interfered with the substance of the manuscript. In places I have modernized the spelling, but the style of the original is sufficiently close to modern usage not to require any editing. While working upon the manuscript I had the impression that certain sections were originally written in Latin and had been translated into English rather clumsily. It is also my view that this Treatise was intended as a compilation of the tradition of Angel Magic of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, for the use of a group of practicing occultists centered around Dr. Rudd. Hopefully, further historical research might help to identify this group and their means of working. The series of Rudd manuscripts in the Harley Collection provides, I believe, a fascinating glimpse into the concerns and activities of the occultism of the late seventeenth century.

THE HOLY TABLE
as laid out for the Angelic Invocations of John Dee and Edward Kelley

Frontispiece from Casaubon's
"True and Faithful Relation..."

This frontispiece illustration to Harley 6482 was drawn by Peter Smart. It would appear to be a picture of a mirror glass, placed upon a three-legged stand with its back turned outwards towards the reader. This back is extremely ornate and embellished with various figures and Hebrew names. Thus we see the first seven letters of the Angelic Alphabet, Agiel to Graphiel, and the seventy-two Schemhamphoras in Hebrew letters arranged in a series of ribbons amongst the chase-work. At the top upon the handle of the mirror we note the 'Secret Sigil of Solomon' surrounded by a circle of smaller sigils and letters. Most likely, Peter Smart was indicating by this figure some of the keys to the Angel Magic outlined by Rudd in his treatise, part of which involves using a magic mirror for the Invocation of the Nine Hierarchies to visible appearance.—Editor

The Ten Names of God, with their Ideas, Orbs and Hierarchies Largely Explained

God himself though he be trinity in persons yet is but one only simple Essence, there are in him many Divine powers, which as many beams flow from him which the Philosophers of the Gentiles called Gods.

The first name of the Divine Essence is EHEIE and his Idea is called Cether, which signifies a Crown, the most simple Essence of the Divinity which the Eye seeth not and is attributed to God the Father and hath his influence by the Order of Seraphims, who the Hebrews call Hayoth Hecadoth, that is, Creatures of Holiness, and then by the Primum Mobile bestoweth the gift of being to all things filling the whole Universe, both through the Circumference and Centre, whose particular Intelligence is called Metratton, that is, the Prince of Faces, whose duty is to bring others to the face of the Prince, and by him the Lord spake to Moses.

The second name is JOD or Tetragrammaton. His Idea is Hochma, that is, Wisdom, and signifieth the Divinity full of Ideas, and the first begotten, and is attributed to the Son, and hath his influence by the Order of Cherubims, which the Hebrews call Ophanim, that is forms or wheels, and from thence into the starry heaven where he fabricateth so many figures as he has Ideas in himself, and distinguisheth the very Chaos of the Creatures by particular Intelligence called Raziel who was the ruler of Adam.

The third name is called TETRAGRAMMATON ELOHIM. His Idea is named Bina, viz., Providence and Understanding, and signifies Remission, quietness, the Jubilee, penitential Conversion, a great trumpet, Redemption of the world, and the life of the world to come. It is attributed to the Holy Spirit and hath influence by the Order of Thrones, which the Hebrews call Aralim, that is, great Angels, mighty and strong, and from thence by the sphere of Saturn administreth form to the unsettled matter, whose particular Intelligence is Zaphkiel or Zazel the Ruler of Noah, and another Intelligence named Iophiel, the Ruler of Sem. And these are three supreme and high Ideas, as it were seats of the Divine Persons, by whose command all things are made, but are executed by the other seven upon Earth, which are therefore called the divine Ideas framing.

The fourth name is EL whose Idea is Hesed, which is Clemency or goodness, and signifies Grace, Mercy, piety, magnificence, the Sceptre and right hand, and hath his influence by the Order of Dominions, which the Hebrews call Hasmalim, and so through the sphere of Jupiter, fashioning the Images of bodies, bestowing Clemency and pacifying Justice on all. His particular Intelligence is Zadkiel, the Ruler of Abraham.

The fifth name is ELOHIM GIBOR, that is the mighty God punishing the wicked, and his Idea is called Geburah, that is, power, gravity, fortitude, severity, Judgement, punishing by slaughter and war, and it is applied to the tribunal of God. The Girdle, the Sword, and the left hand of God, it is called Pachad, which is fear, and has his influence through the Order of Powers, which the Hebrews call Seraphim; and these through the sphere of Mars illuminate the Rosy Crucians to whom belongs fortitude and prudence. It draweth forth the Elements, and his particular Intelligence is Camiel the Ruler of Sampson.

The sixth name is ELOHA or a name of יהוה joined with Vandabat, his Idea is Tiphareth, that is Apparel, beauty, glory, pleasure, and signifieth the tree of life, and hath his influence through the Order of Virtues, which the Hebrews call Malachim, that is, Angels, into the Sphere of the Sun, giving brightness and life unto it, and from thence producing metals and thereto make aurum potable. His particular Intelligence is Raphael who was the Ruler of Isaac and Toby the younger, and the Angel Peliel Ruler of Jacob.

The seventh name is TETRAGRAMMATON SABAOTH or Adonai Sabaoth, that is the God of Hosts, and his Idea is Nezah, that is, triumph and victory. It signifies the eternity and Justice of a revenging God, he hath his influence through the Order of Principalities, whom the Hebrews call Elohim, that is, Lords, into the sphere of Venus. Gives Zeal and Love of righteousness, and produceth vegetables. His Intelligence is Haniel, and the Angel Cerviel the Ruler of David.

The eighth name is ELOHIM SABAOTH, which is interpreted the God of Hosts, not of war and justice but of piety and agreement; for his name signifieth both, and proceedeth his army. The Idea of this is Hod which is interpreted both praise, confession, honour and famousness, it hath influence through the Order of Archangels, which the Hebrews call Ben Elohim, that is the Sons of God, into the sphere of Mercury and gives eligancy and consonancy of speech and produceth living creatures. His Idea is Michael who was the Ruler of Salomon.

The ninth name is called SADAI, that is, Omnipotent, satisfying all, and Elhai, which is the living God. His Idea is Jesod, that is, foundation and rest, and hath his influence through the Order of Angels, whom the Hebrews call Cherubim, into the sphere of the Moon causing the increase and decrease of things and taketh care of the Ideas of the Earth, of the Rulers of the Twelve Divisions and of their Images or figures and of the Genii and keepers of men and distributeth them. His Genius is Gabriel who was the keeper of Joseph, Joshua and Daniel.

The tenth name is ADONAI MELECH, that is Lord and King, his Idea is Malcuth, that is Kingdom and Empire, and signifieth Church, Temple of God and a Gate, and hath his influence through the Order of Anamastick, viz., of blessed Souls, which by the Hebrews is called Assim, that is Nobles, Lords and Squires, they are inferior to the Hyerarchies and have their influence in the sixteen figures of Geomancy, the twelve Ideas, the four Elements and their twelve Regions or places divided, the twelve Winds which come forth from the twelve Houses of the Earth and on the Sons of Men. And thus they give knowledge, and the wonderful understanding of things, industry and predictions, and the President among them is Methratton, which is called the first Creature or the Soul of the World, and Sorath or ☉ distributeth his virtues. And after this manner do the Earthly powers receive their Commissions which are figuratively incorporated into seven and they again in their natures given it to twelve, which also in twelve places signify all things past, present and to come in all the world.

In the Intelligible World according to Dionysius, these are the names of the ten Orders of the Blessed:

- 1 Seraphims
- 2 Cherubims
- 3 Thrones
- 4 Dominations
- 5 Powers
- 6 Virtues
- 7 Principalities
- 8 Archangels
- 9 Angels
- 10 Blessed Souls

According to the Hebrew Rabbins the ten Orders bear these names:

- 1 Haiioth Hakadoth
- 2 Ophani
- 3 Aralim
- 4 Hasmalim
- 5 Seraphim
- 6 Malachim
- 7 Elohim
- 8 Ben Elohim
- 9 Cherubim
- 10 Issim

And these Orders possess the ten Spheres of the World, which are these:

- 1 The Primum Mobile or first mover
- 2 The Sphere of the Zodiac
- 3 The Sphere of Saturn
- 4 The Sphere of Jupiter
- 5 The Sphere of Mars
- 6 The Sphere of the Sun
- 7 The Sphere of Venus
- 8 The Sphere of Mercury
- 9 The Sphere of the Moon
- 10 The Sphere of the Elements

Anima Mundi – The Soul of the World

All the Platonics and Pythagoreans, Orpheus, Trismegistus, Aristotle, Theophrastus, Avicenna, Algazales and all Peripatetics acknowledge and confirm that the world is not only inhabited by spirit and soul but also by the participation of the Divine Mind, and all origin, virtue and vigour of inferior things depends upon this Anima Mundi.

The Magi call the Anima Mundi or the whole Universe, the realm of Jove; indeed they name it the Apollonian mind of the world; and moreover the Minerva Nature of the world, in fire Vulcan, in water Neptune, and they have called it by many names.

Also the Pythagoreans set twelve particular Gods of the Zodiac, or such souls situated in the hearts of the stars, and accordingly we can write all the rulers of the stars as:

Pallas, particularly in the heart of Aries,
Venus, particularly in the heart of Taurus,
Phoebus, particularly of Gemini,
Mercury of Cancer,
Jupiter of Leo,
Ceres of Virgo,
Vulcan of Libra,
Mars of Scorpio,
Diana of Sagittarius,
Vesta of Capricorn,
Juno particularly of Aquarius,
Neptune particularly in the soul of Pisces.

Of Angels Good and Bad Their Degrees and Offices

Lucifer and those other Angels that offended with him in ambition and pride fell not altogether into the very Abysme of Hell, though they all fell into the truest Hell which is punishment. Those which remained in the places between, was because they had not offended with so determinate an obstinacy and vehemence as the others had, and they remained also there because it was necessary and convenient for our merit, that we should have spirits for our Enemies, and in such place where they might vex us with their temptations, for which cause God permitted a great part of them to remain in the air, the earth and the water, where they shall continue till the Day of Judgement, and then they shall be all damned into the very dungeon of Hell: so that we have with them continual war: which though they be in the places aforesaid, yet are they not out of Hell in respect of torment, for their pain is all alike [See Aquinas, Quest. 64. Ar. 4]. The Difference of the Degrees of spirits is rehearsed by Gaudentius Merula taking the same out of Psellius who maketh Six kinds or degrees of spirits between heaven and hell. The first are those that remained in the highest Region of the Air, he calleth Angels of fire because they are near unto that region and perchance within it. The second kind, saith he, is from the middle region of the air downwards towards the earth. The third on the Earth itself. The fourth in the waters. The fifth in the Caves and hollow vaults of the earth. The sixth in the very dungeon and abysme of hell. In such sort, that they are as it were interlinked one with another, but all these spirits have duties and offices of divers sorts. For the chiefest grief and pain of the first which were those that had least offended, seeing themselves so near Heaven, is the Contemplation: that through their wickedness they have left so great a beatitude (though this be general to them all), and those are nothing so harmful as the others are. For those which are in the middle of the region of the air, and those that are under them nearer the Earth, are those which sometimes, out of the ordinary operation of nature, do move the winds with greater fury than they are accustomed and do out of season congeal the clouds causing it to thunder, lighten, hail and to destroy the grass, corn, vines and fruits of the Earth, and these are they whose help the Necromancers do often use in their devilish operations. An example to this purpose I find in Malleus Malleficarum: the Commissioners having apprehended certain sorceresses, willed one of them to show that she could do, assuring her life on condition that from hence forward, she should no more offend in the like. Whereupon, going out of the fields in presence of the Commissioners and others, she made a pit in the ground with her hands making her water into the same, which being done she stirred around the urine with one of her fingers, out of the which by little and little after she had made certain characters and mumbled a few words, there arose a vapour which ascending upwards like a smoke, began to thicken of itself in the midst of the Region of the air, gathering and making there a black fearful cloud, which cast out so many thunders and lightnings that it seemed to be a thing hellish and Infernal. The woman remaining all this while still, asked the Commissioners where they would have that cloud to discharge a great quantity of stones, they pointing her to a certain place where it could do no hurt at all, the cloud of a sudden began to move itself with a great furious blustering of winds and in short space coming over the place appointed, discharged a great number of stones like a violent shower directly within the compass thereof. And in this sort may the witches and Necromancers make many such like things through the help of these spirits.

But now to declare the office and function of a third kind of spirits being on the earth whose principal office and function is to persecute men and to tempt and allure men to sin, and thereby to work their damnation, envying that those places that they once enjoyed in heaven, should be possessed and replenished with men, see here the Devil's malice which proceedeth only of envy. These spirits vex, deceive, entice us sleeping and waking. To defend us from their temptations we have an Angel Guardian to direct and guard us, and we have at our left hand an ill spirit which still solicits and allures us to sin. Their power is restrained that they cannot put in execution the full puissance of their malicious desires without the permission of God.

A strange chance happened to a boy in the city of Astorges. A man of good quality and learning there had two sons, the one being about twelve or thirteen years old had by some fault so offended his mother that in a rage she cursed him with detestable Maledictions betaking him to the Devils of Hell, and wishing that they would fetch him out of her presence. This was about ten at night, being very dark; the foolish woman continuing her curses so long, till at last the boy, through fear went out into a little court behind the house, out of which he suddenly vanished, and though they diligently searched round the house they could be no means find him, at which they exceedingly wondered, for both the doors of the house were locked, and round the house they searched but could find no way for his going out. About two hours after, they heard in a chamber above their heads a very great noise, and withal the young boy groaning with extreme anguish and grief. They presently going up and opening the chamber door which they found also fast locked, they perceived the silly boy groveling on the ground in a most pitiful manner, for besides his garments rent to pieces, his face and hands and in a manner his whole body scratched and grated as if he had been drawn through briars and thorns, and he was so disfigured and dismayed, that he came not all that night to himself. In the meantime, his parents caused him to be dressed and cured, omitting nothing to the recovery of his health. The next day, after his senses were somewhat comforted, and he began to recover his judgement, they asked him by what means this accident had happened to him. To whom he made answer, that as he stood in the court there came unto him certain men of exceeding great stature, grim in countenance and in gesture loathsome and horrible, who presently without speaking any word hoisted him up into the air and carried him away with such swiftness, that it was not possible to his seeming for any bird in the world to fly so fast; and at last lighting down amongst certain mountains full of bushes and briars, they trailed him through the thickest part of them from one side to another, with intention to kill, he had at last the grace and memory to commend himself unto God beseeching Him to help and assist him: at which very instant they turned back with him through the air, and put him in a little window which was there in the chamber, where when they had left him they vanished away. The boy lived many years after but remained ever after deaf and dull conceited, never recovering his former quickness and vivacity of spirit, taking continually exceeding grief when any man talked to him of this matter.

The fourth kind of Spirits are those which are in the water as well the Sea as floods, rivers and lakes. These never cease to raise damps and storms persecuting those which sail, putting them in great dangers through violent and raging tempests, procuring to destroy and drown the ships also through the aid of monstrous rocks and shallows which are in the sea. Overturning the boats that are in the rivers, and causing those that swim to entangle themselves in sedges or woods, or bringing them into some pits or holes where they cannot get out, and by all means possible persecute and molest them so far as the limitation of their power extendeth.

The fifth kind of Spirits are those which are in the caves and vaults of the Earth, where they lie in wait to entrap those that dig in mines and wells and other works underground, whose death and destruction they covet and procure as much as they may. These cause the motions and tremblings of the earth through the aid of the Winds which are there enclosed, whereby whole cities are often in danger to be swallowed up, especially those which are built near the Sea. Whole mountains are hereby thrown down, infinite people destroyed; sometimes the sea hereby breaketh into the land wasting and destroying whatever it findeth before it.

The sixth and last kind of Spirits are those who are in the Abysme and place called Hell, whose principal and proper office is, besides the pains which they endure, to torment the damned souls. This place, saith Job, hath no order at all but continual fear, horror and amazement.

Apuleius, who made himself so well acquainted with Spirits of all sorts, writeth that there is a kind of Spirits who are always free from the strings and bonds of the body, of which number is sleep and love whom he termeth Spirits; whereby he seemeth to confess, that there are others which have bodies, and so thinketh St. Basil, who attributeth bodies not only to these spirits but also to the Angels: Psellius is of the same opinion.

It is the general opinion of all the fathers and doctors of the Church as well ancient as modern, that the Angels when it is necessary do fashion and make unto themselves visible bodies, for the effects which they pretend, as we find in many places of the holy Scriptures: whether it be of air thickened, or fire, or of earth, it maketh no matter; but that so it is — see what is written of the three Angels that came to the house of Abraham in the likeness of three beautiful young men. And the Angel Gabriel appeared to the glorious Virgin in a most goodly form and figure when he brought her the Salutation. The self same is permitted to devils in their operations, whose bodies though we call phantastical, because they vanish quickly away, yet they verily are visible bodies formed of such substance as I said before, but the same is so fine and delicate that it straight dissolveth and vanisheth. To say something of a Phantasm which hath his beginning in the phantasy, which is a virtue in man called by another name Imaginative, and because this virtue being moved, worketh in such sort, that it causeth in itself the things feigned and imagined to seem present, though in truth they are not. We say also, that the things which vanish away so soon as we have seen them are phantasies, seeming to us that we deceive ourselves, and that we saw them not, but that they were only represented in our fancy. But this is in such sort that sometimes we truly see them indeed, and other times our Imagination and fancy so present them to our view, that they deceive us, and we understand not whether they were things seen or imagined, and therefore comes it, that we call the things which we really see 'Visions', and others which are represented to the phantasy 'Fancies'.

Of Incubi and Succubi

Devils are Incubi and Succubi taking oftentimes to that end the shape and likeness, sometimes of men, sometimes of women, and commit the greatest abominations that may be, so that jointly they may procure and cause men to commit it with them. Coelius Rodiginus saith that there was in Greece a man called Marcus who had great familiarity with Devils, for which cause he lived always solitary conversing little with other men. This man uttered many of the Devil's secrets, of which this of ye Incubi and Succubi was one, and many others that for their filthiness and abomination are not to be spoken of; but according to his confession, all the Devils do not use this execrable offence, but those only who are near unto us, and do form their bodies of a gross substance, as of water or earth. St. Augustine saith, that the Satyrs and Fauns were thought of some to be Incubi, because they were so luxurious. Hence many took occasion to authorise that for truth which is reported of Merlin that he was begotten of a Devil, but this is better said than affirmed, for whether it be or not, God only knoweth.

In the Diocese of Bamberg there was a virgin that brought forth a Son and remained a true virgin afterwards, for whilst the maid slept the Daemon defiled her, she was wholly ignorant of the deceit upon examination of honest Matrons, many advised her to marry, that she might bring forth without danger of her life, but she resolved to keep her vow of virginity though her death might follow. When her time was come she was delivered of a birth, and lived many years after in great devotion.

The Power and Authority that Necromancers and Witches Have Over the Devil

They constrain the Devils and make them perforce obey and accomplish their commands, carrying them bound and enclosed in rings, boxes and little Vials, applying their helps to such as far as they please, and such Devils they commonly call Familiars. The Art of Necromancy was used in old time by faithful and unfaithful and in our days by divers. This Art may be exercised in two sorts. The first is Natural, which may be wrought through things, whose virtue and property is natural to do them, as herbs, plants and stones, and other things as the planets and heavenly influences, and this Art is lawful and may be used and practiced of those that can attain to this knowledge of their hidden properties. Aquinas, in his book, De Ente et Essentia, alleged that Abel the son of Adam made a book of all the virtues and properties of the planets foreknowing that the world should perish through the general flood, he enclosed so cunningly in a stone that the waters could not come to corrupt the same, whereby it might be preserved and known to all people. This stone was found by Hermes Trismegistus, who breaking it, and finding the book therein enclosed, profited wonderfully by applying the contents thereof to his use; which Book, coming afterwards into the hand of St. Thomas, he did therewith many great experiences, one was, that being sick and troubled with the noise of beasts and carriages that passed through the street, remedied that trouble by making an Image as the book proscribed him, which being buried in the street none of all the beasts had power to pass thereby, but coming thither stayed or went backwards, nor could by any man be constrained to do the contrary. He also telleth of a certain friend of his, who by the same book, made an Image, and putting it into a fountain, it caused all such vessels as touched the water thereof to break presently, which came by observation of certain hours and points in working of those Images, of which they took great account and heed, to the end that the planets might the better use their influence in working those things which seemed supernatural. The use of all this is so lawful that nothing can be said to the contrary.

The other kind of Necromancy or Art of Magic, is that which is used and practised through the help and favour of the Devil, which hath been long time exercised in the world. Of this the Holy Scriptures testify, speaking of the Magicians of Pharoah, who contended with Moses and Aaron, as in the New Testament in the Acts making mention of Simon Magus rebuked by St. Peter, and besides you must understand that the Devils may be forced and constrained by the good Angels, and this is because of the Grace which the one lost, and the other as yet retains.

None can use or exercise this Art of Necromancy unless he first make a secret Agreement or express Covenant with the Devil, and such Devils with whom they deal in those Covenants are not of the common sort but of a higher and superior condition, for amongst themselves they do observe their orders and degrees of superiority, as Franciscus de Victoria asserts, and this is for the better use of their wickedness, and so saith Aquinas.

Some Devils are preferred as principals to command the rest, and the inferior Devils are subject unto those, which are of mighty force to execute their wickedness. And therefore the Jews said unto Christ, that he wrought his Miracles in the name of Beelzebub, the Prince of Devils, so that the Necromancer and Magicians that are confederated with the Princes and Captains of the Infernal army, have always the lesser and inferior Devils in a readiness at Commandment to do their will and pleasure, being thereunto constrained by those of the higher dignity and condition.

It is the opinion of St. Augustine and Aquinas that the Devils are not kept bound and enclosed in rings, boxes or Vials. The Devils may make them believe so with whom they deal, for they are where and in what place, and when they list themselves, and how far soever they be off, yet at such time as they are called, or their presence required, they come in at that instant to make answer to those which holding them for familiars, and thinking surely that they carry them always present with them, demand or ask anything of them, who are greatly abused and deceived in presuming that they are able to hold them forcibly at their Commandment, because it proceedeth not through the words of the Necromancer, but through the might and authority of the higher Spirits and Devils which as Captains govern and Command them. Yea, and sometime constraining them to remain bound indeed, when they have any notable exploit in hand, but also for the most part they have them always at liberty

Of Spirits Called Hobgoblins or Robin Goodfellows

These kinds of Spirits are more familiar and domestical than the others, and for some causes to us unknown, abide in one place more than in another, so that some never almost depart from some particular houses, as though they were their proper Mansions, making in them sundry noises, rumours, mockeries, gawds and jests, without doing any harm at all, and some have heard them play on Gitterns and Jews harps, and ring bells and make answer to those that call them, and speak with certain signs, laughters and merry gestures, so that those of the house come at last to be so familiar, and well acquainted with them that they fear them not at all. But in truth, if they had free power to put in execution their malicious desire, we should find these pranks of theirs not to be jests, but earnest indeed, tending to the destruction both of our body and soul, but their power is so restrained and tied that they can pass no further than to jests and gawds, and if they do any harm at all it is certainly very little as by experience has been found.

Of the Orders of Wicked Demons and of their Fall and their Divers Natures

These wicked Demons are divided into nine degrees or Orders, as the good Angels are divided into nine Orders or Hierarchies.

1 Pseudothei

The first Order of Demons are called Pseudothei or false gods who usurp God's name, would be worshipped as Gods, have adoration and sacrifice made to them, as that Demon said to Christ—if thou wilt fall down and worship me, all shall be thine. And the Prince of these Demons is Beelzebub, that is an old God, he said I shall ascend above the height of the clouds and be like the Most High.

2 Spiritus Mendaciorum

After these follow the spirits of Lying, of which kind was he that was a lying spirit in the mouths of Ahab's prophets. And their Prince is that spirit Python, from whom Apollo Pythius was called, and that pythonic woman with Samuel, and that other woman in the Gospels that had a python in her belly. This kind of Demon deceives by their Oracles, divinations and predictions.

3 Vasa Iniquitatis

In the third Order are the Vessels of Iniquity, which are called the Vessels of Anger. These are the inventors of mischiefs and of all wicked Arts. Plato mentions one of these wicked Demons that was called Theutus who taught plays, dice and cards; from these proceed all wickedness, malice and deformity.

In Genesis, Jacob called Symeon and Levi 'Vessels of Iniquity', in their dwellings with the Psalmist 'Vessels of Death', Isaiah called them 'Vessels of Fury', and Jeremiah 'Vessels of Anger', and Ezekiel 'Vessels of Killing and Destruction'. And the Prince of them is Belial, which is interpreted—without an yoke, or disobedient, a prevaricator and Apostate; of whom Paul saith to the Corinthians—What Convention of Christ with Belial.

4 Ultiores Scelorum

The Revengers of Wickedness, and their Prince is Asmodeus, that is, doing Judgement.

5 Praestigiatores

The Praestigiators come into the fifth Order, who imitate Miracles, and serve the Caco-magi and Malefics, and seduce people in their miracles as the Serpent seduced Eve, and their Prince is Sathan, who seduces the whole world.

6 Aeriae Potestates

The Aerial Powers offer themselves in the sixth Order, who mix themselves with thunders and lightnings, corrupting the Air bringing pestilence and other evils, of which number are the four Angels in the Apocalypse to whom it was given to hurt the Earth and Sea, holding the four Winds from the four Corners of the Earth. And their Prince is called Merizim. This is a South Demon, a raging and furious Demon in the South whom Paul calls in the Ephesians, a Prince of the power of the air and a spirit which works in the Children of Disobedience.

7 Furiae

The seventh Mansion the Furies hold — the Sowers of Mischief and discord, wars, and destruction, whose Prince in the Apocalypse is called in Greek Apollyon, in Hebrew Abaddon, that is, destroying and laying waste.

8 Criminatores

In the eighth place stand the Criminators or Accusers, whose Prince is Astaroth, that is, an Explorator in Greek. He is called Diabolus, that is a Criminator or Calumniator, who in the Apocalypse is called an Accuser of the Brethren day and night before the face of God.

9 Tentatores Maligenii

The last place hold the Tempters, who we call the bad Genii and their Prince is Mammon, who is interpreted Covetousness. But these bad Demons do unanimously infect this lower world, and therefore are called Diaboli.

And it is an opinion that these Apostate Angels or Devils shall persuade very many Angels to decline with him, who are now called his Angels, but St. Basil thinks not that they are all condemned and purposively wicked, but that they should be appointed from the beginning to be the Carnificina for souls offending.

Other divines say that no Demons were created wicked but were cast down from the Heavens from the Orders of good Angels, for their prevarication, as all Hebrew divines, Assyrian, Arabian and Egyptian do confirm. Phererides the Syrian describes the fall of Demons, and Ophin, that is a Serpent Demoniac, that was the head of the rebellious army. But those Demons thrown down into this valley of Misery, being near us do wander up and down in this dark air. Others inhabit lakes, rivers and seas, others terrify the Earth and earthly things, and invade the diggers of wells and metals. They provoke the gapings of the Earth and shake the foundations of mountains, neither do they vex men only but living creatures. Others sometimes putting on a gigantic body very tall, and then appear very small like pigmies turning themselves into diverse figures, trouble men with vain terror; others study lies and blasphemies, as in Kings 3, 22 — "I will be a lying spirit in the mouth of all Ahab's prophets."

But the worst sort of Demons are those who molest men in their journeys rushing upon them that pass along, rejoice in wars and effusion of blood and afflict men with sore insults. In the Psalms they are called asps, basilisks, lions, dragons. In the Gospel called Scorpion and Mammon, the Prince of this world and Rector of darkness whose Prince is Beelzebub. Porphyry calls him Serapis and the Greeks Pluto.

Origen pleaded for the Demons admission into favour. Many of the lapsed Angels may hope to be saved, and bring this argument out of the Gospel that Christ heard the prayers of Demons and suffered them to go into the herd of swine. Psalm 72, the Ethiopians shall fall down before him, and his enemies shall lick the dust, but according to the Hebrews, verily it runs thus. Before him the inhabitants of solitude shall bend their knees, that is, the aerial spirits shall worship him as the Cabalists do assert, and his enemies shall lick the dust, which they expound of Zazel and his army, of whom it is read in Genesis — "Thou shalt eat dust all the days of thy life." Hence the Cabalists think that some demons may be saved and it was the opinion of Origen.

Of the Bodies of Demons

There are great differences among Divines and Philosophers. Aquinas affirms that all the Angels as well as wicked demons are incorporeal, but sometimes they assume bodies which they presently put off. Dionysius in his Divine Names affirms that the Angels are without bodies.

Augustine upon Genesis saith that Demons are said to be airy as well as fiery animals, neither are they loosed by death because there prevails in them the Element to act rather than to suffer, and further saith that all Angels from the beginning of their Creation had aerial bodies formed from the pure and more superior part of the air fit for action not passion, and these bodies were preserved after confirmation by the good Angels, but by the bad Angels were changed into the quality of grosser air that they might suffer by fire.

The great Basil doth not only attribute bodies to Demons but also to pure Angels, as certain small aerial and pure spirits. And Gregory Nazianzene agrees to this, also Apuleius that all demons have bodies as you may read of Socrates Daemon. Psellus the Platonic and Christian held that demons by nature could not be without a body, as bodies of shadows and subject to passion, as if smitten should be more sorrowful, and if burnt should turn to ashes, which was proved true in Tuscia. According to the mixture of the Elements among themselves, so are the different kinds of the bodies of demons, which will require a large discourse if all objections to the contrary are answered.

Divines are of the opinion that all wicked demons are of that nature that they equally hate God as well as man, but divine providence hath ordered good demons more pure and near to us to watch over us and daily help us, and that they may drive away and bind those bad demons that they may not hurt us as they would do. You may read in Tobit of Raphael that bound Asmodeus a Demon in the desert of the Upper Egypt.

Some deny an immaterial being, and that nothing can be sine materia, and removing corporeal matters out of this world there will still remain space and distance in which this very matter, while it was there, was accustomed to lie, and this distant space cannot but be something, and yet not corporeal, because neither corruptible, impenetrable nor tangible, it must of necessity be a substance incorporeal, necessarily and eternally existent of itself, which the clear Idea of a being absolutely perfect will more fully and punctually inform us to be the self subsisting God or Immaterial Being.

Of Astromantic and Geomantic Games

See Paracelsus Tom. 2. Lib. 4. De Causis Morborum Invisibilium.

The Ghosts of dead men called Evestia, which are often seen to appear in churchyards, are natural effects being only the forms of the bodies which are buried in those places, or their outward shapes or figures and not the souls of these men, or any such like apparition caused by evil spirits as the common opinion is. The Ancients thought that these Ghosts were the good and evil Genii which attended always upon armies, but they are to be excused seeing they know not how to give any other reason of these apparitions.

It is most certain that in armies where there are great numbers, many die, you shall see some such Ghosts very often (especially after a battle) which are the Genii of the Air.

From whence these questions may arise:

Firstly, whether or no we may by these explain all the visions that are mentioned by writers.

Secondly, whether those wonderful effects which we attribute to Daemons or Spirits may proceed from these figures or not.

Thirdly, whether they have any power or not? And if it be granted they have any, Paracelsus is of opinion their Mummy hath in it all virtues of plants, stones, etc., and that it hath in it an occult Magnetic virtue which draws men to the sepulchres of those whom they account to have been holy men, whereby the virtue of the same Mummy there, are those effects wrought which we call miracles; which are observed to be much more frequent in the summer, than in any other season of the year, by reason of the heat of the Sun, which awakens and excites the humour, that is in the Mummy.

Fourthly, whether or no these wonderful forms which proceed

from the blood, the bones or the ashes of dead bodies, may serve for an undeniable argument of the Resurrection, a thing unknown to most of the Philosophers.

Fifthly, whether after they are raised up they can in any thing be serviceable unto us?

And sixthly, whether by their means we may be naturally able to attain to the knowledge of diverse secrets which are unknown to us. Though the body be reduced to ashes yet the figure is not thereby destroyed.

Of Telesmes (Talismans)

They are called in Hebrew קן i.e. a Scutcheon or Shield; in Chaldaic, Egyptian or Persian צלמניא i.e. Tsilmonia, it signifies a figure or Image; in Arabic تالسمان Talitsman or צלسم Tsaliman; and in Greek ΣΤΟΙΧΕΙΑ. Maghon signifies properly any piece of paper marked or noted with certain characters drawn from the Tetragrammaton, instead of a buckler or shield of defense against diseases, lightnings or tempests. Read Salmasius and Scaliger.

These figures are unlike those images of wax which sorcerers were of old want to baptise in the name of Beelzebub, these are abominations. But now I will declare what natural power these images may have which are made under certain constellations, banishing from hence all operations of Demons or spirits and all superstitious powers whatsoever.

I shall prove the power of figures and Images three ways: first, by the influence of the stars; second, by the power of resemblance; and thirdly, by experience.

Authentic historiographers affirm that there have been seen some of these Telesmes, Telesmanical, Telesmatical (which is all one), or figures that have been bitten by serpents, scorpions, mad dogs and diverse other mischances. The ancient Arabians as Almansor, Messahala, Zahel, Albohazen, Haly, Rhodoam, Albategnius, Homar, Zachdir, Hahamed and Serapion, give many examples of this kind, which gave Haly occasion to conclude that—"Utilem Serpentis Imaginem effici posse, quando Luna Serpentem coelestem subit aut foeliciter aspicit: Similiter Scorpionis effigium efficarem, quando Scorpii signum Luna ingreditur," (The usefulness of the image of the Serpent is made effective when the Moon is increasing and has a favourable aspect to the celestial Sign or Constellation of the Serpent, similarly, the effigy of the Scorpion is made effective when the Moon enters the sign of Scorpio). Haly experimented this doctrine in Egypt. He had there in his hand one of these Images of a Scorpion which did cure those that were stung by this venomous beast; and it was engraved on a Bezar stone.

Eugenius, besides an infinite number of rarities which he reports of Egypt, says that when they were sometimes digging in the Bridge at Apamia, there was found a piece of Copper whereon was to be seen the figure of a Rat, of a serpent and of a fire, which being afterwards neglected as peradventure either broken to pieces or in some way or other spoiled, there was observed in a very short time after a great number of serpents and rats to haunt the city, and they do greatly annoy it still; and we cannot without grief call to mind the many great losses the City hath from that time endured by fire: all which sad accidents were never heard of before the taking up of this strange Plate of Copper.

Camerarius reports Lib. 3, Cap. 20, that after that Mahomet the Second possessed himself of Constantinople, the breaking of the lower jaw of a brazen serpent was the cause of the increasing of serpents in those parts.

And by means of these Telesmes, learned men of the ages past have often chased away insects out of their cities and fields as Gnats, Locusts and Caterpillars. See the Chiliads of John Tzetzes, who lived circa annum 1160, where the Greek author (who lived about the time of that excellent historian Anna Comnena, daughter to the Emperor Elexius Comnenus) reports that Apollonius by making a Telesman of a stork, kept those troublesome birds from coming into Constantinople; and by another Telesman he drove away all the Gnats out of Antioch—see Ptolomy's Centriiloquium and the Commentary of Abregefer.

The first Gods of the Latins called Averrunci or Dii Tutelares were no more than these Telesmanical figures or images. Some historians affirm that they made some of these Tutelar gods under certain Constellations, but the poison of Idolatry having infected the best of sciences was the cause that these images being afterwards taken for Gods, the true and legitimate manner of making them was smothered. They were wont also to set up some of these Telesmes upon the prow of their ships to preserve them from shipwreck, and this done naturally too; seeing that a Telesman may be made under the sign Pisces, that may for some certain time render the waters calm and free from tempests. The Greeks (as Hesychi Herodotus) called these figures set up in ships ΠΑΙΑΙΧΟΥΣ[?], a word no doubt borrowed from the Hebrew פִּיחִיחִים

Pitochim which signifies Coelatura, and therefore the Chaldaic paraphrase renders it by this our צלמנא Tsilmenaia. These figures were not at all of any human form but of some Celestial figure or other which demonstrates that they were real Telesmans. Nevertheless, the mariners had also their statues of some deity or other, as of Mars, Apollo, Venus, Mercury and the like, which they placed at the poop or hinder parts of their ships as Virgil says—"Aurato fulgebat Apolline puppis." Which made the poets feign that Jupiter stole away Europa under the shape of a bull, because the ship of the Cretians who stole her away had for its Telesman the figure of the celestial Taurus, and for its deity a statue of Jupiter.

This custom of mariners setting up these Telesmans or images in their vessels against shipwreck, is so ancient, that they say that among those that came with Aeneas from Troy, there was one that had the figure of two Lions; that the Gadarenes had one with the image of a horse, and that the ship of Alexandria which St. Paul sailed in had the images of Castor and Pollux, or according to the Arabians, the Gemini graved on it; and that which carried Hypocrates when he took his journey to Abdera for the curing of Democritus, bore the figure of the Sun. Now all these Telesmans were not made so much for the avoiding of shipwreck only, as for the turning away of some other disastrous accidents or the procuring of some good fortune. And from this practice of the ancients have the Christians taken example, though in a Christian way, of having images in their vessels and picturing in them the Saints whose names they bear.

These Telesmans were not set up in cities and ships only, but also in the plain open fields too, and it may be that that Stone so much famed among the Turks, which they call Bractan and is set up in Mecca, being 4 foot long and 2 foot broad as Suidas reports, was only a Telesman. For otherwise we must even content ourselves with Turkish fables, and believe that it would never have been so highly prized by them, but for that it served instead of a bed to Abraham when he had knowledge of his maid Hagar. Others say that the reason why the Turks have this stone in so much veneration is because that Abraham tied his Camel to it when he went up to the Mountain to sacrifice his son as Euthymius Zigabenus affirms. Others say it was erected in memory of a certain holy woman who was taken up into heaven and afterwards honoured upon Earth as a Goddess, having very charitably entertained the Angels Arot and Marot. The figure of Venus was engraven on this stone with a Crescent which makes me believe that it was a Telesman of this planet, which M. Selden the great antiquary saith was anciently taken through all Asia for the Moon, which makes them venerate Friday as much as we do Sunday, in memory of Venus, which all the Asians worshipped and adorned their houses and tops of their Temples with little crescents, as ours are with crosses. This stone was placed in the open fields and not within any temple. By its virtue it drove away all venomous beasts, and made all the neighbouring fields both happy and fruitful, but the nature of this Telesman lasted but for a certain time as Albertus Magnus assures us.

Albinus Villanovensis shows us how to make a Telesman for to cure the tertian and quattran ague, the pain of the nerves, ventricles and privy parts. Grave the image of a scorpion upon a piece of Gold or Silver when the Sun is in his proper house and the Moon in Capricorn, and while you are graving it you must say these words—Exurge Domine gloria mea, Exurge Psalterium et Cithara, Exurgam diluculo—and then rehearse this Psalm—Miserere mei Deus miserere mei, quia in te confidit anima mea.

Cardinal Capetan lays down this true and powerful conclusion in favour of Telesmanical figures. "Figura licet non sit ipsum principium operationis est tamen con principium." He proves the antecedent, "quia in artificium instrumentis efficit figura, ut ille sic vel sit operentur; tuam quia ferrum latum super aquas fertur quod si in formam aliam contrahas demergetur."

Of the Telesmatical Images of the faces and of those images which are within the Zodiac.

There are besides in the Zodiac 36 images according to the number of the faces, of the which (as Porphyry saith) Teurer the Babylonian long since wrote, who was an eminent and ancient mathematician after whom the Arabians also wrote of these things.

Of Telesmes and How to Make Them

It was a Rule the trembling Heathen went by to undertake nothing inauspicate without some ominous performance, still obtaining their end by what dark and secret ways of co-operation soever brought to pass as undiscovered to themselves as us.

Of the foundation of Antioch read the Arabian history of Abdilphaker. When King Antiochus laid the foundation, it happened that whatsoever the workmen dug up by day, was again thrown in by night, and they were affrighted from the work by a dreadful apparition; the King called for the Astrologers and Wise Men, who after sacrifice rightly performed, discovered an appearance of Almarick or Mars. It was agreed, therefore, that a magnificent Temple should be erected to his name and his statue there set up, and that the foundation of the City should be laid under his Ascendant. Also an anniversary of three days festival was instituted, etc. These things continued until the manifestation of Jesus the Son of Mary.

In giving judgments of the Accidents of a City, take knowledge of the Sun and Moon's place in the Zodiac which they had at the laying of the foundation, but especially of the Ascendant as the most principal Angel: and the figures of Geomancy. According to these rules, Taricus Firmicus cast the nativity of Rome, and Vectius Valens an Astrologer of Antioch that of Constantinople, the figure whereof is extant in a Greek Manuscript in the Vatican. The Horoscope was Cancer $\begin{smallmatrix} \star \star \star \\ \star \star \end{smallmatrix}$ and the Astrologer judged by the appearance that the city should stand 702 years. In the Tables of Alkas, Constantinople is set up under Libra $\begin{smallmatrix} \star \star \\ \star \end{smallmatrix}$. In Ben Isaac's Geography under Taurus $\begin{smallmatrix} \star \star \\ \star \star \end{smallmatrix}$, Amissio or ♀ in ☾.

The founders of old at the building of their principal Cities, Castles or the like, cause the Astrologers to find out a lucky position of the heavens under which the first stone might be laid. The part of fortune found out in the first figure was made the Ascendant of another. The first judged of the livelihood and duration. The second of the outward glory and fortune of the City under the influence of this latter configuration, they erected a figure of brass into which this fortune and genius of the City was to be called by art. Thus spirited with this secret power it was disposed of in some eminent or recessful place of the City, and looked upon as that thing which was only concerned in the fortune and fatality of all.

Of the Images of the Fixed Behenian Stars

 According to Hermes Trismegistus under the head of Algol they made an Image whose figure was the head of a man with a bloody neck which bestoweth good success to petitions and maketh him who carried it bold and magnanimous and preserveth the members of the body sound, it helpeth against witchcraft.

Under the Constellation of Pleiades  they made the Image of a little virgin or the figure of a Lamp. It is reported to increase the light of the eyes, to assemble spirits, to raise winds to reveal secrets and hidden things.

Under Aldebaran  they made an Image after the likeness of God or of a flying man, it giveth riches and honour.

Under the Goat  they made an Image, the figure of which was as it were a man willing to make himself merry with musical instruments, it maketh him who carried it honoured and exalted before Kings and Princes.

Under the Greater Dog star  they made the Image of a Hound and a little Virgin. It bestoweth honour and favour of men and aerial spirits, reconcileth Princes and other men.

Under the Lesser Dog star  they made the Image of a Cock. It conferreth the favour of spirits and men, giveth power against witchcraft and preserveth health.

Under the heart of Leo  they made the Image of a Lion or Cat. It rendereth a man temperate, appeaseth wrath and giveth favour.

Under the Tail of Ursa Major  they made the Image of a pensive man, of a bull, or of a calf. It availeth against incantations and maketh him who carried it secure in his travels.

Under the wings of Corvus  they made the Image of a Raven or Snake or of a black man clothed. This maketh a man bold, courageous, a back biter, causeth naughty dreams, also it giveth the power of driving away evil spirits and of gathering them together.

Under the Spike  (Spica ) they made the Image of a bird, or of a man beladen with merchandise. It conferreth riches and maketh one overcome contentions, it taketh away scarcity and mischief.

Under Alchameth  they made the Image of a horse or wolf, or the figure of a man dancing. It is good against fevers, it astringeth and retaineth the blood.

Under Elphrya or Elpheia  they made the Image of a Hen, or of a man crowned and advanced. It bestoweth the good will and love of men and giveth chastity.

Under the Heart of Scorpio  they made the Image of a man armed, and with a coat of mail, or the figure of a scorpion. It giveth understanding and memory, it maketh a good colour, and aideth against evil spirits, and driveth them away and bindeth them.

Under the Vulture  they made the Image of a vulture or hen, or of a traveller. It maketh a man magnanimous and proud, it giveth power over Devils and beasts.

Under the Tail of Capricorn  they made the Image of a heart or goat, or of an angry man. It bestoweth prosperity and increaseth wrath.

Theophrastus Paracelsus wrote a Book called Archidoxes, wherein he gives the true direction how to make certain Images on certain metals and otherwise how the metal must be spermatic and callow before it can receive the Astral Agent. These figures are not made according to the similitude of Celestial figures, but according to the similitude of that which the mind of the worker desires, being guided by an admirable Genius. These figures answer several uses, to procure love, to cure several distempers, etc. Albertus Magnus in his Speculo, as also Weckerus, a German, have written a large volume of the use and virtues of these Images or Sigils.

They use the Images being made diversely according to the virtues thereof. Sometimes they hang them in a chimney over the smoke, or upon a tree that they be moved by the wind, sometimes with the head upwards and sometimes downwards, sometimes they put them into hot water, or into the fire. For they say, as the workers of the Images do affect the Images itself, so doth it bring the like passions upon those to whom it was ascribed, as the minds of the Operator hath dictated it. As Nectanabus the Magician made Images of wax representing ships after that manner and art, that when he drowned those images in water that the ships of the Enemies were in like manner drowned in the Sea and hazarded.

The Alphabet of Angels or the Writing and Language of Heaven

God and Spirits can speak any language, yet many doubt whether Angels or Genii, since they be pure spirits, use any vocal speech or tongue amongst themselves.

The Platonists say that Socrates perceived his Genius by sense indeed; but not of this body but by the sense of the ethereal body concealed in this. After which manner Averroes believes the Angels were wont to be heard and seen by the prophets. That instrument, whatsoever, the virtue be, by which one spirit makes known to another spirit what things are in his mind, is called by the Apostle St. Paul, the tongue of Angels. Yet oftentimes they send forth an audible voice, as they that cried at the Ascension of Our Lord—"Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye here gazing into the heaven?" And in the old Law they speak to divers of the fathers with sensible voice; but this never but when they assumed bodies.

Of Numbers, Their Power and Virtue

Boethius saith that all things from the beginning were formed from reason's numbers.

The Elements, change of times, motion of the stars and the heavens, and the state of all things, subsist by the joining together of Numbers. Time consists of number as also motion and action, and all things that are subject to time and motion. Concord in music and voices, have their power and proportion from Numbers and by lines and points constitute Characters and figures, and these are proper to Magical operations.

Themistrus and Averroes the Babylonian, with Plato do so extol Numbers, that they thought that no man could act the philosopher without them, but they meant Rational or Formal Number, not of the material, sensible or vocal, but they intended the proportion that resulted from that Number, which they call a Natural Number and a Formal and Rational, from which many holy things do flow from, as well in natural things as in divine and heavenly. By it we have an access to natural prophecy. A wonderful efficacious virtue lies hid in Numbers as well to good as evil.

Large volumes have been writ by Hebrew Doctors as Hieronymus, Augustine, Origen, Ambrose, Nazianzene, Athanasius, Basilus, Hillarius, Rabanus, Bede, and more others confirm this doctrine of the virtue of Numbers. And now in nature how great virtues Numbers possess is evident in the herb Cinquefoil.

The Number Seven works wonderful things—the seventh son to heal distempers. Whosoever shall know how to make vocal and natural numbers join with divine numbers and adequate their Constancy, may perform and know how to act wonderful things by these numbers.

The Pythagoreans foretold many events by the Numbers that attended Names, wherein lay hid a great mystery. St John in the Apocalypse speaks of the number of the Name which is the Number of a man, Lateinos 666.

Numbers operate much on the Soul, the figures on the bodies, but the harmony thereof on every animal.

Of Unity or the Number One

The powers and virtues of Numbers whereof Enoch's Tables are founded to be reckoned from Unity—Unitas omnem Numerum simplicissime penetriat, omniumque numerorum communis mensura, fons et origo.

There is one God, one world, one Sun of that world, one Phoenix in the world. One King among bees, one Captain in flocks. Among the members of the body, one is chief by which the rest is governed, whether it be the head or the heart. In the Elementary world, the Stone of the Philosophers which is the only subject and Instrument of all natural virtues and beyond the natural. In the Infernal world, Lucifer, the only prince of the rebellion of the Angels and darkness.

Of Duality or the Number Two

In the Archetype $\aleph$: $\aleph$ Nomina Dei duarum literarum.

In the Intellectual world, two substances Intelligible— the Angel, the Soul.

In the Heavenly world, two great Luminaries— the Sun, the Moon.

In the Elementary world, two Elements producing a living Soul— i.e. the earth, the Water.

In the Lesser World, two principal seats of the Soul— the Heart, the Brain.

In the Infernal world, two Captains of Demons— Behemoth, Leviathan...

Two things which Christ threatened to the damned— Weeping, Gnashing of Teeth.

Of the Triad or Number Three

The first number uncompounded and uneven, a holy Number perfect, most potent, for there are three persons in God, there are three Theological Virtues in religion — Faith, Hope and Charity.

The Name of God in 3 letters $\aleph$ Sadai.

The whole measure of time in a Ternary— past, present and to come.

All magnitude contained in three things— a line, superficies, and a body.

Of the Number Five

This number hath a great force in Expiations. For in holy things it drives away bad Demons, in natural things it expells poisons. Also it is called a Number of felicity and grace, and is the seal of the spirit of grace, the number of Christ's wounds on the Cross.

In the Intellectual world there are five Intelligible substances—

1. The Spirits of the first Hierarchy called Gods, or the Sons of God,
2. The Spirits of the second Hierarchy called Intelligences,
3. The Spirits of the third Hierarchy called Angels which are sent,
4. The Souls of heavenly bodies,
5. Heroes or Blessed Souls.

In the Celestial world, five wandering stars, Lords of the Terms— Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Venus, Mercury.

In the Elemental world— Water, Air, Fire, Earth, a mixture of the Elements.

In the Lesser world, the five senses— Tasting, Hearing, Seeing, Touching, Smelling.

In the Infernal World, the five corporeal torments— Bitterness mortifying, horrible haulings, terrible darkness, burning that cannot be quenched, stink that penetrateth.

Of the Number Six

In the whole context of Numbers, six is the most perfect Number in Nature. It is so perfect, that by the collection of its parts, the same results; for if the parts, to with, the middle, the third and the sixth, which are three, two and one, are gathered together, they do perfectly fill up the body of six, which perfection other numbers want. The sixth day the world was made, and the heavens and Earth and the adornments thereof.

It is called the number of a man, because on the sixth day Man was created. In the Law it was ordained, six days to work, six days to gather Manna, six years to sow the Earth, a Hebrew servant to serve six years his master, six days the glory of God inclined upon Mount Sinai covering it with a cloud. A Cherub had six wings. There were six circles in the firmament—the Arctic, the Antarctic, two Tropics, the Aequinoctial and Ecliptic; six planets that err—Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Venus, Mercurius, Luna—running through the latitude of the Zodiac, running on this and the other side of the Ecliptic. A solid quadrate figure hath six superficies. There are six tones of all Harmony, viz., 5 tones and two semitones which make up one tone, which is a sixth.

In the Elementary world, there are six substantific qualities of the Elements— Rest, Thinness, Sharpness, Bluntness, Density, Motion.

In the lesser world, six degrees of Man— Intellectus, Memoria, Sensus, Motus, Vita, Essentia.

In the Infernal world, six Demons, the authors of all calamities— Acteus, Megalesius, Ormenius, Lycus, Nicon, Mimo.

Of the Number Seven

The Number Seven is of a divers and manifold power. It consists of one and six, or of two and five, or of three and four, and it hath an unity as a Copula or joining together a double trinity. It is a Number full of all Majesty. The Pythagoreans call it the vehicle of human life, for this Number comprehends soul and body, for the body consists of the four Elements and is affected with four qualities; the ternary also belongs to the Soul, by reason of his triple force, that is, his rational, irascible and corruptible. Therefore, the septenary Number, which consists of three and four joins the soul to the body, and the force of this number seven pertains to the geniture of man. Plato in his Timaeus, hath writ largely concerning this Number seven, as to its power and wonderful operation in the generation, geniture of man and vicissitudes every seventh year. Pythagoras called Seven a Number of virginity, because it is the first which is neither generated nor doth generate, neither can it be divided into two equal parts, so as it may be produced of any repeated number, neither of itself brings forth any number of a duplicate, which may be brought within the limits of ten, which is the first limit of numbers, and therefore the seventh Number was sacred to Pallas. In religion this number is venerated, it is called the Number of an oath among the Hebrews, so Abraham when he made a League with Abimelech he appointed seven ewe lambs in testimony. And it is called the Number of blessedness and rest. The seventh day, the Creator rested from his works, therefore this day with Moses is called the Sabbath, that is a day of rest. Through the Old and New Testaments we find many times Seven recorded, and many mysteries in the Apocalypse comprehending the number Seven. The Number Seven hath many powers as well in natural things as in holy thing and ceremonies—seven days, seven planets, seven pleiades, seven ages of the world, seven changes of man, seven liberal arts as many mechanical, seven colours, seven metals.

In the Infernal world, seven habitations of the damned, which Rabbi Joseph Castiliensis describes in Hocto nucis—

ידעשהום	Umbra Mortis	אכריו	Perditio
		שאויל	Fovea

Of the Number Eight

The Pythagoreans call it a Number of Justice and plenitude, because first of all it is divided into numbers alike even, that is to say into four, and that division is made twice two, and for the equality of its division it assumes the name of Justice. And for its other name of plenitude, because it makes a solid body. Hence, Orpheus swearing by eight Deities to implore divine Justice, viz., fire, water, earth, heaven, Moon, Sun, Phanes, and the night.

There are also only eight visible spheres of the heavens, and the propriety of corporeal nature is signified to us by him which Orpheus comprehended in his Octonary of maritime hymns. And this number is also called a number of league and Circumcision which by the Jews was instituted to be done on the eighth day.

This number pertains to Eternity, and the end of the worlds, because it follows the seventh number, which is the symbol of time. Hence this number is of beautitude, for so many degrees of blessedness, Christ taught in Matthew. It is also called a number of safety and conservation, for so many souls were saved in Noah from the deluge of waters.

This number was esteemed holy by Dionysius, who came into the world in the eighth month, unto the everlasting memory of him the Island Naxos was dedicated to him, and obtained this prerogative that only the women of Naxia brought forth healthful children in the eighth month, when almost all those born so in other nations died and their mothers also lay under manifest danger.

In the Elemental World, eight particular qualities— the dryness of the earth, the coldness of the water, the humidity of the air, the heat of the fire, the heat of the air, the humidity of the water, the dryness of the fire, the coldness of the earth.

In the Lesser world, eight sorts of blessed men— the peaceable, those that hunger and thirst after righteousness, the meek, persecuted for righteousness, pure in heart, merciful, poor in spirit, mourning.

In the Infernal world, eight rewards of the damned— a Prison, Death, Judgment, Anger of God, Indignation, Tribulation, Anguish, (?).

Of the Number Nine

This number was sacred to the Muses; there are nine Moveable Spheres, and nine Muses, everyone relating to the spheres—Calliope is accommodated to the primum mobile, Urania to the starry heaven, Polyhymnia to Saturn, Terpsichore to Jupiter, Clio to Mars, Melpomene to the Sun, Erato to Venus, Euterpe to Mercury, Thalia to the Moon.

There are Nine Orders of Blessed Angels, that is to say—Seraphim, Cherubim, Thrones, Dominations, Virtues, Powers, Principalities, Archangels, Angels, which Ezechiel figures out by nine Stones, which are these— the Sapphire, Smarag, Carbuncle, Beryl, Onyx, Chrysolite, Jasper, Topaz, Sardius.

This Number is of a sacramental great and occult quality, at the ninth hour Jesus expired, and in nine days the Ancients buried their dead, and in so many years Minea in a den received the Laws from Jove, from hence this number was chiefly observed by Homer, and Astrologers of old had the same esteem for Novenary years as well as Septenary, which was equally reckoned Climacterical, wherein they observed notable mutations. But sometimes this Number hath a note of imperfection and defect, because it reaches not to the perfection of a Denary, but is less than an unity, as in the Gospel, of the 10 lepers, but where are the nine. Neither doth it want a mystery, the longitude of Og, King of Basan, who was nine cubits long, but he was a type of the devil.

Of the Decade or Ten

Ten, this every number is called, whether an Universal or a number complete, denoting the full course of life, for from this number beyond it we cannot number except by replication, and it implies all numbers either within itself, or by itself it resolves them by multiplication, whereof it is esteemed of a manifold religion and power, and fitted for the purging of our hearts. Hence the Ancients abstained from certain things ten days using denary ceremonies for expiation; thence it was a custom with the Egyptians that whosoever was initiated in the sacred rites of Isis, were wont to fast ten days, which Apuleius testified of himself.

This Number as a Unity is also circular, because being heaped together it returns into an Unity from whence it had beginning, for it is the end and complement of all Numbers and the beginning of Decades. As a denary flows back into Unity from whence it proceeded, so the water runs to the sea from whence it had its original.

In the Intelligible world, the ten orders of blessed spirits according to the Hebrews— Haiioth Hakados, Ophani, Aralim, Hasmalim, Seraphim, Malachim, Elohim, Ben Elohim, Cherubim, Issim.

In the Infernal world, the ten Orders of the Damned— Pseudothei, Spiritus medarii, Vasa Iniquitatis, Ultiores Scelerna, Praestigiatore, Aeriae potestates, Furiae seminatrices malorum, Criminatores sive exploratores, Tentatores sive Justitiatores, Anima provae et Damnata.

Of the Number Eleven

The Eleventh Number as it exceeds the tenth, which is the number of the Law and Commandments. Therefore it is called the number of sinners and penitents, hence this number hath no communion with divine things, nor heavenly, nor ladder tending to heaven, nor any merit, but sometimes perchance receives a grateful favour from God, as he who at the eleventh hour was called into God's vineyard, he received the reward of them who bore the burden and heat of the day.

Of the Number Twelve

The Twelfth Number is divine, wherein heavenly things are measured. Twelve signs in the Zodiac, wherein twelve chief Angels preside bearing names of the great God. In twelve years Jupiter performs his course around the heavens, and the Moon daily runs through twelve degrees.

In the Intelligible world, the twelve Orders of blessed Spirits—Seraphim, Cherubim, Throni, Dominations, Potestates, Virtues, Principalities, Archangels, Angels, Innocents, Martyrs, Confessors.

The twelve Angels president over the signs— Malachael, Asmodel, Ambriel, Muriel, Nerchiel, Hamaliel, Zwael, Barbiel, Adachiel, Hanael, Gabriel, Barchiel.

The twelve tribes — the twelve Prophets — the twelve Apostles — in the Celestial world, the twelve signs of the Zodiac — the twelve months — twelve plants in the Elemental world — twelve stones in Aaron's Breastplate — twelve principal members of man, head, neck, arms, etc., in the lesser world.

In the Infernal world, twelve degrees of Damned Spirits and Devils— Pseudothei, Spiritus medarii, Vasa Iniquitatis, Ultiores Scelerum, Praestigiatores, Aeriae potestates, Furiae seminatrices malorum, Criminatores seu exploratores, Tentatores seu Justitiatore, Malefici, Apostatae, Infideles.

Of Other Numbers, their Power and Virtue

13 The Thirteenth day after Christ's birth, a star guided the Magi to Christ.

14 The Fourteenth is a type of (relating to Christ, who was offered the fourteenth day of the first month — the going out of Egypt.

15 The Fifteenth, a spiritual number of Ascensions, and therefore a song of degrees on fifteen Psalms was made. Fifteen years was added to Ezechia's reign.

16 The Sixteenth is a Number of an equilateral square body, called by Pythagoras a Number of felicity. For it comprehends all the prophets of the Old Testament as well as all the Apostles and Evangelists of the New Testament.

18 These Numbers by Divines are reckoned unfortunate.

20 Israel served Eglon King of Moab 18 years, Jacob served, Joseph was sold.

22 The Number 22 signifies the fulness of wisdom, so many are the Hebrew letters, and so many books the Old Testament contains.

28 The Number 28 attributed to the Moon who completes her course through the Zodiac in twenty eight days.

30 The Number 30 is full of Mysteries, the price put on our Saviour, at 30 years he was baptised. John the Baptist preached at 30. Ezechiel prophesied at 30.

32 A number of Wisdom as the Hebrew Doctors assert, for so many paths of wisdom are described of Abraham. The Pythagoreans style this number of Justice which may be divided into equal parts even to Unity.

40 The Ancients worship this Number with great veneration, from whence they celebrated the Feast of Tesseracoston. This number is full of mysteries, a number for Expiation and penitence in religion. 40 days the Deluge. 40 years the Children of Israel lived in the Desert. 40 days before the Subversion of Nineveh. 40 days Moses, Elias, and Christ fasted. 40 weeks Christ was borne in the womb of the Virgin. 40 days from the Nativity, Christ was in Bethlehem before he was offered in the Temple. 40 months he preached publicly. 40 hours he lay in the sepulchre. The 40th day after his resurrection he ascended into heaven.

50 The 50th number is significative for remission of sins, and servitude and liberty. According to the law, debts were remitted in the 50th year, and every one was returned into their own possession—a year of Jubilee. On the 50th day of the Israelites going out of Egypt the law was given. The 50 day after the resurrection, the Holy Ghost descended upon the Apostles in Mount Zion. From hence it is called a number of grace, and attributed to the Holy Ghost.

60 A number sacred to the Egyptians and proper to the Crocodile, who for 60 days brings forth eggs, and in so many days nourishes them, is said to live 40 years, and hath 40 teeth, and lastly every year for 40 days sequesters himself from meat.

70 . This number contains great Mysteries. 70 years the face of the sacrifice did live lying hid under water during the Babylonian captivity. So many years Jeremiah foretold the destruction of the Temple. So many years lasted the Captivity of Babylon. So many years completed the desolation of Jerusalem. Cum multis aliis.

72 This many languages are recorded. So many Elders of the Synagogue. So many Interpreters of the Bible. So many Disciples of Christ. It hath great communion with the Number Twelve. Hence in Celestials every sign divided into 6 parts, there result 72 Quinaries, over which are president so many Angels, and so many Names of God bear influence, and every quinary is set over one Idiom with so great efficacy, that thence Astrologers and Physiognomers can know of what idiom or planet any one was born under. So many patent arteries in the human body answer them, of which in every finger of hand and foot are reckoned three, which with the principal twelve above in the 12 accounted, do constitute 72.

100 Centenary, in which a sheep found is collocated who also passes from the left to the right, is found sacred, as also from ten generated designs a complete perfection.

1000 But the complement of all numbers is the Millenary, which is the Cube of ten, signifying consummate and absolute perfection.

There are two numbers celebrated very much by Plato and Aristotle in his Politics, which have proved ominous to Kingdoms and portended great mutations in cities. These numbers are the Square of 12 and his Cube, to wit, the 44th above a hundred, and 728th above a thousand which number is fatal.

Of the Numbers that the Ancients Consecrated to Their Gods and Ascribed to the Elements and Planets

The Pythagoreans dedicated certain Numbers sacred to the Elements and heavenly bodies. To the Air and Octonary, to the Fire a Tetragon, to the Earth a Senary, to the Water a Duodenary number they assigned. Moreover, they ascribed unity to the Sun, because he is the only King of the stars, wherein God placed his Tabernacle. They ascribed the same to Jupiter, who was the father and head of the Gods, as unity is the beginning and parent of Numbers.

Duality is given to the Moon, which is the second luminary, and figures out the Soul of the World, and is called Juno, because between her and unity there is the first conjunction and alike concord. It is also given to Saturn and Mars, the two Infortunes with Astrologers.

The Number Three agrees with Jupiter, the Sun and Venus, the three fortunes, it is also deputed to Vesta, Hecate and Diana. This triad is therefore dedicated to this virgin, which they say is powerful both in heaven and hell.

Four or the Quaternary Number belongs to the Sun who by that number constitutes the cardinal points of heaven and the seasons or times of the year, it is also deputed to Cillenius which was the only quadrate God esteemed.

Five or a Quinary is assigned to Mercury from one parity and one imparity, as it is manifest from either sex, masculine or feminine. Also it is attributed to the heavenly world, which above the four elements is the fifth under another form.

A Senary pertains to Venus and Jupiter, which is made up of a triad led by a dyad, which number Pythagoras is accommodated to generation and marriage.

Septenary, a number of rest, belongs to Saturn. The same number concerns the Moon's motion and light. It is assigned to Minerva who hath no generation, also to Pallas that virago, because it consists of numbers as well masculine as feminine. Plutarch gives this number to Apollo.

The Eighth number belongs to Jupiter, sacred to Justice and it is dedicated to Vulcan. It is attributed to Cybele, the Mother of the Gods, to whom every Cube is given. Plutarch assigned that number to Bacchus or Dionysius, who was born in the eighth month; because others born in the eighth month died, they constituted that number to Saturn and the Parcae.

The number Nine belongs to the Moon, the last receptacle of all celestial influences and virtues, no less than if it were dedicated to the nine muses, as also to Mars from whom is the end of all things.

The tenth number is circular because Monas or Unity belongs to the Sun. Also it is assigned to Juno. In like manner the Twelfth number, because the Sun goes through the 12 signs in 12 months. This number is given to the world, to the heaven, and to the Sun. But the eleventh number because it is semicircular is attributed to the Moon and deputed also to Neptune.

Of the Little Tables of the Planets and what Divine Names, Intelligences and Demons Belong to these Tables

The Magi of old framed certain Tables distributed to the seven planets. They called them sacred containing great virtues of heavenly things because they represent the divine reason of heavenly numbers, by the Ideas of a divine soul, by a reason impressed on the Soul of the World in heavenly things, and the sweet harmony of those heavenly things, according to the proportion of the effigies, signifying together the Intelligences more than mundane, which cannot otherwise be expressed than by the notes of numbers and characters. For material numbers and figures can do nothing in the mysteries of hidden things unless represented by numbers and formal figures as they are governed and informed by the Intelligences and Divine numerations, which unite the extremes of matter and spirit, to the will of the soul elevated by a great affection of the operator in celestial virtue, receiving power from God, by the Soul of the Universe, and the observations of celestial constellations, unto a matter applied to a form convenient, by disposed mediums in the skill and science magical.

Saturn's Table consists of a quadrate ternary containing nine particular numbers. In every line three numbers which make 15. To this Table are prefixed Names filling up these numbers, with an Intelligence for good, and a Demon for evil. From the same Numbers are found the seal and character of Saturn and his spirits.

This Table engraved on a plate of Lead and worn about you, Saturn being fortunate, helps childbirth, makes a man safe and powerful in his petitions to great persons, but if Saturn be unfortunate, it casts a man down from honours and dignities, increases strife and discord.

The Table of the Sun consists of a Senary quadrate. It contains numbers 36; whereof 6 in every side and diameter produce 111, and the sum of all is 666. The Divine names preside with an Intelligence to good and a Demon for mischief, and from thence are alluded the Characters of the Sun and his spirits.

This Table graved on a golden Lamen, the Sun being fortunate, makes the bearer glorious, lovely, beloved, grateful, powerful in all works and makes a man a companion for Kings and Princes, elevating a man to the top of fortune's wheel to command what he will. But the Sun unfortunate makes him a tyrant, proud and ambitious and to make an ill end.

The Table of Venus consists of a Septenary in numbers 49, whereof 7 in every side and Diameter constitute 175, and the sum of them all amount to 1225. And they bear the names of God with an Intelligence to good and a Demon to evil, and from thence the Character of Venus and her Spirits is drawn.

This Table engraved on a Lamen of Silver, Venus being Fortunate, reconciles and makes concord, takes away contentions, gives the love of women. Further it helps conception, takes away barrenness, makes powerful to generation, dissolves witchcraft, generates peace between man and wife and all other creatures, makes flocks of cattle fruitful, and being put in a dovecot, multiplies pigeons. A sovereign remedy against all griefs that proceed from melancholy, creates joy and makes fortunate travellers that wear it. But if it be formed in brass, Venus unfortunate, then understand the contrary.

The Table of Mercury results from an Octonary containing numbers 64, whereof 8 in every side and by either diameter do make 260, and the sum of all is 2080. And to it is affixed the Divine names with Intelligence to good and a Demon to mischief and from thence is brought the Character of Mercury and his spirits.

And if it shall be engraven, Mercury being fortunate, in Silver, Tin or Brass, or written in Virgin parchment it will make him that wears it fortunate to obtain whatsoever he desires, it confers gain and expells want, it gives a memory and understanding, and divination and knowledge of occult things by dreams. And if Mercury prove unfortunate then judge the contrary.

The Table of the Moon consists of a Novenary in itself multiplied in itself, having numbers 81; in every side and diameter 9, producing 369, and the sum of all is 3321 and there preside over it the Divine names with Intelligences to good and a Demon to evil. And there is drawn out from it Characters of the Moon and of his spirits.

This Table engraven in silver, the Moon fortunate, makes the bearer thereof, lovely, grateful, pleasant, cheerful, honoured, taking away all malice and ill will; makes one secure in traveling and getting riches, sound in body. It expells enemies and other hurtful things from any place that you desire. And if this table be made on a Lamen of Lead, wheresoever you shall bury it, that place shall be unfortunate, and the inhabitants therein, as also ships, fountains, rivers, mills. It will make unfortunate every man against whom it shall be rightly made, making him a profligate or vagabond in his country and mansion place where it shall lie buried.

Of the Sun and Moon Magically Understood and Explained

The Platonists esteemed the Sun to be the Soul of the World, the Lord of all Elemental virtues, and the Moon by the virtue of the Sun is the Lady of Generation, of increase and decrease. The Sun and Moon are the lively eyes of Heaven infusing life to all things. The Sun plentifully gives light from itself to all things, not only in the heaven and air, but also in the earth and profound Abyss. Whatsoever good we have proceeds from the Sun, the Sun being the fountain of heavenly light, the heart of heaven and placed in the middle of the planets, the most exact Image of God whose Essence is of the nature of the Father, Splendour the Son, Heat the Holy Ghost. The Sun is the conspicuous Son of God, the Image of Divine Intelligence. So many motions there are in the mind, as every day the Sun may bring, who is the prince and the moderator of the planets.

But the Moon, being nearest the Earth of all the planets, is the receptacle of all Coelestial Influxes, joining issue monthly with the Sun and the rest of the planets and stars, the supposed wife of all the stars, bringing the rays and influences of all the planets and stars to this lower world.

The motion of the Moon is chiefly to be observed before all other planets, she is the parent of all conceptions. Consider her complexion, motion, site and aspects which differ from the planets and the other stars, and although she may get strength from all the stars, chiefly from the Sun so often as she is joined to him, she is filled with a lively virtue and as she beholds them alters complexion, for in the first quarter she is hot and moist, in the second hot and dry, in the third cold and dry, in the fourth cold and moist.

From the Moon in heavenly matters begins the series of things which Plato called the Golden Chain. Observe the Rule that if you will take the virtue of any star, you must take a stone and herb of the nature of that star which from the Moon happily beholds that star.

Of the Soul of the World, Proved

That the Soul of the World and Heavenly Souls are rational and do partake of a divine mind.

The Soul of the World is defined to be vita quodam unica, a certain only life, filling all things, pouring forth all things from every part, gathering together and connecting all things, that it may become one machine of the whole world; and that it may be as one Monochord, sounding, again from the three kinds of Creatures only by one breath and one life, Intellectual, Celestial and Incorruptible.

That human Imprecations do naturally impress their strength upon outward things. And that how the human mind ascends into the intelligible world by every degree of dependencies and is made like to the spirits and more sublime Intelligences.

Of Intelligences and Daemons Three Sorts of Them, Their Divers Names And of Infernal and Subterranean Daemons

An Intelligence is a substance intelligible, free from all gross putrefying mass of body, Immortal, insensible, influencing all things. And there is the same nature of all Intelligences, spirits and Daemons. But those Daemons are not those which we call Devils, but spirits so called from the propriety of the word, as knowing, intelligent and wise. But of those Daemons there are three kinds according to the tradition of the Magi, whereof they call the first Supercoelestial, and minds in a manner disjoined from the body, and in a manner intellectual spheres, worshipping one God as their most firm established unity or Centre, whereof they call them Gods, by a certain participation of divinity, because always they are full with God, and drunk with Divine Nectar. They are only conversant about one God, neither are they set over the bodies of the world, nor adapted to the ministration of Inferior things, but influence the light they have from God to inferior Orders.

Next to these in a second Order follow the Heavenly Intelligences which they call Mundane Daemons, to wit accommodated to the spheres beyond the divine worship of the world, these Intelligences are president of the stars in every heaven. Hence they distribute them into so many orders as there are heavens in the world and stars in the heavens, and they called others Saturnians, who were set over the heaven of Saturn, and Saturn himself: others were Jovians who presided or were set over the heaven of Jupiter or Jupiter himself. In like manner, they gave names to other Daemons by the name and virtue of other stars: and because the ancient Astrologers did assert 55 motions, hence to these they found out as many Intelligences or Daemons. And they placed in the starry heaven, Daemons who they set over the Signs and Triplicities, Decans and Quinaries, degrees and stars. They placed twelve chief Daemons, who were set over the Twelve Signs of the Zodiac, and 36 who were set over so many Decans or faces of the Signs, every Sign containing three faces, and 72 besides were set over so many Quinaries of heaven, so many Linguas and Nations of heaven. And 4 they set over the Triplicities and Elements: and 7 Governors of the whole world according to the seven planets, and they gave names to all these and Seals, which they call Characters, and used them in Invocations and Incantations and their Sculptures, describing them in Instruments of their own operations, in Images, Lamens, glasses, rings, paper and the like made of wax, that when they made an operation to the Sun, they Invoked by the names of the Sun, and by the names of the Solar Daemons, and so of the rest.

Thirdly, they put Daemons as Ministers to dispose of things Earthly in inferior things, which Origen calls certain invisible virtues which none can behold, which direct our journeys and business. They are oft set over battles, and give wishes for success to our friends and secret relief, to reconcile in prosperity and inflict in adversary, as you please.

In like manner they distribute them into more orders these distinctions of Daemons according to the Elements are fiery, watery, aerial, and earthly, which four spheres of Daemons are compelled according to the strength of the four coelestial souls. For aerial Daemons follow the reason and favour the rational power, separating it after a sort from sensual and vegetable. Therefore, they serve the active life, as the fiery serve the contemplative life. But the watery Daemons follow the Imagination and sense, they serve the voluptuous life. Earthy Daemons follow nature, they favour vegetal nature. Furthermore they distinguish this kind of Daemon into Saturnians and Jovials according to the names of the stars and of the heavens. Besides, some Daemons are Oriental, others Occidental, others Meridional, others Septentrional. Lastly, no part of the world is destitute without the assistance of these Daemons: not because they are there only, but because they most reign there: for they are everywhere, although some most strongly operate, and have influence elsewhere. Neither are these things so to be understood as if they were subject to the influxes of the stars, but that they may answer to the supra-mundane heaven, from which chiefly all things are directed and to which all things ought to be Conformable, hence as these Demons are adapted to divers places and seasons, not that they are restrained to time or place, but because the order of wisdom hath so decreed it; therefore they more favour and defend those bodies, places, times, stars; so they called these Daemons some diurnal, some nocturnal, some meridian. In like manner, they call some Daemons of the woods, others mountains, others of the valleys, others domestic. Hence the Sylvens, Satyrs, Nymphs, Dryads, Genii, etc., Semi-Gods or Goddesses. Of these, some are so near and familiar to men, that they are affected with human troubles. And in Denmark and Norway there are Daemons of a divers kind that are subject to the service of men, some of them are corporeal and mortal, whose bodies being generated perish, but they are of long life. This is the opinion of the Egyptians, of the Platonists, Proclus, Plutarch, Demetrius and Aemylius.

There are Daemons of this third sort as many Legions as there are stars in heaven. Athanasius saith that the numbers of good Daemons are thought to be 99 according to the Parable of the 100 sheep. Later Divines say that the number of good Angels transcends all human capacity, to which on the other side there are innumerable unclean spirits in this lower world as there are clean spirits in the upper world: under these they place a subterranean dark kind of Daemon, which the Platonics call deserting angels, the revengers of Impiety, bad daemons, wicked spirits, there are legions of them, and distinguished according to the names of the stars and Elements and parts of the world, some are Kings, Princes and Presidents, as Clavicula Salomonis doth inform. Porphyrius saith these daemons inhabit this Earth and there is no sort of mischief which they dare not perpetrate and delight to act all kinds of villainy.

Of the 28 Mansions of the Moon and of Their Strength and Virtue in Mundane Affairs

In the space of 28 days the Moon runs through the Zodiac and according to Alpharus, these mansions partake of divers properties and names from divers stars in the Eighth Sphere, whose powers and virtues they partake of. It is Rabbi Abraham's opinion that every one of these Mansions contains 12 degrees, 51 minutes and 26 seconds almost, whose names as well as their beginnings in the Eighth Sphere are these:

The First Mansion is called Alnath, that is the horns of Aries, the beginning thereof is from the head of Aries of the Eighth Sphere. It makes journeys prosperous but it creates discord. A good time to give physic, chiefly laxatives.

The Second Mansion is called Allothaim or Albocchia, that is the body of Aries, the beginning thereof is from the 12th degree of the same sign, 51 minutes, 22 seconds complete. This Mansion is good to find out treasure hid, to the keeping of captives, to go voyages, to sow or plant, but contrary to purge or vomit.

The Third is called Achaomazone, a rainy Mansion, or Pleiades. The beginning is from 25 degrees complete of Aries, minutes 42, 51 seconds. Good for navigation, hunting and the works of Alchemy.

The Fourth Mansion is called Aldebaran, that is the eye or head of Taurus, the beginning thereof is from the 8th degree thereof, minutes 34, seconds 17. This Mansion destroys and hinders buildings, fountains, wells, gold mines, and generates discord.

The Fifth Mansion is called Alchataya or Albachaya the beginning thereof is from the 21st degree of Taurus, 25 minutes, 43 seconds. It causeth a safe return from a long journey or voyage; good for instruction of scholars, confirms buildings, gives health and favour among persons of quality.

The Sixth Mansion is called Alhanna or Alchaia, that is a small star of great light, his beginning after the fourth degree of Gemini, 17 minutes and 9 seconds. It is good for hunting and besieging cities, a revenge to princes; destroys harvests and fruits and hinders the operation of physic.

The Seventh is called Aldimiach or Alarzach, that is to say, the arm of Gemini, and it begins from the 17th degree of Gemini, 8 minutes, 34 seconds and lasteth to the end of that sign. It brings gain and friendship, it is profitable for lovers, it destroys Magisteries, and this fourth part of the heavens is complete in these seven Mansions. And in like order and number of degrees, minutes and seconds, the remaining Mansions in the several quarters have their several beginnings that in the first sign of that quarter, three Mansions may have beginning in the other two signs, two Mansions in either.

And, therefore, the seven following mansions begin from the head of Cancer, whose names are Alnaza, or Anatrachia, that is, cloudy, to wit, in the Eighth Mansion. It causeth love and friendship, and the society of travellers, afflicts captives, holding them in prison.

The Ninth Mansion is called Archaam or Alchaph, that is, the eye of the Lion. It destroys harvests and travellers and makes discord amongst men.

The Tenth is called Algelioche or Algebh, that is, the neck or the forehead of Leo. It confirms buildings, gives love, favour and help against enemies.

The Eleventh Mansion is called Azobra or Ardaf, that is, the hair of the Lion. It is good for travellers and gain in merchandise and for redemption of captives.

The Twelfth Mansion is called Alzarpha or Azarpha, that is, the tail of the Lion. It gives prosperity to harvests and plantations but hinders navigators; but it is good for servants and captives and bettering their companions.

The Thirteenth Mansion is called Alhayre, that is, the wings of Virgo. It produceth friendship, gain, journeys, harvests, and deliverance of captives.

The Fourteenth is called Achuroth or Arimet, of others Azimeth or Alhumech, that is, Spica Virginis or Spica Volans. It avails to the love of married persons, to heal the sick, it profits navigators, but hinders such as travel by land. And in these Mansions is the second quarter of heaven complete. The other 7 Mansions follow, of which the first begins in the head of Libra.

The Fifteenth Mansion and the name thereof Agrapha or Algarpha, that is, covered or covered flying. It avails for extracting treasures, for digging wells. It causeth discord, divorce, and the destruction of houses and enemies, and hinders travellers.

The Sixteenth Mansion is called Azubene or Ahubene, that is, the horns of Scorpio. It hinders journeys and marriage, harvests and merchandise. It avails to the deliverance of captives.

The Seventeenth is called Alchil, that is, the Crown of Scorpio. It makes better cross fortune, makes love durable, confirms buildings and prospers navigators.

The Eighteenth is called Alchas or Altob, that is, the heart of Scorpio. It causeth discord, sedition and conjuration, against princes and powers, and to the revenge of enemies: but it delivers captives and makes good for buildings.

The Nineteenth Mansion is called Ablatha or Achala, of others, Hycula or Axala, that is, the tail of Scorpio. It is good to besiege cities and to take towns and to drive men away from those places, and to the destruction of navigators and perdition of captives.

The Twentieth Mansion is called Abnahaya, that is to say, a beam. It is good to tame wild beasts, to keep men in prisons, destroys the wealth of confederates, compels a man to come to any place.

The One and Twentieth is called Abeda or Albeldach, which is a desert. It makes for harvests, gain to buildings and travellers, and for making divorce. And in this Mansion the third quarter of heaven is completed. There remains the last seven Mansions completing the last quarter of heaven, whereof the first which is in order.

The Two and Twentieth beginning from the head of Capricorn, is called Savahaca or Zodeboluch or Zandeldona, that is a shepherd. It promotes the flight of servants and captives and to the healing of the sick.

The Twenty Third Mansion is called Sabadola or Zobrach, that is devouring, makes for divorce, for the deliverance of captives, and the healing of the sick.

The Twenty Fourth Mansion is called Sadabath or Chaderoad, which is, the star of fortune, and avails for the good agreement of the married, for the victory of soldiers. It hurts the undertaking of Magisteries and hinders that they shall not be accomplished.

The Twenty Fifth Mansion is called Sadalabra or Sadalachia, that is, a Pavilion or Tent. It makes good for betraying or revenge, destroys enemies, confirms prisons and buildings, makes speedy messengers, makes for witchcraft, copulation and to the tying up for any member of a man that it shall not perform its office.

The Twenty Sixth mansion is called Alpharg or Phtagal Mocadon, that is hauriens primus. It makes for union and love of men, for the safety of captives, destroys prisons and buildings.

The Twenty Seventh is called Alcharya or Alhalgalmoad, that is hauriens secundus. Increaseth harvests, merchandise, gain, heals diseases; but hinders buildings, prolongs men in prisons, and helps to bring mischief on whom you will.

The Twenty Eighth Mansion is called Albothan or Alchalh, that is, fishes, increases harvests and merchandise, secures travellers through dangerous places, conduceth to the joy of wedlock, but keeps men in prison and causeth men to lose treasures.

And in these 28 Mansions of the Moon lie hid many secrets of the wisdom of the ancients, by which many miracles have been wrought in all things that are under the Circle of the Moon. And the ancients attributed to every Mansion his proper resemblance or Image or Seal and the Intelligences that governed, and they worked by their virtues divers ways.

Of the Images of the Mansions of the Moon

In the First mansion, for the destruction of any man, they made the image of a black man in an iron ring, clothed with a hair garment and girded, bearing on his right side a lance, and they sealed it in black wax, and fumigated it with liquid Storax and made an imprecation.

In the Second Mansion, against the anger of the prince, and for reconciliation, they made the Image of a King Crowned, and sealed it with white wax and Mastic and fumigated it with Lignum Aloes.

In the Third they made an Image in a silver ring, whose table was squared, and whose figure was a woman well clothed, sitting in a chair, her right hand lifted up above her head, and they sealed it and fumigated it with Moscho [Musk?], Camphor and an Aromatic hoof, this would give prosperity of fortune and all good.

In the Fourth Mansion, for revenge, separation and enmity, they sealed an Image in red wax of a Soldier sitting on a horse holding in his right hand a serpent, and they fumed it with red Myrrh and Storax.

In the Fifth, for the favour of Kings and Officials, and good reception, they made a seal in silver, bearing the head of a man. They fumigated it with Sandal.

In the Sixth Mansion, for increase of love between parties, they sealed in white wax two Images embracing one another, and fumed it with Lignum Aloes and Amber.

In the Seventh Mansion, to gain riches, make a Sigil of silver bearing the Image of a man well clothed, holding up his hands to heaven as if praying and supplicating, and fumigate it with good odours.

In the Eighth Mansion, to gain victory in war, they made the Image of an eagle of tin, having the face of a man, and they fumigated it with Sulphur.

In the Ninth, to help infirmities, they made a Sigil of lead bearing the Image of a man wanting his Virga and witnesses with his hands covering his eyes, and they fumigated it with Resin of the pine tree.

In the Tenth, to further childbirth and heal the sick, they made a sigil bearing the figure of the head of a Lion and fumed it with Amber.

In the Eleventh Mansion, to create a fear, reverence and veneration, they made a golden Lamen, the Image of a man riding upon a Lion, with his left hand holding him by the ear, and fumed it with sweet odours and Saffron.

In the Twelfth Mansion, for to cause a separation of lovers, they made in a seal of black lead, the Image of a Dragon fighting with a man, and fumed it with Lion's hair and Asafoetida.

In the Thirteenth Mansion, to cause concord and love after marriage, and to dissolve witchcraft when they copulate, they made both their forms in a seal, the man in red wax, the woman in white wax, embracing one another, fumigating it with Lignum Aloes and Amber.

In the Fourteenth Mansion, for divorce and separation of the man and the woman, they made in a seal the Image of a Dog biting his tail, and fumigated it with the hair of a black dog and a black cat.

In the Fifteenth Mansion, for gaining friendship and good will, they made the Image of a man in a seal sitting and reading letters and fumigated it with Frankincense and Nutmeg.

In the Sixteenth Mansion, to gain by merchandise, they made in a silver seal, the Image of a man sitting upon a chair holding a spear in his hand, and they fumigated it with sweet odours.

In the Seventeenth Mansion, against thieves and robbers, in an iron seal they made the Image of an ape, and fumed it with the hairs of an ape.

In the Eighteenth, against fevers and pains of the body, they made a seal in brass bearing the Image of the tail of a belly worm holding it above his head, and fumigated it with hart's horn. The same Sigil being buried caused all serpents and venomous creatures to quit that place.

In the Nineteenth Mansion, to make childbirth easy and to provoke the menstrua, they made in a seal of brass, an Image of a woman holding her hands upon her face, and they fumed it with liquid Storax.

In the Twentieth mansion, for hunting, they made in a seal of tin bearing the Image of Sagittarius, half a man and half a horse, and they fumed it with the head of a fox.

In the One and Twentieth Mansion, for the destruction of any thing, they made the Image of a man with a double forehead or countenance before and behind, and fumed it with Sulphur and a Lobster and laid it in a brass box.

In the Two and Twentieth, to secure fugitives, they made in an iron seal the Image of a man with winged foot, on his head wearing an Helmet, and they fumed it with quicksilver.

In the Three and Twentieth Mansion, to work the destruction and devastation of any thing or person, they made a seal of iron bearing the Image of a Cat having a Dog's head, and fumigated it with Dog's hair and buried it in a place where they designed to hurt any man.

In the Four and Twentieth Mansion, to the increase of flocks and cattle, they took the horn of that ram, bull, or goat or other beast which they would multiply, and made in an iron seal the Image of a woman suckling her child, and they hanged this seal on the neck of that beast which was the ringleader of the herd or flock.

In the Twenty Fifth Mansion, for the preservation of trees and plants, they made in a seal of the wood of a fig tree, the Image of a man planting, and they fumigated it with the flowers of the fig tree, and did hang it on the tree.

In the Twenty Sixth Mansion, to create love and favour, they made in a seal of white wax and Mastic, the Image of a woman washing and combing her hair, and fumigated it with sweet scent.

In the Twenty Seventh Mansion, to destroy fountains, wells, baths, they made of red earth the Image of a man winged, an empty vessel bored through which he held in his hands, and the Image being baked, they put into the vessel Asafoetida and liquid Storax, and buried them in a well, which they would destroy.

In the Twenty Eighth Mansion, to gather fishes together, they made in a brass seal, the Image of a fish, and fumigated it with the skin of a seafish, and cast it into the water wheresoever they would have the fishes gather together.

Moreover, with the foresaid Images they also did inscribe the names of the Spirits and their Characters, did Invoke and Imprecate them to do that which they desired to obtain.

Of Spirits Called Hobgoblins

These kind of spirits play mad pranks without doing any harm. They sometimes play on Gittens and Jews Harps, and ring bells, and answer those that call them with laughter and merry gestures, so that those of the house come at last to be so familiar and well acquainted with them that they fear them not at all. But if they had free power to put in execution their malicious desire, we should find these pranks of theirs not to be jests but earnest indeed, tending to the destruction of body and soul.

Trasgosy gives some examples of frolics acted by Daemons to prove the truth of what is here asserted. I will at the end of these magical discourses relate some historical examples of the actions of spirits with men, and a wonderful but true history of a maiden that was enamoured of the Devil.

It is an opinion of great antiquity and averred by the learned that whensoever any man is possessed, the soul of some one that is dead should enter into him and speak within him. This is absurd, for though sometimes God permits the Souls departed, for some special causes to return unto the world, yet doth he not permit them to enter into a body where is another soul. For two reasonable souls can by no means abide in one body, so that there cannot be a greater error than this. For without doubt they are devils and not souls, as we may see by their casting forth, which is done by the virtue of holy and sacred words, at which time they use their utmost endeavour not to be constrained to go into places where they cannot exercise their malice. An example of him in Luke 8 possessed of a Legion of Devils, was delivered of them by our Saviour, by whose permission they entered a herd of swine, which threw themselves immediately down the rocks tumbling into the sea.

Psellus and Guadentius Merula show as the cause why the Devils are so desirous to enter into men's bodies, and can with such difficulty be cast out of them, making thereunto all resistance that they possibly may. The reason is this, that though the Devils are enemies unto men, yet they enter into their bodies not so much with will to do them hurt, as with a desire of a vital heat and warmness. For these spirits are such as inhabit the deepest and coldest planes, where the cold is so pure that it wantest moistness. So that they covet places hot and moist, searching all opportunities and occasions to enter into them so often as for some reasons which we understand not, God suffereth and permitteth them so to do.

And when they cannot enter into the bodies of men, they enter into the bodies of other creatures where willingly they detain themselves so long as they may, and through the violent strength which the body by their entry receiveth, happen those tremblings, shakings and forcible motions, which we see they use that are possessed.

This kind of Devils use the spirit of the patient as their proper instrument and with his tongue speak and utter what they list. But if they be such spirits as fly the light and dwell in the profundities of the Earth, as the last and utmost sort of those of the Earth, then they make the patient both deaf and dumb like a block without understanding, as though he were deprived of all his senses and forces which he had before. And this is the worst of all and with the greatest difficulty cast out.

The Difference between Witches and Enchanters

Enchanters are so called who publicly and openly have any agreement or Covenant with the Devil, by whose help they work things which are in appearance wonderful, entering into Circles they cause them to appear and speak, consulting with them using their favour and aid in all their works and many they make the Devil alone to do for them.

Witches are those which though they have familiarity and conversation with the Devil, yet the same is in such sort that they themselves scarcely understand the error wherewith they abuse themselves, using unknown signs, characters and other superstitions in which they secretly invoke the names of the Devils, using their aid and counsel. And because the Devil may the better bring them to his bias, he discloseth unto them some properties and virtues of roots, herbs and stones and other things, which have secret operations, mingling the one with the other, that is to say, that of Natural Magic with that of the Devil. But to conclude they may all be called Witches and Enchanters which with Natural Magic (which is the knowledge of those things whom Nature hath imparted these secret virtues), mingle signs, characters and words, using them though they may understand them not, in their Sorceries and Witchcraft.

The Devil Doth Sometimes Enter the Body of Unreasonable Creatures

This is verified by Scripture of the Devils that entered the herd of swine.

A memorable example I will here impart. There was a student in Guadaloupe that on an evening walking in the field saw a clergyman riding on a horse so lean and tired scarce able to stand on his feet; entertaining some discourse with him the traveller told him that he was bound for Granada which was 400 miles distant, the student being poor and having friends there, wished he had a horse to bear him company thither. The traveller being glad of company, importuned the student to get behind him on the croupe of his horse, at which the scholar laughing told him that his horse in respect of his leanness, seemed to be fitter for dog's meat than to carry two men at once on his back. "Well," quoth the clergyman, "if you know my horse as well as I do, you would not say so, for I assure you how ill favoured soever he look, there is not his fellow in the world, neither would I sell him for my weight in gold; and if you doubt of his ability to carry us both, get but up and you shall soon know the contrary." The student got up and this lean palfrey carried them away with such smoothness and so swiftly, that he thought he never rode pleasanter in his life and every foot his companion asked him what he thought of his lean beast, assuring him that he would not be tired or alter his pace though the journey were never so long. After they had ridden all night, at last the dawning of the day began to appear, and the student saw before him a goodly country full of gardens and pleasant trees, and not far off a very great city. Asking of the clergyman what country and city the same was, he said that they were within the precincts of Granada. Desiring him in recompense of his safe journey, not to utter this matter of him and his horse to any man living. The student thanked him and parted with him, but went to the town the most amazed man in the world thinking it impossible to finish a voyage of so many miles in one night unless there had been some devil within the horse, as most likely there was.

But this example is not strange, for the Devils lost not their nature, though they lost grace, then is the power and force which they have if they be in liberty and not restrained, like unto that of the good angels, and as the Angel carried by the hair the prophet Abucuck out of Jewry into the Den of Lions which was in Babylon where Daniel was; might the Devil likewise carry those so great a journey as I said. And in this manner do they carry those men and women called sorcerers and Hags whither they will themselves.

The Sorcerers and Hags are a lineage and kind of people which are expressly agreed and accorded with the Devil, holding and obeying him as their sovereign prince and master, and suffering themselves to be marked of him as his slaves, which marks they bear in one of their eyes fashioned like a Toad's foot by which they know and have notice one of another. For they have amongst themselves great companies and fraternities making often general meetings together, at which times they pollute themselves with all fifthiness, abominable villainies, beautiful lusts and Infernal Ceremonies, and always whensoever they meet so together, they do lowly homage and reverence to the Devil who most commonly appeareth to them in the figure of a great Ram Goat.

To prove the truth hereof I shall relate briefly what happened to a learned man in Spain recorded by the authors of Malleus Malleficarum. There was a learned man who suspecting a neighbour of his to be a Sorcerer entered into a league of friendship with him covering so finely his dissimulations, that the other was content to admit of him into the society he kept and that in so doing he should enjoy all the pleasures and contentments in the world, so it was agreed between them that at the next assembly of theirs he should go and make his covenant and confederation with the Devil, putting himself under his banner and protection. The day assigned being come and gone, after it was darkness, the sorcerer took the learned man out of the town and carried him along certain valleys and thickets where he had never been before though he knew the country round about very well, and in short space he thought that they had gone very far, coming at last into a plain field enclosed round about with mountains, where he saw a great number of people, men and women, that went up and down in great mirth, who all received him with great feast and gladness, giving him many thanks for that it had pleased him to become a member of their society, assuring him that there was no greater happiness in the world, than that which he should enjoy. In the midst of this field was a throne built very sumptuously in which stood a great and mighty Ram Goat, to whom at a certain hour of the night they all went to do reverence and going up certain degrees one after another, they kissed him in the foulest part behind. The learned man seeing an abomination so great, though he were by his companion thoroughly instructed how he should behave himself, could no longer have patience, but began to call unto God, at which very instant there came such a terrible thunder and tempest as though heaven and earth should have gone together, in such sort that he became for a time through great astonishment senselessly and without all judgment and understanding, in which sort he knew not himself how long he continued. But when he came to himself it was broad day, and he found himself among certain rough mountains so bruised and crushed as though he had scarcely any one sound bone in his body, and being desirous to know what this place might be wherein he was, coming down from those mountains to the plain country underneath, he found people so strangely differing in habit, custom and speech from those of his country, that he neither understood their language nor what course best to take to get home. But making a virtue of necessity, craving charity by signs and guiding himself by the Sun he took his way towards the West and was three years in his journey homewards, enduring by the way great hardships in so long travel to his home. As soon as he came home he certified the Magistrate what he had seen, accusing by name and surname divers persons which he had seen and known in that abominable assembly, who were apprehended, found guilty and executed.

You may read Alonso De Castra Cap. 16, De Iusta Punitione Haereticorum who confirms what I have writ, and makes a difference between those Hags and Sorcerers and those Enchanters and Witches I mentioned before. For (saith he) these Hags and Sorcerers are agreed only with the Devil to the end that they might in this life enjoy all manner of delights and pleasures. The first time that they go to present themselves before him, and to do him homage they find him not in the likeness of a goat, but like a King of great and royal authority. They are all brought into his presence by other Devils in figure of Ram-goats, whom they call Martinets. Moreover, he saith that the reverence and homage which they do unto him, is not like that which we use unto princes, but in turning their shoulders and bowing down their heads as low as they can, and that he which is newly assumed into this brotherhood doth first with words wicked and abominable, blaspheme and renounce all the holy points and mysteries contained in our Catholic belief, vowing unto the Devil his faithful service for ever, with many other execrable ceremonies, vows and oaths which he there useth, which being accomplished, they mingle themselves together, and many devils with them in likeness of young gentlemen, and some of beautiful dames, where without shame or respect they fulfil in all abomination their filthy lust and beastly appetites. And of this company the greater part or in a manner all are women, as being through frailty and ignorance readiest to be deceived by the Devil and aptest thereunto through the lust of the flesh. And these women, saith he, are called Lamia and Stirges. For Lamia is a most cruel beast, which hath the heart of a woman and the feet of a horse; and Stirges is a bird that flieth by night, called a Screech Owl, makes great shrieking and noise. When she can get into any place where children are, doth suck out their blood and drink it. For which cause the Sorcerers are also called Stirges, because they work the same effect, sucking out the blood of men, when by any means they may, especially that of little children.

I will now add the two manners of ways by which the Sorcerers are present in general assemblies with the Devil. The one through the deceit of certain oils and ointments with which they anoint themselves, which depriveth them of their right soul, making them imagine that they are transformed into birds and beasts, deceiving not only themselves with this error but oftentimes also the eyes of others that behold and view them, for the Devil with deceitful appearance, formeth about them that phantastical body, which is also practised by sundry Enchanters, who so dazzle and deceive our sight, as did Circe and Medea, and others that used the art of Magic, turning and transforming men into brute beasts, to the seeming of all those which beheld them, though in truth it was nothing so. For as the philosopher Aristotle saith, it is impossible to change one shape into another. And the Council of Aquilon useth these words—"Whosoever doth affirm that any creature may be transformed into any other thing better or worse, or take any other shape than that in which it was of God created, is an infidel."

But the Sorcerers and Sorceresses, though they find the manner wherewith they are deceived and abused, yet they take it well and give consent thereunto, thinking themselves in these imaginations to be transported with great swiftness into those parts which they desire, and verily do see and find themselves in action of these, those things which to their phantasy are represented.

The other kind of going to the assemblies, and transporting them to far places with such swiftness, is really and truly by help of the Devils, upon whom they sometimes ride in likeness of goats, sometimes they anoint themselves with other ointments, whose operation maketh them think they are fowls and fly in the air, when indeed they are carried by the Devils. This is verified by all authors both ancient and modern, that the Devil can in very short space, and as it were in an instant, transport these sorcerers into marvellous far regions. For he which had power to carry our Saviour Christ (with reverence I speak it) out of the desert and to set him on the top of a pinnacle on the Temple, and from there to convey him to a high mountain where he might view and discover a great part of the world, can far more easily transport a man or woman through the air.

Much more I find in Alonso de Castra to prove what I have writ. He allegeth the authority of Paulus Grillandus in his treatise of heretics.

Malleus Maleficarum telleth of a woman, a sorceress, who affirmed obstinately before the Commissioners, that she could come and go bodily whither she list in short space though she were never so fast imprisoned and the way never so far off, that for trial they presently caused her to be shut up in a chamber and willed her to go to a certain house and learn what was there done and to bring them relation thereof, the which she promised to do. After she remained a while alone the Commissioners caused the door to be suddenly opened and entering the chamber found her lying stretched out on the ground as if dead. One of them curious to see if she had any feeling or no, took a candle and with the flame thereof scorched one of her legs, but seeing no sign of motion in her he left her and departing out of the chamber caused the door to be fast locked again. Presently upon which she came forth, telling the Commissioners that she had gone and come with great travail, declaring unto them the marks and tokens of all such things as they asked, obstinately declaring that she had been present, and viewed the scene with her eyes. Whereupon they asked her if she felt no grief in one of her legs. She answered that since her coming back it grieved her very sore. Then laid they before her the grossness of the error wherewith she was abused, and told her what they had done unto her in manner as before, which she truly perceiving fell down upon her knees and craved pardon upon promise of her repentance and amendment of life.

Lucius Apuleius and Grinaldus declare how sorcerers or witches are able to change not only their own but other men's shapes, also as Circe and Medea did, and partly through natural magic, that is the knowledge of the virtues of herbs, stones, oils and ointments, whose properties are by the devils revealed unto them and partly through the mere help of the Devil employing there in his whole power for the better binding and assuring them to be perpetually his.

Zoroaster, Lucius Apuleius, Apollonius Tyaneus have been of old famous or rather infamous in the world by their sorcery and necromancy, with many others whom historians thought unworthy to commend to posterity.

Another sort of them called Charmers, who have a particular gift of God to heal the biting of mad dogs, and to preserve people and cattle from being endamaged by them. Franciscus Victoria saith that they have the wheel of St. Katherine, in the roof of their mouths, who though they may do great help in such like matters, yet to hear their prayers and Conjurations and clownish phrases would move anyone to laughter. They are a base forlorn people of ill example in their life and boast sometimes of more than they can accomplish and some of them will creep into a red hot oven without danger of burning.

Pliny writeth alleging the authority of Crates Pergamonas that there is in Hellespont a kind of men called Ophrogens, who with only touching heal the wounds made by serpents. Varro saith that in the same country there are men which with their spittle heal the biting of serpents. Isigonus and Nymphodurus affirm that there is in Africa a certain people whose sight causeth all things to perish which they intently fix their eyes on, so that the trees wither and the children die, and therewith more might be wrote of this head.

Anthonia de Florencia
His Opinion Why the Devil Suggesteth Evil Thoughts
To Us in Our Sleep

He represents to our phantasy those things in which we take delight and such as are pleasing to our humours and appetites, especially making us dream lascivious dreams and tempting us so far with filthy and carnal lusts, that he provoketh us oftentimes to pollutions. To others he represents in their sleep great treasures and riches, to the end that waking they might be stirred with desire of them, and have their thoughts and imagination busied about them, leaving matter of better meditation. But his malice is not always herewith contented for sometimes it tendeth further, provoking us in our sleep to commit follies, whereby we may lose both body and soul at once.

A wonderful but true narrative I will here in short declare concerning one Tapia, who had so strange a condition in his sleep, that he arose divers nights sleeping out of his bed, and went up and down the house from place to place without waking. For which cause, to prevent danger, his servants used to set up a shallow tub of water by his bedside, that when he was troubled with that passion, if he touched the cold water he would presently awake. His servants one night forgot to set this vessel by the bedside. The season being very hot, he arose sleeping out of his bed with great agony to go swimming in the river, and casting about him a cloak over his shirt, he went out of his chamber, unbolted the door of the house, hastened to the riverside, coming to the town's end he met with another companion who seemed glad of the opportunity to go with him into the river. So was Tapia, who putting off his cloak and shirt, and ready to enter into the water, the other fell a scoffing and jeering at him as at one that knew not how to swim, which he taking an ill part, because he was therein very expert, answered in choler that he would swim with him on what wager he pleased. So the other forthwith went up to the top of a high bridge that crossed over the same river, he stripped himself naked and threw himself down headlong into the water, the river running in that place very swift and dangerous. Where swimming up and down in the main stream, he called upon Tapia, bidding him to do the like. But Tapia, disdaining to be less courageous than the other went likewise up to the top of the bridge and threw himself down in the same place the other had done before him, till which time still remaining fast asleep, his feet were no sooner in the water, but he awakened presently, where finding himself plunging in midst of the rough stream, though in great amazement, yet with all the speed he could, he scrambled forth earnestly calling on his companion that brought him thither with him, thinking assuredly that there was a man swimming with him indeed, but having passed with great difficulty the danger of the stream, after long calling and looking about him, when he could neither see nor hear any man make answer he began to mistrust, that this matter proceeded by the crafty illusion and deceit of the Devil who (as he truly thought) endeavoured by the subtle practice and enticement to destroy in his sleep both his body and soul.

Of Presaging by Dreams

The Light of God and Nature contradict not Daniel and others by dreams foretold natural things, for the sidereal spirit was so disposed, Joseph by the help of this star interpreted the fat and lean oxen to show the fertility and difficulty of provision. This being a natural cause, it was interpreted by the Light of Nature. By dreams many things diverse ways are to us revealed not only by a star, but by an Angel of God.

To make easy one of Enoch's Tables I shall briefly set down the cause and interpretation of all dreams under these heads:

- 1 Concerning Joseph's Oxen
- 2 The Graecian Horse
- 3 Dreams merry jocose
- 4 Serious Dreams
- 5 Riotous Dreams
- 6 Sick Dreams
- 7 Dreams of fortune
- 8 Dreams of misfortune

Concerning Joseph's oxen this tenet will be verified that so often you dream of an Ox, so often the year may be judged, for the nature the Ox is of, the like the year will prove. There was a certain diviner that dreamed of future riches. To this his constellation propounded 15 lean oxen and at last one fat ox. Thence he concluded that the 15 lean oxen were given him that he should sell them when they were fatted. In the meantime he was forced for 15 years to wander up and down in a miserable starving condition. But in the sixteenth year he happened to enjoy a fat ox, that is to say a rich wife. With this wife he lived one year and then died. The lesser cattle some signify a quarter of a year, some a month, some a week, some a day, and some an hour.

By the Graecian Horses are meant that Man's constellation in his own thought is of that great power, that he may have the help of a starry spirit in his dream without the help of an Elementary body. This Astral Body hath the force to infect with poison, make sick, blind, puffing up, aspiring and beating, and that in an instant, and afterwards to return to his Elementary body. For it is plain that by so strong an imagination, the ancients in battle, by force of the astral body prevailed against the enemy so that some of a sudden were taken paralytic in their bodies, no natural cause concurring, some deprived of their sight, some made leprous, and some almost strangled, and many other mischiefs like those are inflicted which cannot be cured in a long time.

The power of an astral spirit is great in the forming of dreams and their fatality. As for vain ludicrous dreams whose interpretation is doubtful, you must know that in the sidereal spirit there is no perfection, but tends to the delusion that the dream will prove happy, though in the end it will not prove so. There are many dreams that prove true to the finding out of treasure, success in marriage, climbing up to honour, as also forerunners of sorrow, poverty and all hardships, according to everyone's predestination and the benevolence of the stars. And none can deny that dreams, have their practice by which starry bodies are compelled that they should reveal anyones intention. The reason of this practice is wonderful, neither is it obvious or received of everyone, for it causeth that the stars manifests by what is asked, and this is done, whilst the Imagination, trust, hope and charity, and the persuasion of the starry spirits is so far looked into as nothing is able to deny it. And though prayer may indeed be directed to God, yet it is not of the soul but from the light of Nature. Therefore, that practice is placed upon the foundation of imagination. love, hope, expectation, and serious friendship.

The astral spirit hath speculation; of great moment is speculation, from thence flows good and evil. From speculation arises an Usurer, whoremaster, dicer, blasphemer, etc., from the same arise what is good. The invention of sciences whether mechanical or not is due to speculation, so is Alchemy, but the Astral spirits before a due time learn nothing. Nothing can be speculated but what is found and comprehended by Astral spirits.

Our mind governs a star, so that a star follows the mind and with it is reconciled. As if saffron be cast into water, all the water waxeth yellow, so a star comparatively like saffron penetrates man and with man is united. A star is the tincture of speculation of the mind, that is of all things of man. Because therefore a star is the tincture, man is the body that is tinged. Let none admire that a star many ways operates in man. But there are peculiar stars which have a regard and do govern beasts but their influence and constellation is of a different nature from man's.

It is therefore practical that man should incline himself towards the stars and be joined with them, that so he may compel and change all things to its own essence. Therefore as to the practical part of divination we determine that it finds out great arts, sciences and workmanships. And it were good that worldly men should receive such a Light of Nature, and not busy themselves with intimate phantasies, or study to deceive themselves or others, but embrace the genuine star, and obey the same which will tend to the recreation and welfare of his earthly body, without any loss or prejudice to his Soul or his Image.

Behold how the Stars, Angels and Genii communicate their virtues in dreams, how they come down with their influential power by the beams of the planets to the Earth by the figures of Astromancy and Geomancy to the bodies of men in their dreams. Many of the ancient learned Hebrews, Greeks and Latins, have handled the subject of dreams, but with so little assurance, that amongst a thousand significations, there are hardly two true, having no more experience for what they advance than conjecture and imaginations, whereof they have made large volumes, which have rendered them that studied them more anxious and perplexed than they were before for their dreams. But they are deceived though learned, not knowing that a thousand dreams which possess the spirit of man every night are nothing but a remembrance of his former actions; the which thing is common to him with the beasts, and that the occupation which the person thought most concerned his life and livelihood, is that which represents itself every night. Which Claudian hath represented in these verses:

*Omnia quae sensu voluntur vota diurno,
Pectore sopito reddit amica quies.
Venator sua fesso tororum membra reponit,
Mens tamen ad sylvas et sua lustia redit.*

*Judicibus lites, aurigae somnia currus,
Unaque nocturnis mota cavetur equis.*

Which in effect is no more but this:

The Hunter, Lawyer, Carter all repent,
The sense of what hath past the day forespent.

That which Antiquity thought divine in dreams was indeed nothing but folly, and that in this case, there is no difference between a man and a beast, for Solomon the wisest that ever has said. That the ends of the sons of men, and the end of beasts, is the same thing as to them, as the one dies so do the others, and they have all the same spirit, and a man naturally is no more than a beast, for all is vanity, all goes to the same place, all is dust, and all shall return into dust. Who is it that knows that the spirit of the children of men ascends up on high, and the spirit of the beast descends under the earth? For who can bring it back to see what was become of it? If this be doubtful who will attribute divinity to so many sottish visions dreamed by gross people. If a thousand figures are seen by a rustic in his sleep even so it is with a labouring beast; if the one chafes the other will show it is angry, all their passions are alike. Although dreams are equal to them with us, yet Man hath something more than is ordinary to beasts, some dreams being to him the forerunners of some fortunes or misfortunes which follow him the day after they have been seen and dreamt, and sometimes for a longer date.

There are 73 various dreams I find recorded by the ancient Cabalists, Merubalists and Massorets which are easily understood by those who know the temperament of those that have dreamed them and not otherwise. You must also know the day of the Moon, and the hour of the night they were dreamed in. I shall hereafter write a particular discourse on this subject of dreams, wherein I shall discover the errors of Artemiderus, Cardan and Nephius in their resolution of dreams. I shall only at this time add a few corollaries on this magical head and proceed further to the doctrine of the Nymphs, Sylphs, etc.

Dreams are either Divine or human.

Divine dreams without doubt are most certain, but be cautious to consider what dreams are properly Divine and what are not, for sometimes Satan transforms himself into an Angel of light. Divine dreams are tried by examining them by the rule of the known word of God. The Devil imitates God in dreams, creeps into the minds of foolish and improvident people who sometimes are possessed with enthusiasms from heaven. Abhor the dotings of fanatic people though they pretend never so much to derive them from heaven.

Next to divine dreams are the Angelical which may be believed if they agree with the Divine. But Diabolical dreams are to be detested, by which the heathens of old, and of late the Manichaeans, Pelagians, Monks and fanatic persons being deceived, were the authors and defenders of many horrible false doctrines. And it being granted that sometimes that the devil may know casual events, yet he often deceives the Magicians as to the true signification of things to come. The Conimbricensian Philosophers have written a large volume of this doctrine, and they charge Augustine, Damascenus, and Thomas Aquinas with it.

Human dreams which have no other but natural causes, and happen to men ordinarily as they sleep are either physical or common. The physical dreams are those which by the agitation of the humours, and disposition of the temperament, do by certain signs, nay sometimes even material and efficient causes discover unto the physician the more certain of constitution of the patient. These may be observed without impiety or atheism, to the end that more fortunate medicines may be provided for the sick. So a certain wrestler dreamed that he was plunged in a cistern of blood, and that he should hardly deliver himself thence. Accordingly to this dream, the physicians knowing it proceeded from an exuberance of blood, having taken away what abounded, diverted the danger he was in. Galen mentions another who dreaming that one of his legs became dead as a stone, a while after became paralytic in that leg.

Common dreams are those that proceed from compound causes; and they are true or false or equivocal. Many things in dreams may be rightly interpreted, yet many times may not happen accordingly. Hence it was so many Kings and Princes have miserably perished by this kind of dream.

So Cambyzes dreaming that his crown touched the heaven, and that he sat in his brother Smerdis' royal seat, was to him the signification of death. Many dreams are ambiguous of a double sense uncertain and doubtful. One told a Conjector that he had dreamed he was turned into an Eagle. He answered, thou shalt overcome, for there is nothing swifter or more violent than that bird. But says Antiphon to him, dost thou not see thyself overcome, for that bird pursuing and chasing others is ever the last itself.

Of many Dreams there are but a few have there true events, especially in melancholy persons. Read Poucher Lib. de Divinatione per somnium. A certain man told a Conjector that he had dreamed he saw an egg hanging by a string of his bed. The Conjector answers that there was a treasure hid under his bed. He searches and finds a parcel of Gold compassed with Silver. He sent the interpreter what Silver he thought fit. But says the other, will you give me more of the yolk? For that doth as well signify the Gold as the white does the Silver.

Many holy persons have the society of the Guardian Genius by which they have the apprehension and knowledge of the death of their friends and kindred, either before or after they are dead by certain monetary dreams, or by a strange and unusual restlessness within themselves, though they be a thousand leagues distant, and they commonly dream of hair, or of eggs, or of teeth all mingled together with earth, a little before the death of any friend or relation. All which manifestly demonstrate the power of the Angels of Astromancy and Geomancy when they are united, and how Superiors and Inferiors communicate to man.

Having thus compendiously laid down the various opinions of philosophers both ancient and modern as to dreams of all sorts with a short explanation thereof, leaving the larger exposition to a particular treatise I shall hereafter set forth, if God spare me life and health to complete the same. I shall in the next place discourse of Nymphs, Sylphs, Pigmies, Salamanders, and other spirits, in order to the better understanding one of Enoch's Tables which is full of obscurity and darkness. This part of Magic is an Arcanum of great value though mysterious.

Of Nymphs, Sylphs, Pygmies and Salamanders, with Other Spirits

There is a light in man which is above the light of Nature. This light causeth him to search and learn and experiment supernatural things. Nature itself gives a light by which, as from a proper light the same may be known. For man is somewhat more than Nature, for he is both Nature, a spirit and an Angel, he hath the property of all three. How great is the dignity of man, he searcheth hell and heaven. In this discourse, I shall set forth created things beyond the knowledge of the light of Nature. Here are four sorts of spiritual men, to wit, Nymphs, Sylphs, Pigmyes and Salamanders, to which are added Giants, Melusines, and Mons Veneris, and what are like them. All which we see not from Adam's progeny, but another sort of Creature, divers and separated from men and all living creatures, though they converse with us, and children be born of them.

I shall observe this method. First, lay down their creation and what they are. Secondly, their country and habitation, where they live and what government they have. Thirdly, how they appear among us, mingle themselves and cohabit with us. Fourthly, what miracles they act, as we read of Melusines, Mons Veneris and others. Fifthly, the generation of Giants, their original and end, nothing from Scripture as to their nature can be found, except some few testimonies of the Giants, the cause whereof is founded in this, that their works appear in verity. If we believe there is Magic and consider its original from that foundation, these matters may be known, for the writers of the Old and New Testaments treated of those things which concerns the welfare of the soul towards God, which hinders not this our philosophy. There is nothing created which wants its mystery. We find many wonderful things done in the Old Testament, which none can expound except he be instructed by the New Testament.

In the next place, consider what the Spirit is, what the Soul. Also the Spirit of these is flesh, and the flesh Spirit.

Flesh is two-fold, flesh from Adam and not from Adam. Flesh from Adam is gross, because earthy, but what flesh is not from Adam, it is subtle, not fit to be bound or comprehended, 'the flesh of Adam cannot penetrate walls'. The difference lies from two offspring, that is, descending from two parents, and are in themselves, as the Spirit and Man. The spirit penetrates all walls, nor can be excluded from anything, but so is not man, who may be excluded.

But these subtle Creatures do differ in this from spirits, that they have blood, flesh and bones, beget children, speak, eat, drink, walk. Spirits do none of these. They are like spirits in agility, they are like men in generation, species and eating, and therefore they are men bearing the nature of both spirit and man, which in them is one.

Iamblichus saith, they are not men, because they walk spiritually; they cannot be spirits, because they eat, drink and have flesh and blood; they are therefore a peculiar Creature, and from their double nature they are made one mixture as any compounded matter of sweet and sour, or like two colours under one species. Man hath a Soul, a Spirit hath not, but the Creature is either and yet hath not a soul. Nor is it like a Spirit; a Spirit dies not, but a Creature dies; it hath not a Soul, it is not like a Man. Christ died not for those that are not of Adam's race. They beget children like themselves not us. They are prudent, rich, poor, fools, as we who are of Adam. And proceeding not from Adam, have not the Image of Man.

As to the nature of these Creatures that are not of Adam's race. They are men and people, dying with Animals, walking with Spirits, eating and drinking with men, that is to say, as cattle so they die, nothing remaining, and there is neither water nor fire that hurts them, as being spirits, neither can any one be able to shut them in as spirits. Their propagation is like to that of men, obtaining all their nature. They are obnoxious to human diseases and health, and use not the medicines of the land from which man was made, but the medicine wherein they live. They die as men but after the death of beasts, their flesh like other flesh putrefies, their bones like other bones perisheth, no footstep left. Their manners, gestures, speech, wisdom, are all human, either vicious or virtuous, gross or subtle, better or worse. They differ in themselves either in form or species, as other men. They live with men after the same law, eating the fruits of their own hand's labour, spinning and weaving their own garments, handling all things by a certain reason, governing with wisdom, administering Justice, for although they are animals, yet are all endued with human reason, only they have no souls. Therefore, they want the judgment of serving God, to walk in his ways, because they want a soul. Therefore, as animals act honestly in their life by an innate principle, so do they. But in reason, they overcome all other animals, and as man is next to God on earth above all Creatures, as to understanding and gifts, so they are next to man among all animals, and for this cause may be esteemed men. Neither are they destitute of any thing than the nature of a Spirit and the Soul of a Man—a peculiar and wonderful work of Creation, surpassing all things that can be considered.

Of their Habitation

Their habitation is divers, varying according to the Four Elements. They that live in the Water are called Nymphs; those that inhabit the Air are called Sylphs; those that are in the earth are called Pigmyes; those that are in the Fire are Salamanders. These are the usual names, yet some will call watery men Undines, and airy men Sylvestres, and earthy men Gnomes, and fiery men Vulcans rather than Salamanders.

But if we describe their regions. Let their parts be divided, the Nymphs have no commerce with the Pigmyes, nor they with them, and so among the Sylvestres and Salamanders every one hath his peculiar habitation; and here we may see the wonderful works of God who made no element void without a miracle contained in it. Consider their four Regions wherein they differ, as to their habitation, persons, essence and nature, and yet are more conformable to man than to one another.

We, the Sons of Adam, do stand and walk in the air, no otherwise than a fish in the waves, neither can we want air no more than a fish can want water, for as a fish lives in the water, and water is to it in the place of air, in like manner to a man is air instead of water; and so every Creature inhabits and walks in his own element. By this example you may understand, that the Undines inhabit the waters which serves them as air serves us. And as we admire that they live in the water, so they admire that we live in the air. The same reason may serve for the Gnomes who inhabit in the mountains, whereof the air and Chaos is their earth. For in the Chaos everything lives that is inhabit therein, walks therein, stands therein. But the Earth is only a Chaos to the Gnomes, for they pass through solid walls, stones and rocks, as spirits do, and therefore all these things are only to them a Chaos, that is, nothing. As the air hinders not us in our walking, even so the earth nor mountains nor stones, hinder the Gnomes, and with as much ease as we pierce the air, even so they pierce stones and rocks, for such things are to them a Chaos which is not so to us. As the Chaos is more gross, so the Creature is more subtle, as Man hath a subtle Chaos, therefore he is more gross. According to the condition of the Inhabitants so the Chaos varies in nature and property as to walking.

The Four Elements, then, is their habitation and their Chaos, and as we live in the air without damage, so they live in their Chaos, they are neither choked, strangled or burnt. For there are no such things but air to these Creatures which inhabit in them. For water is the air of the fish. If the fish is not choked, the Undine is not choked. What reason is for the water, the same is for the earth. The earth is the air of the Gnomes, therefore they are not strangled in it. They want not our air no more than we want theirs. So the air of the Salamanders is fire, so our air to us is air. But the Sylvestres are next to us, if indeed they are conversant with our air; but before others they die most like to us. For in the fire they are burnt, and so are we: in the earth they are strangled, and so are we. Therefore, every one remains sound in his own Chaos, but in another he dies. God is wonderful in his works.

But now to say something of the food of the Creatures. You must know, that every Chaos hath a double sphere, to wit a heaven and an earth, no otherwise than as we men walk in the earth, but the earth and heaven supply us food, and the Chaos as a medium lies between these two. So, therefore, we in the middle of these two spheres and little globe are nourished. In like manner they that inhabit in the water have the earth for their ground, and the water for their Chaos, and the heaven even to the water belonging, and also they that live in the middle of the heaven and earth, and therefore the water is their Chaos, but their habitation is agreeable to nature. So we must judge of the Gnomes, whose ground or earth is water, Chaos is earth, and the heaven is a sphere; that is the Earth stands in the water. But now the earth is to them a Chaos, and water is the ground, after this manner by these things is their aliment produced. The Sylphs are like unto men, and after their manner do live off the fields and herbs of the woods. The ground of Salamanders is the earth, and fire is the Chaos. So their food comes from the earth and fire, and the Constellation is from the air their heaven. But now for their eatables and drinkings. Water is drunk by us or satiates us, but not so the Gnomes, nor Nymphs, nor the other two. For as water quenches our thirsts, so there is another sort of created water for them, which we can neither see nor can find out. It is necessary they should drink, but that kind of drink which in their world is drunk. In like manner it is needful they should eat, but it is such sort of food which their world affords. This is certain that their worlds hath a peculiar property no otherwise than our own World hath.

As to their clothing, they have their clothing and hide their privates, but not after our fashion but their own, for they are modest as becomes men. Also they have their Orders, their Magistrates, as bees who have their king, or as the wild geese who have their leader. Neither live they according to the order of human laws, but according to the laws of their homebred nature. Their labour is like ours according to the nature of that world wherein they live. He that gave sheep's wool to us, the same gave them wool. God is able not only to create those sheep who are known to us, but otherwise such of foods in the fire, water, in the earth. The same God not only clothes them, but he clothes the Gnomes and Nymphs, Salamanders and Sylphs; they are all under God's protection, and they are all clothed and sustained by Him.

They sleep, rest, watch as we do. The Gnomes have the earth which is their Chaos, but this to them is air, not as it is earth to us, from thence it follows that they see by the earth, as we see by air. Lastly, they have the Sun and Moon and all the firmament before their eyes, as we have. In the like manner, the Undines have water for their Chaos. But water doth not intercept the Sun from them, but as we receive the Sun by the air so they receive it by the water. After the same manner, the Vulcans by their fire. Moreover, as the Sun irradiates us on the earth and makes it fruitful, so it makes them. So it is evident with them that the Summer, Winter, Day, night, and the like flourishes with them. As rain, snow, etc., is common with us, so it is with them. They are equally afflicted with pests, fevers, pleurisy and other diseases from heaven, as we are, but as to God's Judgment in the Resurrection, they are animals not men.

As to their person, the Undines, as well men as women, have the stature of a man. The Sylvestres have not that form, but are more sharp, grosser and longer than the others. The Gnomes are humble, about a span long. The Salamanders are oblong, slender and dry, but their seal and places are in the Chaos, as we said. The Nymphs inhabit the water that they may seize on men washing or riding. The Gnomes inhabit in a mountain Chaos. Hence it is that there are found around chambers and the like in the earth built and furnished. The Nymphs have the like lodgings. In like manner the clamour of the Salamanders is heard in the mountains of Etna, where they build lodgings, which are discovered in the conflagration of the Elements. They have all things common in our habitations, according to the property of their arcana. Certain documents are found in metal mines and waters, and Etna, where the Vulcans chiefly discover themselves. More might be added as to their money, their payments, their manners, etc.—shall be hereafter at large explained, when I shall deal with a History of the actions and manners of the Rosy Crucians.

After what manner these Creatures appear to us and are beheld of us

All Creatures that ever God created have manifested themselves to man, for God to this end manifested the Devil to man, that he should have knowledge of Him. In the like manner, the knowledge of Spirits and Soul, the Angels (were manifested) to men that they should know and believe that these Angels were from God whom they serve. But apparitions of this kind are seldom made but when something is to be confirmed and that we may learn how admirable and stupendous are the works of God, and to confirm the verity of the Holy Scriptures, and to certify us that such Creatures subsist in the Four Elements which seem wonderful in our eyes, and these Creatures converse with men and shall talk with them and the like, and that we may be better documented as concerning the Nymphs, they are not only seen of us, but they copulate and bear children. In the like manner, the Pigmies are not only seen of men, but talk with them and receive money of them and suffer the like passions as we do. And it is known that the Sylphs do negotiate and travel with men. Lastly, the Vulcans or Aetneans have appeared to men as we shall hereafter demonstrate. Furthermore, their appearance is by divine Judgment. As God sends us an Angel for our help and after that takes him away, so the Nymphs go out of their water and come to us, offer themselves to our service, negotiate with us, deal with us, then depart and return to their water, and all this for the sake of man, that he may better contemplate the divine works, but these men are only animals without a mind. From whence it comes that they copulate with men in Matrimony, that an Undine marries a man from Adam, takes care of all his courtesies in a familiar way, and bears children, and you must know that these children coming from Adam's race by the father, have a soul that partakes of eternity, and the wife after she is married receives a soul from God, and after the example of other women she is redeemed by God. This may be proved by many instances, that these Creatures of themselves are not eternal, but if they are joined with men by matrimony they are made eternal, and so after the manner of men they receive a soul. God created them so like men and conformable to man's nature in all things that nothing could be more like. So that copulation is the cause of the soul and salvation of these Nymphs, in like manner as Man's league with God and God's Covenant made with Man is the cause why he enters the Kingdom of God. If this league or Covenant were not, what would the Soul profit us? Truly nothing. Furthermore, there are two that are accounted spirits, to wit, the Pigmies and the Aetneans, not such Creatures as they appear like splendour and a spectrum. But you must know that they are flesh and blood as man is, although they be nimble, swift as spirits; they know all things past, present, and to come, occult from the eyes. In these things they serve men by revealing and forewarning. They have reason common with men, if they receive a soul. They have knowledge and the Intellect of Spirits, understood of those things that belong to God. They have great endowments; they lead and allure men to try these things of them, and we must believe that God brought forth these creatures that we might learn how great things God can work by his Creatures.

We have hitherto spoken of the Nymphs who come out of the water to us and in the banks of rivers where they inhabit, sometimes they are taken sitting and after the said manner are copulated.

But the Sylphs are grosser than those and know not how to speak, though they have a tongue and other things necessary for speech.

Of Gnomes, Etc.

The Gnomes have the same speech as the Nymphs, but the Aetneans speak nothing, though they are able to speak, although hardly and rarely.

The Nymphs go forth in a human habit and countenance, and appetite.

The Sylphs so appear like men, but they are false and fearful, and have no substance.

The Gnomes are like men, but they are short like dwarfs, sometimes equal to a middle sized man.

The Aetneans show themselves in a fiery habit and essence. These verily are those of which men talk of—In this house walks a fiery man or spirit, this burning soul wanders, etc.—as spirits of this kind are often seen. In meadows and grounds they appear like burning chips or brands running up and down and cause men to go out of their way. Such are the Vulcans. But we find these not to converse with men, by reason of the force of their fire, but they are often found among witches and with them to copulate. The Devil wanders with these and makes use of them to betray men. Without these fiery men conversation is dangerous, because for the most part they are possessed in whom the Devil rageth to the great damage of mankind. But sometimes the Devil enters into the Gnomes and serves them. In like manner the Devil lets himself into the Sylphs, chiefly their females, conversing with them in the woods and then copulates. Their births prove leprous, scabby, itchy, are incurable. These sorts of spirits commerce with men. They retain the nature of spirits as to their vanishing. Let him that take heed that hath a Nymph for his spouse, that he come not at the water, or hurt her in the water. In like manner, he that hath a Pigmean, let him not molest her in those places where she can separate. So strictly are men bound that without a cause they cannot separate from them, and this is wont to be in those places from which they go forth. And, therefore, a Nymph except she be upon the water, she cannot vanish away from her husband if she be provoked, in other places she may be kept. So also the Gnomes, if they be once employed in our services, they are compelled to keep to their covenant and perform those things required, and if the promises be kept honestly on both sides then they remain true, constant and faithful in their office, chiefly in gathering together money. For the Gnomes abound in money, which they coin themselves. Which you shall so receive. He hath that of the spirit whatsoever he wishes to have. For the Gnome gives him any certain sum of money he desires and it is good current money. After this manner they give money to many men in the Caverns of mountains, that thence they may again depart. And so they buy with a price the departure of men. All these things are done by God's ordinance.

We have declared hitherto how these men come to us. It remains that we explain after what manner they again depart from us, or who are conversant with us. First, therefore, when they copulate with men, they beget children, and when they are moved to anger at men upon the water, then of a sudden throw themselves into the water, nor are they found again. When, therefore, she thus falls into the water she forsakes her husband and children, the wedlock nevertheless remains entire, for you must know that in regard of such a matrimonial that she will appear at the Last Judgment, nor is she separated from that very soul, but attends the same and expects due reward. For though, indeed, she remains a Nymph she is compelled to act the same as soul and league requires. In the meantime though they are disjoined from one another, nor do not again meet together excepting at what time the husband shall wed another wife. For then the Nymph returns and brings death to the husband, as many times hath been observed.

After the same manner the Syrens are bred, living upon the waters, rather then in the waters. These differ not from fishes, are virgins but differ from the form of women in their lower parts. These bring forth nothing but are monsters, no otherwise than if a monstrous man should be born of two true men. Put the case that Nymphs should produce themselves as men do, if they beget a monster, they beget Syrens swimming on the waters, which these parents eject, nor tolerate with themselves. Hence there are beheld in divers shapes, as we do find it falls out in divers monsters. Nor are the Nymphs alone the only cause of our wonder, but the Syrens which far exceed men by their various gestures. Some do sing, other play on the pipe, others act other things.

From the Nymphs are generated Moncks, which is a kind of monster. These represent a Monck both in species and form. They are like unto men, are found in like places, descend from men, that is, have their generation from Nymphs, Gnomes and the like. God himself works wonderful things in his creatures. So a comet from other stars hath his birth, as a certain monster, nor hath it a natural course as a star, but looked upon as a prodigy.

To this example are referred the monsters of the Sea, proceeding from the Nymphs, they are Comets, and of God manifested, that we may learn in his wonderful works. But because in very many Charity waxes cold, many such things are neglected, the greatest part of men are so given to usury, their own profit to dice and drinking, etc. But turn your eyes to these monsters, you shall become such after death, observe therefore admonition and take heed to your selves.

But why do these Nymphs ensnare men? You must know that men of this kind manifest themselves, and meet in one place, where they may live together, and have the familiarity of men which they studiously covet. For flesh and blood greatly loves flesh and blood. Many amongst them are wives to men. These are few, they are numerous. Which is the cause they hunt after and catch at other men. From these men there arises a gathering together and conversation which they call Mons Veneris, which is nothing else but an assembly or gathering together of Nymphs made in some certain den or cave of their world, not indeed in their Chaos but in the Chaos of men, but in the meantime in their Regions. The family of this Mons Veneris is very ancient of many years standing. They are long lived, without any defect in nature that is notable; they retain the same species always to the end of their life. But, now, Venus is both a Nymph and a Wave or Undine more worthy and superior than the rest, who hath reigned indeed a long time, but at length life is defunct. Whom another Venus hath succeeded but not like the former, to whom was given the government of domestical affairs, but she is dead at length, as also her kingdom. But as to the Immortality of Venus, Philosophers differ, for some are of the opinion that she is the possessor of eternal life even to the day of Judgment. But, understand this of her and her seed, to wit, according to the species, not according to the Individuum. For the Last day will end and terminate all. Everything hath his end, they and all others die, but in the meantime in respect of seed, all generations continue till the last day.

The original of this Mons Veneris is thus recorded:— There was once a Nymph, some say a Queen, who lived on a mountain. This Nymph took occasion to leave that place and descended to a Lake in that Region, and there she built herself an habitation for love's zeal, which was defended by the mountain and without the doors a ditch, that a freer passage might be for her suitors and lovers.

Read the famous history of the Nymph that married Stauffenberg, whom some Divines will not allow otherwise than a diabolical delusion and not real, but it was true. She was an Undine, so called, and was married to one Stauffenberg and cohabited with him so long till he married another wife in regard he reckoned her for a Divorce, and that was the cause why he married another. But at the day of marriage, he sitting at the table, she appeared and gave him a sign of his breach of faith to her by striking him on the thigh, at the table, he being astonished therewith, the third day after he was found dead. This was a just punishment for adultery.

But to say something of Melusina, who was a Nymph who possessed a Sorceress. Such is Beelzebub's nature to transform such into other forms, as cats, or wolves, dogs, etc. Besides this she was a Nymph having flesh and blood, fruitful, disposed to generation, from the Nymphs she came out of the Earth to men to ensnare them, where she lived to the end of her life, how long that was God knows. This was a great fraud and treachery of Beelzebub. Superstition caused men to use Incantations to penetrate such places where such creatures were which remained with them like a Worm or Dragon of this kind to the end of their life.

Besides these, two more generations belong to the Nymphs and Pigmies. These are the generations of the Giants and Dwarves not descending from Adam. We must not refer St. Christopher to this class, because he was born of man's seed, but you must consult histories which give you account of Bernensis, Sigenot, Hildebrand Deitric and others, the like which were famous giants, as Laurinus was a famous dwarf. These giants were generated of the Sylphs, and the dwarfs came from the Pigmies, and of these are monsters or the Syrens of the Nymphs. The strength of these is wonderful as well as their appearance, which is rare. They exceed their own kind, the consideration of their prodigious acts and wicked designs. They are born of animals which are men, hence it follows that they have not their soul from their parents and being monsters, it consequently follows that they have no soul although they have become famous by many generous though abhorred crimes, as parrots know how to speak and Apes know how to act Man's gestures, so these by Nature's indulgence can express Man's deeds, but yet we cannot consider that they have a Soul. God can if he will infuse a Soul into these men like others, as the league between God and Man teaches, as well as the league of the Nymphs with Man, but they were born not for the Soul but for the Creature, that God might be seen therein more to be admired in his works. Neither would he create gigantic Souls, although one man may be like another in the Kingdom of God. Therefore, I compare them with animals whose soul is unknown to me; for although they shall do good and just things, I cannot say they are partakers of redemption, for they are not wise in faith, but lived like prudent animals. And if a wolf or fox could speak, they would not be much unlike them as to their intellect which is natural that so ready a judgment may be given of their soul.

Sylvestres or aerial men beget Giants, when they do meet in Conjunction, no otherwise than if a Conjunction should happen to a Comet, to an Earthquake and the like. But if it were requisite, a Monster should be born. According to the usual course of nature he is not born, but overthwart or crosswise according to the providence of God. But the Sylphs after their own way do copulate and bring forth monsters. Of the manner of which they are generated, nothing can be defined. For that work the order is Divine, nor otherwise can it be explained by Astronomy, of the wandering stars and of their generation, who have no rule after a natural manner, and are begotten and made, or the earthquake, which sometimes falls out and for a long time intermits. The like we must judge of the Giants who are born after the same manner by constellations of the same kind not indeed in heaven but as the constellations are made in Man. For the same heaven hath no force or operation to produce such monsters: with men, as to the constellation, with heaven there is no commerce. Indeed, all are under heaven and included of the same. But because it is another body, they have another Chaos, therefore, heaven can make no impression on them, because it sticks not nor lasts not. But here is to be understood a natural course and motion from the heaven as of these made by itself East and West. But here you must know that if any man be born more tall or more short, it must not be imputed to heaven, but to a peculiar course of nature. But of this I will be silent. Understand the like of the Dwarves which are born of the Pigmies of the earth, from whence they become not so tall, but in proportion are so much shorter by so much as the pigmies are more short than the Sylphs, these are no less monsters than the Giants and have the same manner of generation.

Consider what St. John the Baptist said to the Jews—God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham. If it were possible to God to produce children from Adam's loins, the same God could make other men without his loins, as Nymphs, Giants, etc. Whereby he might as well increase as preserve his world. This may serve for our example and instruction, that God being powerful in one thing he is powerful in the other thing. If he can produce men seven feet long, he can also produce men that are 20 or 30 feet long. We see the example in Giants of whom we may learn that God is this Lord who is able to do all these things, and infuse a soul in a moment.

But to draw to a conclusion we must add that men of this kind, whether Giants or Dwarves, are fit to get with child women sprung from Adam, as to nature if like with like may square. But although these monsters are not fruitful, they are monsters only in their person, as to strength and magnitude not to generation, but as much as in them is beyond one seed they cannot evacuate; that is to say they attain not to the third and fourth generation. Furthermore, if they come to the generations of men, a double foetus or birth is begotten; that is to say, if it is bodied according to the nature of his mother then it requires her genius, otherwise it is generated like its animal the parent. But that there be made a mixture, which cannot be, for then the seed would have a greater force in the other. But although otherwise the two seeds may become one, but this is not in the like manner. And although there may be made one seed, it is qualified or separated from the other part which confers the soul. Therefore, after this manner their generations end, neither are heirs left to them. And as comets leave no children, and as an earthquake leave no seed after them, but together are ended as one in themselves. So they also in a degree or generation rise together and set.

Of the Cause of These Creatures

God in his infinite wisdom, set over keepers or preservers to all things in the universe, neither left he any thing unpreserved or without a keeper. So the Gnomes, Pigmies and Manes keep the treasures of the earth, that is to say, the metals and other things. From where they are conversant, there do lie hid great treasures and opulence. But there is a time defined when these treasures may be obtained, and we must beware that they be not brought to light before, which if men do find, they are wont to say in old time the Pigmies walked here, they are already gone, that is to say, the time was, that riches were proffered. From the treasures of the Earth are so distributed, that even from the beginning of the world, there are daily found metals, silver, gold, iron, etc., which are so kept from those men, that all everywhere go not forth in one day, but one by one. So the riches of the Mountains fly about, to and fro, according to time and regions being distributed from the first day to the last.

In like manner we must judge of the Salamanders, that they are the keepers of the fiery regions, wherein they are conversant. For in those regions are coined and fabricated those things which the Pigmies keep. For if the fire burns the Pigmies, then begin to watch, after whose watching the things are produced. After the same manner even the Sylphs keep the exterior gems which lie under the air, and fabricated of the Salamanders, and reserved in a due place where men may possess them. These jewels they defend, that they cannot be got till an appointed time. For where the like treasures lie, there these little men have their abode, taking care that these hidden riches shall not be enjoyed before a fit time, and have a right thereto. Therefore, since these men are the keepers of the goods of this kind, it may easily be understood that they indeed want a soul, but yet they are like unto men.

The Undines or Nymphs act in the waters and do keep these riches which are in the seas, and left and fabricated of the Salamanders. Therefore, in general we must note this of them, that where-soever they are found, great treasures and the best of metals lie hid, of which they are ordained keepers.

Furthermore, such is the case and condition of the Syrens, Giants and Manes, as of the Scintillas or Sparks, which are only the monsters of the Salamanders, that indeed, they keep nothing but show some novelty or grand thing to men. So when any belchings of fire appears, a destruction is denounced to that country, for the most part a laying waste of that monarchy is presaged. In like manner, the Giants do portend great ruin and mischief will happen to that region. But the Manes or Ghosts of the dead, for the most part foretell to the people great want and poverty.

The Syrens do threaten sects and divisions and the destruction of Kings and Princes.

The main cause is hidden from us why and how these things are acted, but when the end of the world shall approach all these things from the least to the greatest shall be manifested, what manner of things they were, why and how they shall stand or walk and what they shall portend, for whatsoever thing was done in the whole world shall in that day be laid open. Every man shall then receive his reward according to his desert, then the darnel shall be separated from the wheat and the chaff from the corn.

Of Presaging

There are five manners of presaging or foretelling of events.

As to the first, the Prophets, Sybils and Disciples of Christ, foretold nothing by art but from the mouth of God.

The second kind of presaging came from nature itself, which showeth what good or bad anyone should make.

The third way of presaging is called Divination, whereby a man from his own light may foresee what end shall befall one.

The fourth way of presaging is by the help of Spirits, and this is called Sorcery.

The fifth kind of presaging is called Augury—to presage from the singing of birds, from the entrails of animals, from the inundations of waters, and from the violence of winds.

But the fourth way of presaging which is sorcery and contained under these four heads—Geomancy, Astromancy, Pyromancy and Hydromancy—which succeeds as Spirits do favour. This is the main subject of the Tabula Sancta, and I will particularly make a large discourse hereon. But now to put the Tables into practice, I will lay down Dr. Rudd's directions to know good Spirits from bad with the Invocations to visible appearance through all the Nine Hierarchies.

The Signs

The Signs and Appearance both of good and evil Spirits are and ought to be carefully and well observed by reason they are foregoers of such appearances, and whereby are known the differences thereof which is a matter of material consequence as shall be more plainly showed forth.

Good Angels moved

If good Angels or Elemental powers of light or otherwise dignified Spirits of benevolent or symbolising nature with celestial powers, and allied to the welfare and preservation of mankind, are moved and called forth to visible appearance in a Crystal Stone or Glass Receiver as one usual way or customary form is among the learned Magicians, then the sign of their appearance most seemeth like a veil or curtain or some beautiful colour hanging in and about the stone or glass as a bright cloud or other pretty kind of Hieroglyphical show, both strange and very delightful to behold.

It is therefore to be remembered that the Magical Sophy ought to have for his purpose a Crystal Stone of a round globic form, very clear and transparent, or other stone of like diaphanity or ball of clear and solid glass or thick hollow glass with a little hole on the top of like form, of any convenient bigness or diameter according as can reasonably be obtained or made, and the same to be set in a frame, and also the Glass to be made with a stalk or shank fitted thereto and so to be put into a socket with a foot or pedestal to stand upright. The stone being called by the name of a Show Stone, and the Glass by the name of a Glass Receptacle, and in practice or action upon Invocation or motion made for spiritual appearance. There shall either be a wax candle on each side thereof, or a Lamp behind the same burning during the time of action set on a table apart fitted and furnished for the purpose. But if appearance hereof aforesaid be moved for, by Invocation out of the Show Stone or Glass Receptacle, or if yet notwithstanding appearance happen to show themselves out of them, yet the sign of their appearance will be very delectable and pleasant though various and amusing the senses to behold as a shining brightness, or sudden flashes or such like similitudes very splendid in show all about or in the place where action is made or appearance moved.

Invocation

When Invocation is made to any of the Celestial powers or dignified Elemental Spirits of light and appearance according is presented and visibly sheweth itself either in the Show Stone or Glass Receptacle, or otherwise out of them, then view the same very well and also take notice of its corporature, physiognomy or features of the face, vestures or garments, deportment or behaviour, language or whatsoever else may be worthy of note by reason of making a fine distinction between the appearance of good angels or spirits, and others that are evil. And of knowing the same without being deceived; for although evil powers or spirits of darkness may be invoked, moved or called forth to visible appearance, and consulted withal and made use of in such concerns or upon such actions, wherein by nature and office they may be commanded to serve in all such matters, according as thereupon are dependent and as the necessities thereof shall be suitable and requisite. But then Actions with them are different both in time, place and order, and also the manner of operation which by them are diversely and severally elsewhere, hereafter inserted and showed forth in its proper place. Therefore do the Magick philosophers give this caution, saying—Beware that one Action, operation or secret in this Art be not mixed with another.

Action Apart

But let all Celestial, Elemental and Infernal actions, operations and Invocations be used and kept apart or separate, according to the method and manner, as are in particular ascribed and properly referred unto each of them. Now, then, observe that the appearance of Celestial and benevolent Angels and other dignified Elemental spirits or powers of light are to be thus known or distinguished from those that are infernal or evil powers or spirits of darkness. The good Angels or dignified powers of light as aforesaid, are in countenance very fair, beautiful, affable and youthful, smiling, amiable and usually of flaxenish or gold coloured hair, and in behaviour or gesture very courteous and friendly, in speech very gentle, mild, grave, eloquent, using no vain, idle or superfluous language or discourse. In their corporature very handsome, straight, comely, well favoured and in every limb most exactly formal and well composed; their motions sometimes to be plainly perceived, sometimes swift and sometimes imperceptible, both in their appearance, continuance and departure; and their garments and vestures of what fashion, form or colour soever thereof, are likewise very fair and beautiful or orient, and if it be of many colours or strange fashion, yet they are also very splendid, rare and lovely to behold, and in short, they are Celestially glorified in all their appearances, as they are in countenance and corporature most commonly beautiful, amiable and well composed without any of the least deformity either of hairiness in the face or body, or a swarthy complexion or any crookedness or either any ill shaped member of the body, so also are their garments or vestures without spot or blemish, either of being ragged or torn or stained or anywise to be seemingly dirty or daubed with any filthy, greasy or nasty soil, and always embrace the word Mercy.

Appearance

When the appearance of any Celestial Angels or Angelic powers of light or dignified Elemental Spirits are visibly showed forth and by good testimony or diligent observation well known to be so, then with due reverence given, thereto may be said as followeth.

Receive thus

Welcome be the light of the highest, and welcome be the Messengers of Divine Grace and Mercy, unto us, the true Servants and Worshippers of the same your God, whose Name be Glorified both now and for ever. Amen.

Good or Evil

And if the Appearance be of good, then it will stay, but if not it will immediately vanish or flow hastily away at the rehearsal of the word Mercy. But if any evil power shall appear in the place or stead of that which is good, and impudently withstand any opposition, then vanquish it as in this case. Evil spirits are to be dealt withal, in manner and form as hereafter is inserted in its place.

By reason these powers or spirits who are by nature evil and so are contrary to those by nature good, may not be dealt withal in those actions or operations. Nor those powers of light by nature good, to be moved in reference to what otherwise properly appertaineth or belongeth by nature and office to the evil powers or spirits of darkness, more than as for their assistance and so accordingly for deliverance from any violent surprises, assaults or illusions or other infernal temptations or envious attempts.

Expected Appearance

Now then, if by these Directions the expected Appearance is understood and found to be Celestial and of good, or to be dignified Elemental Spirits or powers of light and so likewise of good, as accordingly was Invoked, moved, or called forth to visible appearance, say thus—

Demand

Are ye the same whom we have moved and called forth to visible appearance here before us at this time by the name N or what else are ye and of what Order amongst blessed Angels or otherwise known or called by any mortal man, if you be of Celestial or Elemental verity and so of Charity, you cannot mislike or deny these our sayings.

Answer

Then if it maketh any Answer as peradventure it will, then make Reply according as the nature of your discourse requireth, but if it make no answer, then repeat the words aforesaid—Are ye the same, etc.

Then it will show forth or tell its name or office, the which when it is known by hearing, then it will speak or otherwise show forth. Say then as followeth.

Who it is

If you be N as you say, in the name of Jesus say, that all wicked Angels are justly condemned, and that by the mercy of God in the merits of Christ, Mankind Elect is to be saved.

Answer made, or be gone

Whereunto it will then return a satisfactory Answer or else it will depart or be gone away. Then if the Appearance be good (as may be known by the Answer) and the Reasons thereof that was made or given to the aforesaid proposition. Say as followeth.

Speak to the Appearance

O ye Servants or Messengers of Divine Grace or Mercy, and Celestial Angels or Angelic powers of light or dignified Elemental Spirits and Mediums of benevolence to Mankind, Servants of God. You, both now at this time and always, are and shall be unto us truly and sincerely welcome. Humbly desiring you to be friendly unto us, and to do for us in whatsoever it shall please God, to give by your Order and office to us for the better knowledge and benefit of mankind living on Earth, and make us partakers of true science and sapience in the undefiled and secret wisdom of your creation.

Answer Made

And if any Answer shall be made hereunto or any discourse from hence should arise or proceed hereupon, then both wisdom and reason must be the principal conduct in the managing thereof. But if there be silence and that no discourse arise from hence, then begin to make humble Request for Answer to such desires and proposals as in a certain writing is contained which ought to be in readiness with you, and then will the efforts of all things be undoubtedly and with good success determined.

Intrusion

The signs of Intrusion or appearance of evil when action or Invocation is otherwise made for moving or calling forth Celestial Angels or Intelligences or their dignified powers or Elemental spirits of light, are not apparent or visible to be any ways discernable more than the shapes, forms, gestures, and other like principles in appearance quite contrary in behaviour, language, clothing or vestures to those above related and to be observed of the good Angels. Neither are they herein otherwise to be judged of them, than as Intruders, Tempters and Illuders on purpose if possible to deceive and also destroy the perseverance and hopes of obtaining any benefit by Celestial and good Mediums, by reason that they are degraded and deprived of power to send or show forth any foregoing signs of their Appearance. In these are such superior actions Invoking or moving only Celestial or dignified Elemental powers and to visible appearances herein no ways to have further notice than to be vanquished and sent away, as before hath been said.

Observe then that the Corporature, forms and shapes of evil powers or spirits of darkness in their appearance by forcible Intrusions of this kind are easily to be discovered from the good powers and spirits of light as now shall be declared as followeth.

Of Evil Powers

Evil Powers or spirits of Darkness are ugly, ill favoured and beastly in shape and appearance, wherein observe if they appear in upright or human stature, then either body, face or covering are quite contrary to the other before specified of good. For although an Evil or Infernal Spirit may appear in the likeness of an Angel of light, especially in the time and place when good Angels or Spirits of light are Invoked, moved or called forth forming themselves very nearly, so even almost unperceived to the sight and apprehension except ingeniously discovered by curious observation and clearly may be discerned quickly by their raggedness, uncleanness of their garments and differences of their countenance in beauty and features and other decent composures of body, language and behaviour, and the corporeal difference of the limbs or bestial similitudes who in times do usually and suddenly make their appearance, and as readily show forth strange motions, gestures and speakings, unusual, blasphemous, ridiculous or different languages, altogether dissonant and contrary and very unlike both in matter and manner to that of the Celestial Angels and Elemental powers and other dignified spirits of light, which also may be soon discovered by the diligence of a sober and curious speculator. Which notable Intrusions they make on this action properly to destroy and if possible overthrow the reason, hope and Judgment of the Invocation, and by great errors, and other ignorant mistakes not only to deceive and confound the more solid and genuine knowledge and capacity of man labouring herein, but also to distract the senses, and thereby lead the understanding into a meander and therein to weary and tire us with verity of doubt, and desperation not knowing how to unravel this Gordian Knot or to be satisfied or delivered from the hopeless pilgrimage, but by the hope of Icarian wings.

From hence it may be understood that evil powers and spirits of darkness sooner appear as impudent Intruders in the time of good action, and in place where Invocation is made, for the moving and calling forth of any Good Angels or dignified Elemental powers or spirits of light to visible appearance, than at any other time or place. When as unto themselves they shall be indifferently by order, office and name Invoked, moved and called forth to visible appearance, for such is their assistance, as by nature and office wherein they are accordingly serviceable and suitable to the occasion wherein they were commanded. Therefore, in such actions, methods, form or observations as are to be only referred unto these evil powers or spirits of darkness. These actions we say are differently set apart and to be distinguished both in time, place, order and method, form and observation aforesaid, and so they may be moved and called forth, commanded and constrained, and accordingly so dealt withal and used as the present action shall require, and the discretion of the Invocant shall find agreeable to their nature and office. So then here it is observable, the Evil spirits may be invoked and dealt with differently and apart by themselves accordingly as aforesaid, but not in such place or at such time as when action or motion is made for the appearance of any Celestial or other dignified powers or Spirits of light and other Elemental powers or different spirits by nature good as well as evil and other wandering spirits non-resident in orders certain of like nature, etc., may be constrained and commanded by invocation to service and obedience, comparatively as vile slaves, accordingly as elsewhere in a particular treatise and Invocation properly thereto referred with several appurtenant rules and observations inserted therein as amply and at large showed forth. But Celestial Angels and other dignified Elemental powers and spirits of light by nature and office wholly benevolent and good, may not be commanded nor constrained by any Invocation. They are only to be moved and called forth by humble entreaties thereby acquiring favour and friendship.

When Wicked Intruders

Now then, if at any time or place where actions or motion are made, and humbly entreated, earnestly besought for the appearance of any Celestial Angel or dignified Elemental power or other spirit of light, and wicked Intruders shall impudently insinuate and thrust themselves in place and would enforce credulity into the Speculator. And that it shall be plainly discovered, then shall the Magical Sophy dismiss, discharge and send away and banish them from hence after this manner.

To Banish the Evil Spirits

The Vengeance of God is a two-edged sword cutting rebellious and wicked spirits of darkness and all other usurping powers in pieces. The hand of God is like a strong Oak, which when it falleth it breaketh in pieces many shrubs. The light of his eye expelleth darkness, and the sweetness of his mouth keepeth from corruption.

Blessed are all those to whom he showeth mercy and preserveth from temptation, and illusion of wicked Intruders, defending them by his mighty power under the Covert of Divine Grace, notwithstanding his humble servants to be overcome or overthrown by any infernal assaults. Now, therefore, because you have come hither and entered without license, seeking to entrap and ensnare us, and secretly conspired by these your subtilties to deceive and destroy us and our hopes, in the true meaning of these our sober, innocent, honourable and Celestial Actions and operations. We do in the great and mighty name and by the power of the most High God, triumph imperially over you, and by the virtue, force and efficacy thereof, be you and your powers vanquished, overthrown and utterly defaced and behold by virtue of that Celestial power by divine grace given to us and wherewith we are potently dignified, and as heirs of God's promise through faith continuing inherent in us. We do hereby wholly deface and overthrow you and ye are totally vanquished. Therefore, we say, depart and immediately be gone from hence in peace, without noise, turbulence, injury, harm, violence or other damage whatsoever. And as you are of darkness and the places of darkness, and have without any charge or permission enviously intruded, seeking thereby to ensnare, deceive and overwhelm us. The Divine Judgement and vengeance of the Most High God for this your wicked and malicious conspiracy and insinuation be your deserved reward, and as it was delivered to you, so take it with you, that the malice that you have shown us may heap up your own destruction. Be ye, therefore, dismissed and immediately we say, Depart hence unto your Orders and there to continue in the bonds of Confinement during the divine pleasure of the Highest.

If they are yet obstinate and impudent and will not depart, but rather will withstand the commands of the Magician, let him say as followeth.

To Vanquish

Do you thus impudently withstand and obstinately refuse to depart from our presence and from this place, and perniciously attempt yet further against us. IN THE NAME OF JESUS we say, Depart ye wicked seducers, and be ye immediately gone away from hence, and be it unto you according to the word of God, which judgeth righteously from evil unto worse, from worse unto confusion, from confusion to desperation, from desperation unto damnation, from damnation unto eternal death. Depart, therefore, we say unto the last Cry, and remain with the Prince of Darkness in punishment justly due as a fit reward unto your wicked malicious deservings. And the God of Mercy, graciously deliver us from you. Jehovah. Jehovah, Schah.

And if no Celestial Angels or other dignified spirits of light appear in place to vanquish and send away or seal up any wicked or Infernal Spirits or spirits of darkness when Appearance is present as notorious Intruders in the time and place when Celestial or Elemental Actions with dignified powers of Light are in agitation and operation.

Rules to be Observed

Then let the discreet Magician with prudent passion have diligent regard to himself and consult the foregoing Rules according to respective and serious observation. Who then by the Office of himself will undoubtedly not only contract the sight and friendship of the Celestial Angels and also dignified Elemental and other benevolent spirits of light, to his relief and comfort, and to vanquish and overcome all evil spirits or powers of darkness. But also he shall have power to command, call forth and constrain all sublunary spirits and powers of all natures, orders and offices, both good and evil, light and darkness, or otherwise relating thereunto and bring them to such obedience, as according to their several and respective natures and office they may be so commanded and constrained to serve and obey.

A Second Introduction

When Invocation and Replication thereunto is amply made according to time, method, and order, and the Celestial Angel or Intelligence thereby moved doth appear, or any other Angel or Intelligence of the same Hierarchy, then mark and observe well the manner, shape, form, corporature, gesture, vestments and foregoing sign thereof, and if in all symbolical likelihood and probable symptoms the Apparition seemeth to be no less, or otherwise conjectured than what is from hence to be expected. Although that very Intelligence that was moved and called forth by name doth not appear, by reason it is of the superior order of the Hierarchy who are not always sent nor usually go forth neither are moved to visible appearance, but if especial grace and divine pleasure more especially unto choice and peculiar vessels of honour accordingly appointed immediately by the Holy Ghost to fulfil the Commands of the Highest, but yet some one or other or more of the Celestial powers of the same order as aforesaid, more inferior in degree, may be moved hereby to descend and appear at the earnest request of the Sophic Invocant, and perform whatsoever shall be requested according to its nature and office.

It cannot be unknown to any discreet Magician, that whensoever any good Angel or Celestial Intelligence is moved or called forth to visible experience, but also that evil spirits and infernal powers of darkness are immediately ready to encroach and appear in the room instead of the good Angels. Therefore, it behoveth to be very careful and greatly observing thereof, both the method and manner how to know and rightly to distinguish the appearance of the good angels or spirits from those that are evil, and how to deal with either of them. That is to say, how to receive good angels in their appearance and how to vanquish and banish Evil Spirits when they intrude and enter into place and presence, to deceive and overwhelm us. We have sufficiently and at large inserted and shown forth in our Directory, therefore, we shall in this place only show forth a method of our greeting the Apparition of any Celestial Angel or dignified power of light, and when by all the prescribed rules given, that apparition is truly known to be Celestial and of good, then humbly receive it with ample benevolence, saying as followeth.

To Receive a good Appearance

Welcome to the light of the Highest, and welcome to the Messengers of Divine Grace and mercy unto us, the true servants and worshippers of the same your God, whose name be glorified both now and for evermore.

When known to be Good

If the Appearance is perfectly known and understood, and by all the signs and tokens perfectly known to be Celestial or Angelical powers of light, then with due reverent observance say as followeth.

Receiving Good Angels

O you Servants or Messengers of divine grace and mercy and Celestial Angels, or Intelligences, powers of light, or dignified Elemental Spirits and Mediums of benevolence to mankind, Servants of God, you, both now at this time and always, are and shall be unto us truly and sincerely welcome. Humbly desiring you also to be friendly and do for us in whatsoever it shall please God to give by your Order and Office unto you for the better knowledge and benefit of mankind living here upon Earth, and to make us partakers of true sapience and science in the undefiled and sincere sacred wisdom of your Creation.

Answer

And if any Answer shall be made thereunto, or any discourses from hence should arise or proceed thereupon, then both wisdom and reason must be the principal conduct in the management thereof, but if there be silence that no discourse ariseth from hence, then begin to make humble request for answer to your desires and proposals, then will the effects of all things undoubted and with good success be determined.

Fear or Mistrust

But if there should any fear, doubt or just cause of jealousy be had or made of any expected apparition of any Angel or Intelligence of the Celestial Orders or other Elemental power of light, celestially dignified or otherwise, if at any time there should appear a spirit which you do think is not of good, or of the Order you moved for, or have any mistrust of it, the which you may easily perceive by form and also by its answering you in your question, then you may say to it as followeth.

To Know who it is "In the name of JESUS who art thou?" Then perhaps it will say, "I am the Servant of God." Then you may say — "Art thou come from God? Art thou sent from him with good tidings or message?" Then perhaps it will say to you, or some such like words — "What I am he knoweth of whom I bear witness." Then you may ask its name, saying then — "What is your name? Either as it is notified among the blessed Angels or called by of mortal man, if you be of verity and so of charity you cannot mistake my speeches." Then it will tell you its name, or say nothing at all. But if it doth tell you his name, then you may say to it — "If you be in the name of Jesus, say that all wicked Angels are justly condemned, and that by the mercies of God in the merits of Christ, Mankind elect is to be saved." Then it will give you a sufficient answer to satisfy you or else it will be gone from you. And then if it be of good and hath answered your request, then perhaps it will say, "Thus much thou hast required." Then you may say — "I did so for so is his Judgement and Justice against the Impertinent and his mercy to his Elect. Test is Truth. "

Then you may ask your desire.

We thought good to instance thus much for better Information and Instruction, although a full narrative hereof is amply and at large showed forth in the foregoing Directions or Directory, both as to the knowing and receiving of good Angels or Celestial Intelligences or other Elemental Spirits or powers of light Angelically or

Celestially dignified, and for the knowledge vanquishing and driving away of all evil spirits and infernal powers of darkness whensoever any such Apostate shall forcibly intrude or make entrance or appearance instead of Celestial and good Angels or other dignified Elemental powers of light, in the time and place of these actions, purposively to deceive and confound and utterly if possible to destroy the hopes and expectations, comforts and benefits of the sophic Philosophers in their elaborate industry and care and earnest addresses unto the Celestial Angels and blessed Intelligences or dignified Elemental powers or other spiritual Mediums or Messengers of divine light for the true knowledge and finding out the true use of all physical and metaphysical arcanums or secrets in a superior or profound mystery, which cannot otherwise be known or found out but by the divine light and conduct of Angelical Ministry or other Spiritual Revelation and instruction by such mediums of benevolence to Mankind as through the divine grace, mercy and goodness of the highest as are by nature, order and office thereunto preordinately decreed and appointed.

But as touching the insisting any further of this matter we think it needless; since it is more full treated of in the foregoing Directory which we advise to be well understood by a due and serious consideration, before any progress or unadvised proceedings are made herein.

Observe, also, whereas we have severally and particularly mentioned Celestial Angels or blessed Intelligences and Elemental powers of light and other dignified spirits of light who are by nature and office good and also friendly and benevolent unto mankind, and generally inserted them together with material distinction, yet let the grave and sober Magicians take notice that consideration be first had, of what Angel or Intelligence, of what spirit, or of what order and office, he would move or call forth and so in particular to make mention thereof accordingly and not otherwise, whereunto everything ought by order, nature, degree and office, properly to be referred.

We thy most sinful and undutiful Servants, unworthy of the least of thy blessings, yet with an assured confidence of thy heavenly benignities, do in thy holy fear, humbly prostrate ourselves before thy Almighty presence, at the sacred feet of thy fatherly goodness and clemency in all contrition of heart and earnestness of spirit, humbly beseeching thy Omnipotent Majesty to have mercy, pity and compassion upon us, and to pardon all our sins and offences that we have committed against thee, and in thy infinite mercy graciously to dignify us with celestial dignity by the power of thy holy spirit and grant that these, thy glorious ministering Angels or blessed Intelligences, who are said to govern or reside in the nine Orbs, orders or Hierarchies, as they are severally and respectively therein placed and set over.

[The copyist of this manuscript chose to write out these Nine Conjurations as they would be spoken. However, the framework of each Conjurati-on is exactly the same, only the particular constellation of Angelic Name, Hierarchy, Heaven, Number of Orb, Sephirah, and Divine Name are changed with each Conjurati-
 on. I have chosen instead to print out the text once only and list the corresponding names and attributes to be inserted for each Angelic Conjurati-on. Although this may seem a rather clumsy method, I felt it unnecessary to print out nine separate versions of the one formula. Also, this forces those readers intending to use such conjurations to actively hold these correspondences in their consciousness and not merely read these conjurations and prayers off the printed page.—Editor]

THE NINE KEYS

moving or calling forth to visible appearance the Celestial Hierarchies of Angels of the Order of [Hierarchy] whose principal governing Angel or blessed Intelligence bearing rule is [Angel Name] and residing in the [Number of Orb] Orb, Mansion or Sphere called the [Heaven].

THE PRAYER OR INVOCATION

O you great glorious, sacred and Celestial Angel or blessed Intelligence who is called [Angel Name] and all other the Celestial Angels, Servants of the Most High Omnipotent, Incomprehensible, Immense, Eternal God of Hosts, the only Creator of Heaven and Earth and of all things whatsoever, both Celestial, Elemental, Animal, Vegetable, Mineral, and Reptile or Insect, that is contained or comprehended therein and serving as ministering Angels present always before him at his most high superior and divine commands and appointments in the Order or Hierarchy of Angels called [Hierarchy] and residing in the [Number of Orb] Heaven and bearing office, rule and power in the Mansion, Orb or Sphere called the [Heaven].

counsel, comfort, benefit and assistance of his servants the Sons of men living on Earth to inspire, instruct and guide them into the knowledge and way of truth, and all true physical and Metaphysical Sciences, either immediately from the Holy Ghost unto more choice vessels of honour or mediately by Divine Grace and permission from yourself or selves unto the sons of men, servants of God dwelling upon Earth, whensoever you shall be of them Invoked and called forth and thereby moved to descend and appear unto them, and by all aforesaid, and by the great signal virtue, power, dignity, excellency and efficacy thereof, both immediately primary and mediately secondary be respective Mediums of divine light, grace and mercy as ordinately dependant, and so thereby flowing and accordingly diffusing by several emanations proper as symbolizing power and virtue from the Superior to the Inferior.

We do humbly beseech, earnestly request and incessantly entreat you, O you magnific, benevolent and sacred Angel or blessed Intelligence [Angel Name] who is said to be the principal Celestial Angel or blessed intelligence governing in the [Number of Orb] Heaven, Orb or Sphere called [Heaven] together with all others, the benevolent sacred and Celestial Angels or Intelligences, Ministers of truth and true science and sapience, both celestial and terrestrial, Messengers spiritual of light and Mediums of divine grace located, bearing rule, and residing in the Order and Hierarchy and Office called [Hierarchy] in the [Number of Orb] Heaven, Orb or Sphere of [Heaven] from the Superior to the Inferior, in general and particular, jointly and severally, every and each one by office and degree respectively, and to gird up and gather your selves together, and some one or more of you as it shall please God and by divine permission to move and descend from your Celestial mansion or place of residence into this Crystal Stone or Glass Receiver and therein to appear visibly unto us.

And we do also entreat you would be favourably pleased in and through the same to transmit your true Angelical and real presence plainly unto the sight of our eyes, and your voice unto our ears, that we may visibly see you and audibly hear you speak unto us, or otherwise to appear out of the same, as it shall please God and you his servants of divine grace and Messengers of mercy, seemeth most meet, proper, pertinent or best befitting this action, appearance, occasion or matter, and to show plainly and visibly unto us a foregoing sign or test of your appearance and we also yet further humbly beseech you, earnest entreat, undeniably request and move you, O you benevolent and glorious Angel and blessed Intelligence [Angel Name] together with all others, the sacred Celestial Angels or Intelligences from the Superior to the Inferior in power and Office, residing in the [Number of Orb] Orb or Sphere, called the [Heaven] Heaven, and serving the divine decrees, commands and appointments of the highest in the office and order of [Hierarchy] in, through and by this divine Signal Majesty and powerful Name of your God [Divine Name], Numeral Attribute [Sephira], and the great efficacy, virtue, excellency, power, prevalency and superiority thereof, to give up and gather your selves together every and each one jointly and by itself respectively and severally to move and descend from your Celestial Mansion or place of residence, apparently visible to the sight of our eyes in this Crystal Stone or Glass Receiver standing here before us as being set for this purpose, or otherwise unto us and before us out of the same, as it shall please God and you his servants of divine grace, light and mercy, seemeth best befitting this action, and also to show forth a preceding sign of your appearance and to be friendly unto us, and by your Angelical benevolence, Celestial Illumination, favourable assistance, familiar society, mutual correspondency, verbal converse, continual community and sacred instructions, both now at this time present and at all other times, to inform and rightly direct our more weak, depraved, stupid and ignorant Intellect, Judgment and understandings, and to conduct us by your Angelical Instincts and Archidoctions into the luminous pathway of truth, leading and giving entrance into the ports, cities and palaces of wisdom and true sapience, and to make us partakers of undefiled knowledge, without whose angelical guide, Spiritual Conduct, blessed assistance and benevolent advertisement, it is very difficult if not impossible for us or any mortal on Earth, to find or obtain or to be esteemed worthy of entrance into with testimony.

THE SEAL OF METHRATTON AND THE EXPLANATION

Eheia, the name of the Divine Essence. His Idea is called Kether, signifies a Crown or Diadem, hath his influence by the Order of Seraphim, or as the Hebrews call them Hayioth Hacadesch, i.e. Creatures of Holiness, and then by the Primum Mobile, whose particular Intelligence is called Methratton, that is the Prince of Faces, whose duty it is to bring others to the face of the Prince. And by him the Lord spake to Moses.

THE SEAL OF RAZIEL AND THE EXPLANATION

Iod Tetragrammaton signifieth the Divinity full of Ideas. His numeral attribute Hochma, that is Wisdom, the first begotten, and is attributed to the Son and hath his influence by the Order of Cherubim, or that the Hebrews call Orphanim, that is forms or Wheels, and from thence into the starry firmament or Heaven where he fabricateth so many figures as he hath Ideas in himself, and distinguisheth the very Chaos of the Creatures by particular Intelligence called Raziel, who was the ruler of Adam.

THE SEAL OF CASSIEL AND THE EXPLANATION

Tetragrammaton Elohim, his numeral attribute or Idea is Bina, viz., Providence and understanding attributed to the Holy Spirit, hath influence by the Order of Thrones, which the Hebrews call Great Angels or Aralim, mighty and strong, and from thence by the Sphere of Saturn administreth form to the unsettled matter, whose particular Intelligence is Zazel, or Zaphkiel the ruler of Noah, and another Intelligence named Iophiel, the Ruler of Sem, and these are three supreme and high Ideas, as it were seats of the Divine persons by whose commands all things are made but are executed by the other seven upon Earth, which are therefore called the Divine Ideas framing.

THE SEAL OF SACHIEL AND THE EXPLANATION

El, the strong powerful Name of God, his Idea or numeral attribute Hesed which is Clemency or goodness, and signifieth Grace, mercy, piety, magnificence, the sceptre and the right hand, and hath his influence by the Order of Dominations, which the Hebrews call Hasmalim, and so through the Sphere of Jupiter, fashioning the Images of bodies bestowing Clemency and pacifying Justice on all. His particular Intelligence is Sachiel the ruler of Abraham.

THE SEAL OF SAMAEEL AND THE EXPLANATION

Elohim Gibor, i.e. the Mighty God punishing the wicked. His idea or numeral attribute is called Geburah, that is power, gravity, fortitude, security, Judgement, punishing by slaughter and war, and it is applied to the tribunal of God, the Girdle, the Sword, and the Left Hand of God, it is also called Pachai which is fear, and hath his influence through the order of Powers, which the Hebrews call Seraphim, and these through the sphere of Mars illuminate the Rosy Crucians, to whom belong fortitude and prudence. It draweth forth the Elements, and his particular Intelligence is Camael the ruler of Samson.

THE SEAL OF MICHAEL AND THE EXPLANATION

Eloha, Tree of Life is his Idea, Tiphereth his Sephiroth or numeral attribute, it signifieth apparel, beauty, glory, pleasure, hath his influence through the Order of Virtues, which the Hebrews call Malachim, that is Angels into the Sphere of the Sun giving brightness and life unto it, and from thence producing metals. His particular Intelligence is Michael, who was the ruler of Isaac, Raphael the ruler of Toby the Younger and the Angel Piel ruler of Jacob.

Now for to receive this from the operation of the Sun, make an Image in the hour of the Sun, Leo then ascending and the Sun in it. The figure is a King crowned, sitting in a chair, having a Raven on his hand. It must be cast in Gold, and then the virtue is brought down by Verchiel, the spirit that instantly will rest upon it. This spirit is strong, fair coloured like a temperate and well proportioned man, choleric, having a voice barren. By this spirit, young Toby spake to Raphael and it aided him to fetch his father's Gold and also bound the evil spirit Asmodaeus.

THE SEAL OF ANAEL AND THE EXPLANATION

Adonai Sabaoth or Tetragrammaton Sabaoth, that is the God of Hosts, and his Idea is Nezah, that is, Triumph and Victory. It signifieth the Eternity and Justice of a revenging God. He hath his influence through the Order of Principalities, whom the Hebrews call Elohim, that is the Lords into the Sphere of Venus, gives zeal and love of righteousness, and produceth vegetables. His Intelligence is Anael, and the Angel Cerviel, the ruler of David.

THE SEAL OF RAPHAEL AND THE EXPLANATION

Elohim Sabaoth signifieth the God of Hosts, not of war and Justice for his name signifieth both, and precedeth his army. His numeral attribute Idea or Sephiroth is Hod which is interpreted both praise, confession, honour and famousness. It hath influence through the Order of the Archangels which the Hebrews call Ben Elohim, that is the Sons of God, into the sphere of Mercury and gives eligancy and constancy of speech and produceth living creatures. His Idea is Michael who was the ruler of Solomon. His Intelligence is Raphael, the ruler of Tobias. He giveth clemency, grace, mercy, piety, magnificence, eligancy, wisdom, virtue, industry, faith, religion, royalty, gravity of speech, honesty and acuteness of wit.

The ancient Magicians made an Image hollow or Telesme of Quicksilver, with the figure of a handsome young man bearded on it, then the Genius will speak with a barren voice yet very audible. Sometimes Derachiel, or Ambiel or Gabriel will descend upon the Telesme. These Genii are strong, fair coloured, with a human voice. These were the rulers of Solomon, are exceeding loving and will often stir you up to call the God that made all the World, and to pray to him and his son Jesus Christ that died on the Cross for our Redemption. These Genii help the memory, cure all distempers of the brain, Melancholy, they teach the causes of distempers of heat and cold, and finally teach all things you can name or think on.

THE SEAL OF GABRIEL AND THE EXPLANATION

The Ninth Name of God falls upon the seventh planet. It is called Sadai, that is, Omnipotence, satisfying all, and Elhai, which is the living God. His numerical attribute or Sephiroth is Iesod, that is, Foundation, and signifieth a good understanding, a Covenant, Redemption and rest, and hath influence through the Order of Angels into the sphere of the Moon, causing the increase and decrease of all things, and taketh care of the Ideas of the Earth, of the Rules of the 12 divisions, and of their Images and Figures, and of the Genii or keepers of men and distributeth them. His Intelligence is Gabriel who was the keeper of Joseph, Joshua and Daniel.

In the hour of the Moon on a Monday, Magicians raise the first face of Cancer, the Moon in the Ascendant or in her Exaltation Taurus, the figure they then melted in Silver, was a man leaning on a staff, having a bird on his head and a flourishing tree before him; upon which descends the Angel Seheliel, and he causeth increase of gain, and is good against weariness. The second figure they made the Moon ascending in that part of Cancer, was a woman cornuted, riding on a bull. And in the third part they made a figure riding upon a Dragon with seven heads, or a Crab, and in her right hand a dart, in her left a looking glass clothed or covered with white or green and having on her head two serpents with horns twined together, and to each arm a serpent twined about, and at each foot also. And then they Invoked the Angel Muriel, which is the chiefest of the Deities, the first of the Goddesses, the Queen of Angels, the Mistress of the Elements whom the stars answer when the Moon with her seasons returns. Elements serve her, at whose nod the Lightnings breathe forth, seeds bud, plants increase, the initial parent of fruit.

She is the satellite of the Moon, restraining the various passions of the Stars, dispensing various lights by the circuits of the Sun: the Lady of great beauty, the Mistress of rain and water, the giver of Justice, the Nurse of mankind, the governor of all states; kind, merciful, protecting men by sea and land, mitigating all tempests of fortune, and dispensing with fate, nourishing all things growing on Earth, wandering and shining in the tops of high woods and groves, beholding the playing of Fairies, restraining the rage of Goblins, shutting the openings of earth and dispensing the light of the heaven, the wholesome rivers of the sea, the deplored silence of the infernal gods, by its motion ruling the world, and treading Hell under her feet; of whose Majesty the birds hasting in the air are afraid, the wild beasts straying in the mountains, serpents lie hid in the ground, fishes swimming in the sea. She cureth diseases phlegmatic, catarrhs, dropsy, gout and fluxes of the stomach for want of digestion.

The Olympian Spirits

To conclude Dr. Rudd's Doctrine of the Nine Hierarchies of Angels and the better to understand him, that although the glorious Methratton and Raziel may be invocated for some great signal and weighty matters to prevent ruin of states and kingdoms and persons in great authority, yet it is the opinion of Dr. Dee and Dr. Rudd, and Iamblichus that ancient magician, that it is rarely practiced since the Olympic powers are sufficient to be invocated and advised with.

For there are seven different Governments of the spirits of Olympus, by whom God hath appointed the whole frame and Universe of this world to be governed and their visible stars are Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, the Sun, Venus, Mercury and the Moon.

Every Olympic Power rules 490 years.

In the beginning of their simplex Anomaly in the 60 years before the Nativity of Christ was the administration of Bethor, and it lasted until the year of Christ 430, to whom succeeded Phaleg until the 920th year. Then began Och and continued until the year 1410 and thenceforth Haggith ruleth until the year 1900.

THE FIRST OLYMPIC SPIRIT SATURN — ARATRON

Saturn, who is called Aratron, ruleth visible provinces 49. He appeareth in the first hour on Saturday and very truly giveth answers concerning the provinces and provincials, and hath in his power, those things ascribed to the power of Saturn. His Seal is above — the Talitsman, Seal or Character. The Chaldaic word Tsilmonia comes from the Hebrew צֶלֶם Tselem, which signifies an Image and the Arabic word Talitsman signifies the same.

The Telesmatical Images of Saturn and Zazel, they are made for the most part with tall lean and slender bodies, with an angry countenance having four faces, one in the hinder part of the head, one on the forepart of the head, and on each side nosed or beaked. There likewise appeareth a face on each knee, of a black shining colour. Their motion is the moving of the winds, with a kind of Earthquake. Their sign is white earth, whiter than snow.

The forms peculiar to the Spirits of Saturn, they are called particular forms, they arise from Capricorn and Aquarius called by magicians, Cambiel and Anael, and their Geomantic Figures Tristitia and Carcer.

He hath under him 42 Kings, 35 Princes, 28 Dukes, 21 Councillors, 14 Ministers, 7 Messengers, and commandeth 29,000 Legions of spirits.

The Telesmes of Jupiter and Hismael

The Images of Jupiter they make with a body sanguine and choleric, of a middle stature with a horrible fearful motion but with a mild countenance; a gentle speech, and of the colour of Iron; the motion of them is flashings of lightning and thunder; their sign is, they say, there will appear men about the place where action is performed who should seem to be devoured of Lions.

MAGIC / SYMBOLISM
HERMETIC PHILOSOPHY

A TREATISE ON ANGEL MAGIC

Edited by Adam McLean

This volume is an exact and complete transcription of a late 17th century compendium of Western esoteric ideas on Angel Magic. An important occult manuscript in the British Library, Harley 6482 includes sections on the Schemhamphoras, the hierarchies of fallen angels, the Images of the Mansions of the Moon, the Nature Spirits, and John Dee's Enochian system of Angel conjuration, and concludes with Dr. Rudd's Treatise on the Nine Hierarchies of Angels and their conjuration to visible appearance. It is thus an outstandingly complete sourcework on Angel conjuration, correspondences and symbolism, and will be of great value to both scholars and occultists for assessing the broad spectrum of ideas present in Medieval and Renaissance Angel Magic. The book is highly illustrated with explanatory charts and diagrams.

Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourceworks #15

Series Editor: Adam McLean

The Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourceworks series is a long term publishing project which aims to make available, in a uniform series, some of the most important texts of the Hermetic tradition, which have previously been unavailable except in special collections and libraries. The cream of Hermetic material is included in this series, drawing from texts on occult and magical symbolism, and important alchemical, Rosicrucian, mystical and allegorical material of the 16th and early 17th centuries. These are not merely reprints of early books, but new editions, with the original texts translated from Latin or German, and include extensive commentary and historical notes.

ENOCHIAN MAGIC for BEGINNERS

The Original System of Angel Magic

Donald Tyson

Open the Gates of Understanding

Begin with a clear and comprehensive overview of the entire system of Enochian magic—not just another rehash of previously published material. Enochian Magic for Beginners presents the authentic system of angelic magic taught to Dee and Kelley in its natural order, and places these teachings in their historical context. Drawing upon such obscure and hard-to-find sources as Dee's Heptarchia Mystica, Liber Scientiae Auxillii et Victoriae and others, Donald Tyson has painstakingly reconstructed the most accurate and accessible version of Enochian magic published to date.

Here are all the essential parts of the original system of Enochian magic, as it was delivered to John Dee—completely restored and corrected. All of the sigils, seals, and other magical symbols have been carefully re-drawn based upon photographs of Dr. Dee's original drawings and various plates in Causabon's True and Faithful Relation. Everything you need to become a practitioner of Enochian magic—or to learn what it's all about—is provided in an easy-to-use format, in simple language.

About the Author

Donald Tyson resides in Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada. Early in life he was drawn to science by an intense fascination with astronomy, building a telescope by hand when he was twelve. He began university seeking a science degree, but became disillusioned with the aridity and futility of a mechanistic view of the universe and shifted his major to English literature. After graduating with honors he has pursued a writing career.

Now he devotes his life to the attainment of a complete gnosis of the art of magic in theory and practice. His purpose is to formulate an accessible system of personal training composed of East and West, past and present, that will help the individual discover the reason for one's existence and a way to fulfill it.

Legacy of the Angels

THE ORIGINAL ENOCHIAN MAGIC

This book contains the complete and original system of Enochian magic. It was transmitted to the Elizabethan sage Dr. John Dee through his seer the alchemist Edward Kelley by a group of spiritual beings who presented themselves as the same holy angels who had instructed the patriarch Enoch. Whether they were really angels is a moot point, since they ceased to speak with humankind after Dee and Kelley separated in 1589, but their legacy is without question the most remarkable artifact in the entire history of spirit communication.

It is both a system of theurgy (a method for summoning and commanding angelic beings) and goety (a method for summoning and commanding demons). Although the angels gave Dee strict instructions that he should never use the magic for evoking evil spirits, the names of evil spirits are provided in Enochian magic nonetheless, along with techniques for summoning them. In the following pages I put forth the premise that Enochian magic may have a deeper and darker purpose that was never revealed by the angels to Dee. It is my belief that the angels intended it to serve as a magical trigger for the chaotic transition—generally referred to as the apocalypse—between the present aeon and the next.

ORIGIN OF THE SYSTEM

The practical efficacy and ultimate purpose of this system depends in large measure on its origin. For centuries it was dismissed by scholars as either a conscious fabrication by Kelley to deceive Dee or a device Dee created to conceal a technique of cryptography he used in his political espionage. The evidence is persuasive that Dee was indeed a secret agent working for the English government, and he did possess an extensive knowledge of ciphers. Kelley, for his part, was a rogue who had engaged in numerous criminal activities including forgery, counterfeiting, and black magic before entering Dee's employ as a seer. Yet there is no evidence that Enochian magic was ever used to encode espionage ciphers, nor is it likely that Kelley was intellectually capable of creating so complex and beautiful a system of magic.

Anyone who makes a serious study of Dee's magical diaries is forced to conclude that Enochian magic is a genuine phenomenon of spiritualism. Whatever the true nature of the angels—messengers of God or shadow personalities within the unconscious minds of the two men—they clearly intended the information they transmitted to serve some higher purpose: one which they never explicitly revealed to Dee. On several occasions they told Dee and Kelley that the men had been brought together to act as key agents in a divine plan, and that united they were greater than the sum of their parts. They informed Kelley that his amazing talent as a psychic was a gift they had bestowed upon the alchemist, a gift that would be withdrawn should Kelley ever leave Dee's service.

One thing is beyond question—there exist levels of mystery and power in Enochian magic that no scholar and no ritualist has even begun to exploit. Much of the system, including the complex set of magic squares that makes up Dee's Book of Enoch and the numbering that appears in the hauntingly beautiful poetry of the Enochian Keys, persists as a complete enigma to this day. For centuries Enochian magicians have made use of parts of the system. Other parts remain beyond their reach, just as they were beyond the understanding of Dee and Kelley. The angels reserved to themselves many secrets.

THE DIVISION OF FATE

Enochian magic falls into two parts. This structure was not intentional, but an accident of fate. Originally the angels transmitted the system in bits and pieces that were not in any logical order, but were scrambled together. This may have been the result of the angels' difficulties in dealing with linear time, or it may have been a deliberate way of concealing the magic from casual eyes. Dee was able to sort out some of the confusion in his manuscripts, but after his death his Enochian papers became split into two collections.

The papers that concern the latter half of Enochian magic were published in 1659 by Meric Casaubon. This is the material that is generally known as Enochian magic. It contains the four Watchtowers, the Enochian Keys or Calls, and the vocabulary of the Enochian language. It was this second half of the system that found its way into the magic of the Victorian occult society known as the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. Through the teachings of the Golden Dawn, Enochian magic has spread widely in the English-speaking occult community over the last century.

The papers that address the first half of the Enochian system remained unpublished until modern times. They were available to serious researchers in the original manuscripts by Dee and early handwritten copies by others, but were virtually unknown to the average working ritualist. They deal with the invocation of planetary angels using a system of sigils and magic squares. This early portion of Enochian magic known as the Heptarchia Mystica is still widely regarded as a separate system, more or less unrelated to the magic of the Watchtowers and the Enochian language. This is incorrect, however. Enochian magic is a single, complex entity that can only be understood as a whole.

THE REASONS FOR THIS BOOK

I wrote this book for two reasons. The first purpose was to present the entire spectrum of Enochian magic as an integrated system. Because of its early division into two parts, and because of the sheer complexity of the subject, it has been the tendency of writers to treat single aspects (such as the Watchtowers) in great detail, but to ignore other aspects. This can be disorienting to the novice, who is unable to place the topic under examination into the context of Enochian magic as a whole.

Too often, Enochian magic is presented as something eternally existent. There is no serious attempt to give a detailed history of Dee and Kelley during their partnership, or to show the technical elements revealed by the angels in a wider context. Usually no more than a few pages is devoted to the ritual method by which the communications were received, to what the angels actually said to Dee and Kelley on a personal level, or to the significance of their philosophical teachings. While I have treated the ritual mechanics of Enochian magic with great thoroughness, I have not neglected the larger picture. Those who wish to know what Enochian magic is all about will find their questions answered here, insofar as such questions have an answer.

The second reason I wrote this book was to give, perhaps for the first time, the original system of Enochian magic as revealed by the angels and recorded by John Dee. Most works focus exclusively on the form of Enochian magic that was taught in the order papers of the Golden Dawn, which is not the Enochian magic of Dee and Kelley. Golden Dawn Enochian magic deals almost exclusively with a modified version of the Great Table of the Watchtowers and the Enochian Keys—important elements of the system, but only a small part of the whole. To this essential nut of Enochian material the leaders of the Golden Dawn grafted a complex set of magical associations derived from the general Golden Dawn system of magic. These occult correspondences have nothing whatsoever to do with the original system of Enochian magic revealed by the angels.

When the Enochian material in the papers of the Golden Dawn represented all of the system generally available to the public, there was some rationale for favoring it. But since most of the surviving original Enochian manuscripts have now found their way into print in one form or another, it has become inexcusable to treat the restricted, modified portion of Enochian material used in the Golden Dawn as the whole of Enochian magic. This work is dedicated to illuminating the whole of the original system.

NEW FINDINGS

Some of what I present here will not be found outside my works. It is the result of my intense personal studies of the Enochian system. This includes the reformed ordering of the Watchtowers on the Great Table, the assignment of the Enochian Keys to the subquarters of the Table, the completely rewritten Book of Spirits by which the angels are to be initially contacted, the final version of the Heptagon Stellar (the great seal of the angelic heptarchy), the illustrations showing the flow of elemental currents in the Round House, and much more.

In the course of writing this book I created two new Enochian typefaces, one for Enochian print characters and the other for script or cursive characters. This was necessary since the standard Enochian typeface contains numerous serious and obvious errors. These new Enochian fonts appear in my illustrations of sigils and tables, all of which have been redrawn and corrected after comparing them with multiple sources. It is my belief that my illustration of the Sigillum Aemeth is the most accurate version currently available.

SECRETS OF THE ANGELS

Enochian magic is complex. Aspects of it remain obscure to this day. This situation is made worse by the loss of some of John Dee's manuscripts, and the damage time has done to those that survive. Even if we possessed all of Dee's magical writings in pristine condition, we would not fully understand Enochian magic because the angels did not transmit all the details of its working. Dee did the best he could to make sense out of the communications, but was forced to rely on an incomplete model.

Without question, some of what appears in this book is faulty. On key topics for which there is no complete explanation I have been forced to speculate. These speculations are clearly labeled as my own interpretation of the material, and you should treat all of these personal interpretations as unproven. I have given them because I believe them to be the best available understanding of the material. Other writers would give you nothing for fear that they might be discovered at some later date to have made mistakes, and indeed, I have probably committed errors in my personal interpretation of obscure parts of the Enochian system, but I believe the value of these speculations outweighs their liability.

For example, in redrawing the ensigns of the heptarchical angels I relied mainly on the plate that appears in Meric Casaubon's True and Faithful Relation, which shows the ensigns spread in a circle on top of the Table of Practice. It is my conviction that the ensigns were actually painted on the table (an alternative method of presentation allowed by the angels). Since the artist who made the plate for Casaubon worked from Dee's actual table, which has since vanished from the face of the Earth, I judge his illustration to be the most valuable, even though it conflicts in many details with other versions of the ensigns published by Robert Turner in his book The Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee.

Dee may well have made deliberate modifications to the ensigns when he came to paint them onto the surface of his Table of Practice, and these changes may not have been retroactively made in his manuscript drawings. Nonetheless, I closely referred to the ensigns in Turner's work, and where it seemed likely that the engraver may have committed an error (i.e., mistaking Dee's handwritten "ll" for "u"), I have included these changes in my illustrations of the ensigns.

This process of comparison, judgment, and compromise was followed throughout this book. I believe it has resulted in a high degree of accuracy, but due to the very nature of the Enochian material, complete accuracy is impossible. In many cases we simply do not know what the angels intended—or even what Dee intended—with absolute certainty. Bear this fact in mind when you encounter details in the system that seem to contradict what you have seen elsewhere.

A COMPLETE COMPENDIUM OF ENOCHIAN MAGIC

I wrote this work to orient the novice to Enochian magic and to provide in a logical and accurate form all the key aspects of the original system delivered to Kelley by the angels. However, experienced Enochian magicians will also find a great deal that is of interest, because I have been able to treat familiar parts of the system in fresh and insightful ways. Even though the Great Table of the Watchtowers is the most frequent subject of writers on Enochian magic, its essential nature has never really been examined. Writers get lost in the details of its construction and use, and forget to ask what it actually is.

Enochian magicians should not be misled by the title of this work. It is written for beginners, but it is not a superficial treatment of Enochian magic. It is a comprehensive examination of the full range of original Enochian magic set in the wider context of all of the Enochian communications. I have been able to encapsulate a great deal of useful information in the form of images and tables. My hope is that the work will serve not only as an overview for beginners, but also as a source for working Enochian magicians.

I am deeply indebted to those writers who have published accurate transcriptions of portions of Dee's magical diaries. Noteworthy among them are Robert Turner, Geoffrey James, and, most of all, Meric Casaubon. Without their work and the work of others like them this book would not have been possible. They have my sincere thanks.

CHAPTER ONE

Enochian Magic

THE WISDOM OF ENOCH

Enochian magic is a system of theurgy, or angel magic, psychically conveyed to the Elizabethan alchemist and seer Edward Kelley by a group of spirits that came to be called the Enochian angels. Over the years 1582–1587 the spirits dictated various parts of this magic to Kelley, or presented it in the form of visions while Kelley scried into a crystal ball.

Kelley repeated the words of the spirits and described the visions to his friend and employer, the great mathematician, geographer, and astrologer Dr. John Dee. Dee sat beside Kelley during the scrying sessions with a pen in his hand and papers spread before him. Everything that Kelley said, Dee recorded verbatim. Thanks to Dee's careful method, the communications of the spirits have been preserved with the accuracy of a court transcript.

The angels identified themselves to Kelley as the same angels who had instructed the patriarch Enoch in the angelic language and the wisdom of God. Enoch was the only patriarch of the Old Testament to be elevated into heaven while still alive—at least, this was the interpretation of the Jewish rabbis and Kabbalists of Genesis 5:24: "And Enoch walked with God: and he was not; for God took him." All the other descendants of Adam down to Noah mentioned in the Bible are explicitly said to have died, but not Enoch.

Over the centuries, a wisdom tradition grew up around Enoch. Along with Adam, Noah, Solomon, and a few others, he is said to have been one of those responsible for passing the primal teachings of the angels on to humanity. The apocryphal Book of Enoch arose from this tradition. The key event in this book is a description of how the rebellious angels, lusting after the daughters of men, descended to Earth and taught humankind all the arts and sciences of adornment, magic, and warfare that sow strife throughout the world.

THEURGY AND GOETY

According to the angel Ave, these evil angels were permitted to descend upon the Earth and spread false and destructive teachings because the kings of the Earth had grown arrogant through the use of the wisdom bequeathed to them by Enoch. As a punishment, God sent false and deceiving angels to teach what is presently known as black magic. In this way, God allowed humankind to be the instrument of its own punishment. However, Ave tells Kelley, God has decided to permit the true wisdom of Enoch, as preserved in his heavenly books, once again to be known upon the Earth. Dee and Kelley are to be the instruments of its dissemination.

The Lord appeared unto Enoch, and was merciful unto him, opened his eyes, that he might see and judge the earth, which was unknown unto his Parents, by reason of their fall: for the Lord said, Let us shew unto Enoch, the use of the earth: And lo, Enoch was wise, and full of the spirit of wisdom.

And he sayed unto the Lord, Let there be remembrance of thy mercy, and let those that love thee taste of this after me: O let not thy mercy be forgotten. And the Lord was pleased.

And after 50 days Enoch had written: and this was the Title of his books, let those that fear God, and are worthy read.

But behold, the people waxed wicked, and became unrighteous, and the spirit of the Lord was far off, and gone away from them. So that those that were unworthy began to read. And the Kings of the earth said thus against the Lord, What is it that we cannot do? Or who is he, that can resist us? And the Lord was vexed, and he sent in amongst them an hundred and fifty Lions, and spirits of wickednesse, error, and deceit: and they appeared unto them: For the Lord had put them between those that are wicked, and his good Angels: And they began to counterfeit the doings of God and his power, for they had power given them so to do, so that the memory of Enoch washed away: and the spirits of error began to teach them Doctrines: which from time to time unto this age, and unto this day, hath spread abroad into all parts of the world, and is the skill and cunning of the wicked.

Hereby they speak with the Devils: not because they have power over the Devils, but because they are joyned unto them in the league and Discipline of their own Doctrine.

For behold, as the knowledge of the mystical figures, and the use of their presence is the gift of God delivered to Enoch, and by Enoch his request to the faithfull, that thereby they might have the true use of Gods creatures, & of the earth whereon they dwell: So hath the Devil delivered unto the wicked the signs, and tokens of his error and hatred towards God: whereby they in using them, might consent with their fall: and so become partakers with them of their reward, which is eternal damnation.

These they call Characters: a lamentable thing. For by these, many Souls have perished.

Now hath it pleased God to deliver this Doctrine again out of darknesse: and to fulfill his promise with thee, for the books of Enoch: To whom he sayeth as he said unto Enoch.

Let those that are worthy understand this, by thee, that it may be one witsesse of my promise toward thee.¹

God directly pledges to John Dee, through his messenger the angel Ave and through Dee's scryer Edward Kelley, that the system of magic being revealed to Dee is the genuine wisdom of Enoch by which may be had "the use of the earth." The one hundred and fifty lions, "spirits of wickednesse, errour, and deceit" are the same fallen angels who, in the Book of Enoch, sin with mortal women and teach corrupting sciences to humankind. According to Ave, this false teaching consisted mainly of demonic magic, or goety.

It is common for the proponents of a system of religion, philosophy, or magic to claim that theirs is the only legitimate practice, and that all methods that differ from it are corrupting and false. By slandering other forms of magic the angels hope to elevate their own teachings and give them a greater importance in Dee's eyes.

Kelley, who before his association with Dee had considerable firsthand knowledge of necromancy and other forms of black magic, tells Ave that the wisdom of Enoch seems very like common magic to him, but Ave assures Kelley, "Nay, they all played at this,"² meaning that all forms of magic other than Enochian magic are mere playthings—that Enochian magic is the only true theurgy approved by God and accepted by the angels of heaven.

THE GATES AND THE KEYS

It is important to understand that Enochian magic is solely concerned with the ritual summoning and command of angels and lesser spirits. When speaking about the formal Enochian evocations known as the Calls or Keys, the angel Mapsama tells Dee:

These Calls touch all the parts of the World. The World may be dealt withall, with her parts; Therefore you may do anything. These Calls are the keyes into the Gates and Cities of wisdom. Which Gates are not able to be opened, but with visible apparition.³

The gates to the cities of wisdom are forty-nine in number. However, one of the gates is too holy to be opened, so the actual Keys number forty-eight. The cities of wisdom are spiritual realms inhabited by different hierarchies of angels with distinct functions on the earth. These heavenly cities are represented by forty-nine extremely complex number/letter squares that contain forty-nine rows and forty-nine columns. Taken together, the angels refer to these squares as the Book of Enoch. One of the squares is represented in a plate at the beginning of Meric Casaubon's A True and Faithful Relation. Concerning these magic squares, Nalvage tells Dee:

You have 49 Tables: In those Tables are contained the mystical and holy voices of the Angels: dignified: and in state disglorified and drent in confusion: which pierceth Heaven, and looketh into the Center of the Earth: the very language and speech of Children and Innocents, such as magnifie the name of God, and are pure.⁴

The forty-nine tables do not play a direct part in Enochian magic. They serve as the chaotic ground from which the words of the Keys were drawn letter by tortuous letter during the scrying sessions. Kelley would watch in the crystal as an angel pointed to one cell or another of the relevant table, then call out the position of the cell to Dee, who would then look up the cell in his copy of the table and write down the letter he found there. The Keys were delivered in this way, backwards and one letter at a time.

The occult energies of these tables are embodied collectively in a single letter table with four quadrants called the Great Table. It is a magical schematic diagram of the Enochian universe. Each quadrant on the Great Table is known as a Watchtower. The Keys open the gates to the cities of the angels whose names are written in the Watchtowers and call them forth, along with their numerous servants. Taken together, the forty-eight Keys and the Great Table of the four Watchtowers form the heart of Enochian magic.

THE BOOK OF SILVERED LEAVES

There is another book spoken about by the angels that is undoubtedly connected with the book of magic squares. Dee is directed to construct it with blank leaves in preparation to receive the writing of the angels. They will inscribe the book directly during the initial ritual working that will establish contact with the Enochian hierarchies:

Mapsama: Bind up together, 48 leaves; whose skin shall bear Silver: Whose Perimeter shall be 30 inches: in length, 8; in breadth 7.

Dee: do you require it to be parchment, or paper?

Mapsama: I have said.

Dee: What shall I, then, do, after I have caused 48 leaves to be bound?

Mapsama: The fourteenth day of your rest, even this Table-Cloath, and none other shall be spread for a Banket. Whereunto, you shall invite the Angels of the Lord: In the midst of the Table lay down the book and go forth; make also the doors after you. That the heavens may justify your faith, and you may be comforted. For, man is not worthy to write that shall be written: neither shall there be found many worthy to open that book.⁵

The Book of Spirits is a common feature of medieval angel magic.⁶ It contains the names, sigils, and occasionally images of the spirits who are bound in service to the magician—usually after an involved and intense ritual working that achieves the initial evocation of the spirits.

The spirits write the book themselves, sign it with their marks and signatures, or at the least swear obedience to it. Of course, spirits are not actually capable of writing in the book. This is accomplished by possessing the magician without his or her awareness and using the body of the magician to write or sign the Book of Spirits.

In Dee's case, the angels of the forty-eight spiritual cities that may be opened by the Keys are to be represented by occult symbols that probably contained letter and number combinations. However, we will never know what the Book of Silvered Leaves was intended to contain since Dee's copy, if he ever made it, was not inscribed by the angels and has not survived. These mysterious signs were to be inscribed on silvered parchment by the potent Mother of many of the Enochian angels, a being so exalted she identifies herself only with the title I AM, which is equivalent to the Hebrew name of God, Eheieh. She appears to be the same angel as the Queen of Heaven of Revelation 12:1.

THE ENOCHIAN WORKING

The inscription of Dee's Book of Silvered Leaves was to occur after an eighteen-day period of ritual working during which an original evocation composed by Dee and Kelley was to be spoken on each day. For the first four days of the working, Dee was instructed by Ave to address his evocation only to the names of God; for the following fourteen days Dee should evoke the hierarchies of angels by the specific names of God that rule each:

Four dayes ... must you onely call upon those names of God, or on the God of Hosts, in those names:

And 14 dayes after you shall (in this, or some convenient place) Call the Angels by Petition, and by the name of God, unto the which they are obedient.

The 15 day you shall Cloath your selves, in vestures made of linnen, white: and so have the apparition, use, and practice of the Creatures. For, it is not a labour of years, nor many dayes.⁷

The Creatures that Ave refers to would seem to be the angels of the Thirty Aethers or Aires, who are represented by the last thirty Keys. These keys are really a single call or summons to thirty different angelic zones or spheres called Aethers. Only the names of the Aethers change in the last thirty Keys—they are otherwise identical. For this reason, the nineteenth Key is known as the Key of the Thirty Aethers. The Princes of the Aethers rule over the lesser spirits of the regions or kingdoms of the world. It was these geographical spirits that Dee most wanted to control.

About the robes and the book used during this working, Ave says: "You must never use the Garment after, but that once only, neither the book." Kelley quite reasonably objects: "To what end is the book made then, if it be not to be used after." Dee somewhat testily reproves Kelley: "It is made for to be used that day onely."⁸

There is some ambiguity here about which book is being discussed. Kelley means the book of names and invocations that he and Dee are ordered to create themselves. About this workbook, which I will call Dee's Book of Spirits, Ave tells Dee: "The Book consisteth [1] of Invocation of the names of God, and [2] of the Angels, by the names of God: Their offices are manifest."⁹ This would seem to have a function throughout the eighteen days of the working, and perhaps thereafter. Dee actually created the model for this Book of Spirits invoking the names of God and the angels. It forms Dee's manuscript Liber Scientiae Auxilii et Victoriae Terrestris, which still exists and is kept in the British Library.

The angel Ave probably means the book of blank, silvered leaves that is to be supernaturally inscribed by his Mother. This Book of Silver would be used only on the single day the angels pledged obedience to Dee. The silvering of the leaves suggests that the Mother of the angels is a lunar goddess, and that Enochian magic is lunar in nature. Monday (the day of the Moon) appears to be the Enochian sabbath.¹⁰

ENOCHIAN MAGIC FORBIDDEN TO DEE AND KELLEY

There is no evidence that Dee and Kelley ever conducted this working to initiate the power of the Enochian angels. They were waiting for permission to do so from the angels, but that permission was never granted.

Mapsama: You called for wisdom, God hath opened unto you, his Judgement: He hath delivered unto you the keyes, that you may enter; But be humble. Enter not of presumption, but of permission. Go not in rashly; But be brought in willingly: For, many have ascended, but few have entered. By Sunday you shall have all things that are necessary to be taught; then (as occasion serveth) you may practice at all times. But you being called by God, and to a good purpose.

Dee: How shall we understand this Calling by God?

Mapsama: God stoppeth my mouth, I will answer thee no more.¹¹

It is evident to me from a close study of the Enochian transcripts that the angels intended Dee to have the system of Enochian magic, but never intended to permit him to actually use it. Dee and Kelley served as human instruments through which the angels were able to transmit Enochian magic to the human race. Gabriel tells Dee and Kelley, "But in you two is figured the time to come."¹² The angels assure Dee and Kelley that they will continue to prosper and be secure for as long as they remain together, because they are two parts of a single whole. "The Seer let him see, and look after the doing of him that he seeth; For you are but one body in this work."¹³

Kelley has been granted the gift of second sight solely so that he can assist Dee in receiving Enochian magic.

Shall a dark seller brag or boast of her beauty? because she receiveth light and cleernesse, by a Candle brought into, or shinning into her.

No more canst thou, [E.K.] for the ripennesse of thy wit and understanding is through the presence of us, and our illumination.

But if we depart, thou shalt become a dark seller, and shall think too well of thy self in vain.¹⁴

Elsewhere the angel Uriel, speaking in the voice of God, tells Kelley: "I will make thee a great Seer: Such an one, as shall judge the Circle of things in nature. But heavenly understanding, and spiritual knowledge shall be sealed up from thee in this world."¹⁵ Kelley is regarded by the angels as little more than a psychic telephone through which they may reach the conscious mind of John Dee. The angels barely tolerate his suspicions and verbal abuse. They know that Kelley detests them and considers them to be deceivers.

The angels respect Dee for his great piety and wisdom, but even he will not be permitted to attain the full understanding of Enochian magic. The angel Gabriel tells Dee this, and makes further reference to the necessity of Dee and Kelley remaining together as one organic unit (even to the extent of sharing their wives in common, a future event foreshadowed here):

"Thou shalt never know the mysteries of all things that have been spoken. If you love together, and dwell together, and in one God; Then the self-same God will be merciful unto you: Which bless you, comfort you, and strengthen you unto the end."¹⁶

Dee and Kelley were two halves of a human machine for receiving and recording the mysteries of the angelic communications. Kelley had the ability to perceive the angels and their teachings. Dee had the intelligence to understand and transcribe them accurately, and to correct any errors that occurred during their transmission. Neither man could have generated the system of Enochian magic alone. Each acted as a catalyst to the other.

CHAPTER TWO

John Dee and Edward Kelley

AN UNLIKELY PARTNERSHIP

To understand the origin of Enochian magic, it is necessary to know something about the strange partnership from which it germinated. There has never been a more unlikely pairing of personalities than Dee and Kelley. They were as different as day and night. Yet they shared an irresistible fascination for the forbidden wisdom of the angels.

Dee sought the teaching as an instrument through which he could serve his nation and revolutionize human knowledge. Kelley single-mindedly pursued the secret of alchemical transformation that would give him personal wealth and power. Each man needed the other to make his dream a reality. Although they often disagreed, they remained throughout their years together, and for many years after, genuine friends.

"MY UBIQUITOUS EYES"

John Dee (1527-1608) was the elder of the two men by twenty-eight years. His father, Rowland Dee, a minor and relatively poor nobleman of Welsh descent, worked as a Gentleman Server in the household of King Henry VIII.

This office consisted of supervising the royal kitchens and carving the meat at the King's table. The young Dee was brought up to be proud of his remote blood connection with the ancient Welsh kings.

Early in life Dee showed a precocious talent for mathematics. At age fifteen he became a student at St. John's College at the University of Cambridge. He excelled at scholarship and pursued it with a fanatical zeal, writing: "in the yeares 1543, 1544 and 1545 I was so vehementlie bent to studie that for those yeares I did inviolably keep this order: only to sleep four houres every night; to allow to meate and drink (and some refreshing after) two houres every day; and of the other eighteen houres all (except the time of going to and being at divine service) was spent in my studies and learning."¹

In 1546 he graduated Bachelor of Arts from St. John's College, and later in the same year became one of the original Fellows of Trinity College, newly founded by Henry VIII. Although he earned his Master of Arts degree from Trinity, and subsequently won great acclaim for his studies and lectures at the universities of Louvaine and Paris, there is no evidence that he was ever awarded a doctorate from any university in Europe. The "Doctor" attached to his name may have been an honorary title.

It was during his graduate years at Trinity that he first acquired the label of "sorcerer" that was to follow him throughout his life. For a student production of Aristophanes' play Peace he contrived a mechanical flying beetle that carried one of the actors up into the air. The stage mechanism was so well designed that many in the audience thought Dee had achieved the effect through supernatural means.

When Elizabeth came to the throne in 1559, it was Dee who astrologically chose the date for her coronation.

Dee was later summoned to investigate a waxen witch doll in the image of the Queen found in Lincoln's Inn Fields with a great pin thrust through its heart. Throughout her life, Elizabeth maintained the highest respect and affection for Dee—although this seldom translated into desirable political appointments or lavish gifts.

In part, the Queen's favor was repayment for Dee's loyalty to her during her house arrest under Bloody Mary Tudor. Dee once showed Elizabeth a horoscope he had cast for Queen Mary and compared it unfavorably with Elizabeth's own horoscope. This imprudent act caused him to be denounced as a sorcerer by one of Mary's spies and arrested. He was tried for treason, but was acquitted due to lack of evidence. This shared persecution by Mary bonded him more closely to Elizabeth.

But there was no condescension in Elizabeth's attitude toward Dee, who at the time was widely regarded as the foremost bright young man in England. He was skilled in Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, knowledgeable in medicine, a gifted mathematician, a philosopher, a practical astronomer as well as an astrologer, a historian, and a respected author. He had studied cartography and navigation under Gerhardus Mercator and was responsible for introducing some of the latest scientific instruments into England. During his trips to the Continent while a university student he had garnered great acclaim as a public lecturer.

Precisely what Elizabeth's true relationship with Dee may have entailed is not known for certain, but there is evidence that he acted as an espionage agent for the Queen during his Continental travels. Elizabeth referred to Dee as "My Noble Intelligencer" and "my Ubiquitous Eyes."² It is only coincidence, but a very curious one, that Dee signed his letters to the Queen with the symbols 007.³

Dee also instructed the Queen in arcane matters. Besides teaching her astrology and astronomy, he gave her private lessons in the mysteries of his 1564 work The Hieroglyphic Monad at her own request. After revealing the secret keys of the Monad to Elizabeth, Dee records in his diary her reaction: "Whereupon her Majestie had a little perusion of the same with me, and then in most heroicall and princely wise did comfort and encourage me in my studies philosophical and mathematicall."⁶

Dee acted as her astrological counselor in personal and state affairs, and probably erected protective barriers for her against occult attacks. Elizabeth thought so highly of Dee she defended his reputation against those in her court who criticized him during his absence from England. She privately assured Dee that he should feel free to continue with any magical experiments he chose, regardless of their nature—that there would be no danger of prosecution during her reign.

Dee was among the greatest social and political visionaries of the Elizabethan Age. He encouraged the quest for a Northwest Passage and supplied geographical and navigational resources to such English explorers as Drake and Frobisher. He promoted the concepts of a strong English navy to counter the dominance of Spain and foresaw a globe-spanning British Empire. He delved deeply into the genealogical history of the Tudors to prove that Elizabeth had legal claims to lands in the New World. He promoted the reform of the English calendar. When Elizabeth made no effort to carry forward the proposal he had made to Mary for founding a national library, Dee proceeded to amass his own library. At one stage, this became the largest collection of scientific and philosophical books and manuscripts in England. The biographer John Aubrey called Dee "one of the ornaments of his age."

THE QUEST FOR THE RED POWDER

Edward Kelley (1555–1597) was born at Worcester the same year that John Dee faced charges of treason in the court of the Star Chamber. We know this because Dee cast Kelley's horoscope. The events of Kelley's life are uncertain. He is said to have served as an apothecary's apprentice,⁷ perhaps under his own father. His true family name may have been Talbot, and he may have attended Oxford University for a short period around the age of seventeen before leaving "under a cloud."⁸

The rumors surrounding his early life are unsavory. He is reported to have been pilloried at Lancaster, either for forging land title deeds or coining (counterfeiting). He is also supposed to have had his ears cropped (that is, cut off) as punishment for one or the other of these crimes, although there is no real evidence to support this story. Perhaps two separate incidents were involved.

However, he is most notorious for having, in the company of his friend Paul Waring, dug up the corpse of a pauper buried in the graveyard of Walton-le-Dale church in the county of Lancashire and invoked the spirit of the dead man to inquire into the future prospects of a young nobleman. There is reason to believe this necromancy actually took place, particularly since Kelley later admitted to Dee a knowledge of goetic magic.

It may have been the unfavorable notoriety surrounding this desecration that forced Kelley to abandon his profession as legal scribe and set out on an extended visit to Wales. While walking through Wales, as the story goes,⁹ Kelley bought from an innkeeper two caskets containing the white and red powders of alchemy and an alchemical manuscript titled the Book of St. Dunstan. The innkeeper is supposed to have obtained these powders from tomb robbers who stole them from the crypt of a Catholic bishop. When properly used, the white powder turned base metal into silver and the red powder turned base metal into gold.

There is another version of the story that asserts that Kelley and Dee went together to Glastonbury, and that this was the site where Kelley discovered the powders and the book.⁴ This fanciful tale derives from Elias Ashmole, who wrote:

"Tis generally reported that Doctor Dee, and Sir Edward Kelly were so strangely fortunate, as to finde a very large quantity of the Elixir in some part of the Ruines of Glastenbury-Abbey, which was so incredibly Rich in vertue (being one upon 272330.) that they lost much in making Projection, by way of Triall; before they found out the true height of the Medicine."

The elixir of life is here confused with the red powder of projection. The meaning of Ashmole is that one part of the powder could convert 272,330 parts of base metal into pure gold. About this romantic excursion of Dee and Kelley to Glastonbury, Charlotte Fell Smith comments: "Another version of this discovery is that Dee and Kelley together found the powder at Glastonbury. This we may dismiss."⁵

I am inclined to dismiss both versions of the story. The only certainty is that when Kelley arrived at the house of John Dee at Mortlake, he had in his possession both an alchemical manuscript that he referred to as the Book of Dunstan and a small quantity of what he sincerely believed was the red powder of projection.

Alchemy was Kelley's lifelong passion. He probably became interested in the subject as a young child while watching his father mix medicinal remedies with mortar and pestle. There is a natural connection between the desire to manufacture alchemical gold and the crime of coining, which involved counterfeiting silver or gold coins with adulterated metals. Kelley was drawn to John Dee for one purpose only—to learn how to decipher the meaning of his Book of Dunstan and manufacture more of the miraculous red powder.

THE COMING OF THE ANGELS

As can be seen from these narrations, Dee and Kelley had almost nothing in common. Dee was a nobleman, a scholar, a nationalist, a visionary, an agent of the Queen, and a man noted for his extraordinary goodness and piety. Kelley was a commoner, a forger, a coiner and a necromancer. His world was the murky realm of under-the-table dealings and trickery. He acknowledged loyalty to no one but himself.

Yet Kelley was not, at root, evil. He was merely a romantic dreamer who longed to unearth arcane secrets for his own betterment. He was drawn like a man entranced by the siren spell of magic. This lust to unlock the hidden secrets of the spirit world he shared with Dee. Kelley sought them for his own personal gain, while Dee sought them for the benefit of his Queen and his nation—but both hunted the same prize. Neither could know at that first meeting that their destinies had already been shaped by the Enochian angels, and were inextricably entwined.

Kelley arrived at Mortlake on March 8, 1582. He was introduced to Dee by a mutual friend named Clerkson. Kelley called himself Edward Talbot, and this may well have been his real name. Dee's fame, and that of his personal library, had by this time spread throughout Europe. Scholars frequently traveled to Mortlake from far places to consult with him or study his books. Their relationship might have ended after only a few days or weeks, but Kelley possessed a talent that Dee sorely needed—the gift of second sight.

One Mr. Edward Talbot cam to my howse, and he being willing and desirous to see or shew some thing in spirituall practise, wold have had me to have done some thing therein. And I truely excused my self therein, as not in that, vulgarly accounted Magic, neyther studied, or exercised. But confessed my self long tyme to have byn desyrous to have help in my philosophical studies through the Company and information of the blessed Angels of God."

Dee was greatly preoccupied with the spirit world. Precisely one year before Kelley's arrival he had been troubled by a strange knocking in his bedroom. This visitation made so strong an impression, he recorded it in his personal diary:

March 8th, [1581] it was the 8 day, being Wensday, hora noctis 10, 11, the strange noyse in my chamber of knocking; and the voyce, ten tymes repeted, somewhat like the shrich of an owle, but more longly drawn, and more softly, as it were in my chamber."¹²

This was not an isolated incident. Elsewhere in the same year Dee records: "Aug. 3rd, all the night very strange knocking and rapping in my chamber. Aug. 4th, and this night likewise."¹³

Dee became convinced that these spirit noises were an attempt to communicate with him. He began to scry into a crystal globe, and had some limited success. On May 25, 1581, he wrote, "I had sight in chrystallo offered me, and I saw."¹⁴ He was a cautious man, even in the bounds of his own house and in the pages of his private diary—"chrystallo" is written in Greek. Unfortunately,

Dee was a terrible seer. He acknowledged this himself on a number of occasions.

"HIM THAT IS ASSIGNED THE STONE"

Almost immediately after these spirit rappings started, he began to employ a man of dubious reputation named Barnabas Saul as his private scryer. Saul is said to have been a "licensed preacher"¹⁵ who professed abilities as a spirit medium. On October 8, 1581, Dee records: "I had newes of the chests of bokes fownd by Owndle in Northamptonshyre; Mr. Barnabas Sawle told me of them, but I fownd no truth in it," and directly after, "Oct. 9th, Barnabas Saul, lying in the ... hall was strangely trubled by a spirituall creature abowt midnight."¹⁶

What Charlotte Fell Smith calls the "first real seance" between Dee and Saul occurred December 21, 1581. Its content is almost chilling for the way it foreshadows the coming union between Dee and Kelley:

The skryer was bidden to look into the "great crystalline globe," and a message was transmitted by the angel Annael through the precipient to the effect that many things should be declared to Dee, not by the present worker, "but by him that is assigned to the stone."¹⁷

In February of 1582, an attempt was made to indict Saul on some unknown charge at Westminster Hall in London. It seems probable this charge was one of sorcery, since on March 6 Saul tells Dee that he "neyther hard or saw any spirituall creature any more."¹⁸ If Saul was under the watchful eye of the Church, it is unlikely he would continue with his scrying. On the other hand, the task of scrying for Dee was just about to pass from Saul to Kelley, and it may be that the Enochian angels withdrew their support of Saul and shifted it to Kelley as their preferred instrument.

Kelley immediately set about poisoning the waters for Saul. Whether this was a conscious attempt to gain employment as Dee's seer or an honest account of his psychic visions cannot be known, but the day after his arrival at Mortlake Kelley began to give evil reports about Saul's motives.

March 9th, Fryday at dynner tyme Mr. Clerkson and Mr. Talbot declared a great deale of Barnabas nowghty dealing toward me, as in telling Mr. Clerkson ill things of me that I should mak his frend, as that he was wery of me, that I wold so flatter his frende the lerned man [Kelley] that I wold borow him of him. But his frend told me, before my wife and Mr. Clerkson, that a spirituall creature told him that Barnabas had censured both Mr. Clerkson and me. The injuries which this Barnabas had done me diverse wayes were very great.¹⁹

The results obtained by Kelley scrying in the crystal were so spectacular that Dee immediately gave up all interest in having any other seer. The men continued to work together in the closest association both in England and on the Continent until 1587, when they at last began to drift apart, separating completely in 1589. Dee heeded the command of Queen Elizabeth and returned to England, leaving Kelley to continue trying to manufacture gold for Emperor Rudolph II in Bohemia.

This rupture was Kelley's doing, not the work of Dee. Kelley died in a fall attempting to escape his imprisonment in one of Rudolph's castles. Until the day he learned of Kelley's death, Dee always hoped to be reunited with his seer and continued to refer to him as "my good friend."

CHAPTER THREE

In the Thrall of the Angels

THE CARROT AND THE STICK

During the years Dee and Kelley spent together, the Enochian angels exerted a profound effect on the lives of the two men and on the lives of their families. Indeed, from the night Dee first heard the rapping of the spirits in his bedroom, he became their unknowing instrument. Kelley was drawn into their hidden purposes the day he met Dee at Mortlake. It is frequently speculated that Kelley manipulated Dee for his private reasons, feeding him false visions that aided Kelly's pursuit of the secret of the red powder. This is not supported by Kelley's attitude toward the angels, one of mistrust and loathing.

In the fall of 1583, Dee and Kelley left England in the company of a Polish nobleman named Count Albert Laski, Palatine of Saradia. Laski had first visited Mortlake on March 18 that same year seeking arcane wisdom, and was soon pulled into the Enochian communications. The angels predicted great political advancement for Laski, who quite naturally was flattered and excited by the prospect of gaining the Polish crown. However, on July 2 the speech of the angels took a menacing turn:

Madimi: The Lord Treasurer and he [Walsingham] are joyned together, and they hate thee. I heard them when they both said, thou wouldst go mad shortly: Whatsoever they can do against thee, assure thy self of. They will shortly lay a bait for thee; but eshew them.

Dee: Lord have mercy upon me: what bait, (I beseech you) and by whom?

Madimi: They have determined to search thy house: But they stay untill the Duke [Laski] be gone.

Dee: What would they search it for?

Madimi: They hate the Duke, (both) unto the death....

Dee: Lord, what is thy counsel to prevent all?

Madimi: The speech is general, The wicked shall not prevail.

Dee: But will they enter to search my house, or no?

Madimi: Immediately after the Duke his going they will.

Dee: To what intent? What do they hope to finde?

Madimi: They suspect the Duke is inwardly a Traytor.

Dee: They can by no means charge me, no not for so much as of a Trayterous thought.

Madimi: Though thy thoughts be good, they cannot comprehend the doings of the wicked. In summe, they hate thee. Trust them not...

Dee: I pray you make more plain your counsel.

Madimi: My counsel is plain enough.

Dee: When, I pray you, is the Duke likely to go away?

Madimi: In the middle of August.

Dee: If in the midst of August he will go, and then our practises be yet in hand, what shall be done with such our [ritual] furniture is prepared, and standing in the Chamber of practise?

Madimi: Thou hast no faith. His going standeth upon the determinated purpose of God. He is your friend greatly, and intendeth to do much for you. He is prepared to do thee good, and thou art prepared to do him service.¹

Neither Dee nor Kelley had any wish to leave England, but they were manipulated into doing so by the carrot and stick of the angels. They thought they would be serving God and would gain worldly benefit if they accompanied Laski, but that Dee would be arrested for treason if he remained at Mortlake. The threat to Dee was completely false, but he believed it. Throughout his life he suffered from a persecution mania. He was always ready to believe that men in high places plotted against him. Kelley's fortunes were bound up with Dee, his employer. He hoped to use Dee to help him, through the revelations of the angels, to discover the making of the red powder. Since Dee was determined to leave England, Kelley felt compelled go with him.

The angels have little to say about how Dee is to find the money to close up his house and move his wife, children and servants to Poland, although he asks them with a tone that borders on desperation:

Dee: Because it hath been said, that in the beginning of our Country troubles we should be packing hence into his [Laski's] Country; What token shall we have of that time approaching, or at hand?

Madimi: Your watchword is told you before: When it is said unto you, Venite, &

Dee: But (I beseech you) to be ready against that watchword, hearing what is to be done, as concerning our wives and children into his Country.

Madimi: Miraculous is thy care (O God) upon those that are thy chosen, and wonderful are the wayes that thou hast prepared for them.²

KELLEY BETAKES HIMSELF TO THE WORLD

Kelley had already experienced the manipulations of the angels in his private life. When he first met Dee, he was a bachelor. On April 29, 1582, the angel Michael commanded him to betake himself "to the world." Explaining this curious commandment to Dee, Kelley says: "It is that I shall marry, which thing to do I have no natural inclination, neither with a safe conscience may I do it contrary to my vow and profession."³ Presumably, he referred to the vow of celibacy and the profession of alchemy. On May 4 Dee records of the angels, "they willed him [Kelley] to marry."

The angels had their way. Kelley married a nineteen-year-old named Joanna (or Joan) Cooper, a girl from Chipping Norton—a town near Oxford that Richard Deacon calls "one of the most notorious haunts of witchcraft in England in Tudor times."⁴ Kelley must have known this girl previous to the command of the angels that he wed, and it may be conjectured that she shared some of his occult interests, although there is no evidence that this was their common bond. Francesco Pucci, writing to Dee in 1586, described Joanna Kelley as "a rare example of youthful holiness, chastity and all the virtues."⁵

Since Kelley had never wanted the marriage, it quickly became unbearable to him. On July 4, 1583, Kelley admitted in a rage to Dee: "I cannot abide my wife, I love her not, nay I abhor her; and there in the house I am disliked, because I favour her no better."⁶ After Kelley stormed out of Dee's house, Dee remarked to his own wife, "Jane, this man is marvellously out of quiet against his Wife, for her friends their bitter reports against him behind his back, and her silence thereat, &."⁷ This row was smoothed over, but the unwanted marriage was never really happy.

IN THE TONGUE OF ANGELS

Besides compelling Dee and Kelley to move all over central Europe for the next several years, the angels cast Dee into the unwilling role of prophet. He was to travel about and meet with the great leaders of Poland and Bohemia and declare the teachings of the angels. It mattered little to the angels that those teachings were heretical.

Very much against his desire and better judgment, they compelled him to seek out an audience with the Emperor Rudolph II at Prague on September 3, 1584, and to deliver a lecture on morals. That he did so showed great courage, since the power of Rudolph was almost absolute, and Dee's magical activities were of a kind likely to get him burned at the stake for witchcraft. Rudolph must have been a remarkably patient man, restraining himself as Dee declared to him:

The Angel of the Lord hath appeared to me, and rebuketh you for your sins. If you will hear me, and believe me, you shall Triumph: If you will not hear me, The Lord, the God that made Heaven and Earth, (under whom you breath, and have your spirit) putteth his foot against your breast, and will throw you headlong down from your seat.

Moreover, the Lord hath made this Covenant with me (by oath) that he will do and perform. If you will forsake your wickednesse, and turn unto him, your Seat shall be the greatest that ever was: and the Devil shall become your prisoner: Which Devil, I did conjecture, to be the Great Turk, (said I) This my Commission, is from God: I feigne nothing, neither am I an Hypocrite, an Ambitious man, or dotting, or dreaming in this Cause.⁸

It is easy to imagine the sheer astonishment of Rudolph at the crazy audacity of Dee in saying such things to his face. Perhaps he dismissed Dee as a madman. Dee was unable to secure future audiences, even though the angel Uriel ordered Dee to write to Rudolph saying he possessed the secret of the Philosopher's Stone, which he would reveal to the Emperor at their next meeting. Rudolph sent one of his spies, a Doctor Curtz (or Kurtz) to find out more details about the magic used by Dee and Kelley and to obtain Dee's diaries of the scrying sessions and Dee's crystal. Fortunately, Dee was cautious enough not to send his books and instruments to the Emperor.

When the angels ordered Dee and Kelley to go from Prague to Cracow to meet with the Polish king Stephen Bathori, Dee hesitated until after he received letters from Laski inviting him to Cracow. The angels were furious that Dee should doubt their command, and cursed him:

When the Lord had thee go, if thou had'st so done, and had'st not taken thine own time, more had been given unto him [Laski], and more had been added unto thee.

But now Letters came, that have passed through the hands of Sodomites and Murderers, (through whose hands they are accursed,) you rejoice, you receive comfort, you determine to goe.

But if you had left those letters behind you, had come when I had you go. Then had my Name been untouched.

Therefore is the Lord angry, and forgetteth not this offense.

For he that dealeth with me, dealeth not as with a man, for I have nothing in me tied to time, much lesse hath he that sent me.²

The angels then cursed Dee and his children for five generations because of his slowness in obeying their command. Utterly terrified, Dee begged that the curse be lifted, crying: "Lord, I am heartily sorry, I bewaile with teares this great offence, thou seest my contrite heart, O God, O God, O God." Apparently, this groveling worked. Dee was greatly relieved as the angels lifted the curse.

After this we [Dee and Kelley] sat and considered, and perceived, and confessed the greatnesse of our offence, how it concerned much the Honour and Glory of God, if we had gone without receiving the advertisement of those Letters; So should they hear (the [Polish nobles]) and the King St[ephen] have perceived that we had the direction of God, and of his good Angels, and not to have depended upon mans letters, or perswasions...³

"USE THEM IN COMMON"

The strangest and most interesting example of the authority exerted by the Enochian angels over Dee and Kelley is the infamous wife-swapping affair. In the spring of 1587, Kelley grew increasingly reluctant to scry into the stone. He wanted to turn all his efforts to alchemy, and advised Dee to employ his eldest son Arthur as seer. Several times in their relationship he had threatened to leave Dee in Bohemia and return alone to England, but this time he was emphatic. Dee reluctantly tested the seven-year-old Arthur as a scryer.

The boy proved completely unfit for the job. Dee begged Kelley to resume his duties, and Kelley allowed himself to be persuaded. He confessed the real reason for his latest dislike of the angels. They had ordered him to inform Dee that he and Dee should use their wives in common. They told him that if he refused this command, he was free to cease all communications with them.

When the angel Madimi appeared to Kelley after young Arthur's failed attempt to scry, Kelley was incensed:

Madimi openeth all her apparel, and her self all naked; and sheweth her shame also.

E.K.: Fie on thee, Devil avoid hence with this filthiness, &

Madimi: In the Name of God, why finde you fault with mee?

Dee: Because your yesterdayes doings, and words are provocations to sin, and unmeet for any godly creature to use.

Madimi: What is sin?

Dee: To break the Commandement of God.

Madimi: Set that down, so. If the self-same God give you a new Commandement taking away the former form of sin which he limited by the Law; What remaineth then?⁴

At first Dee would not believe that the command was intended in a carnal sense. Kelley knew better.

I was glad that an offer was made of being every seventh day to be taught the secrets of the books already delivered unto us: Thinking that it was easie for us to perform that unity which was required to be amongst us four; understanding all after the Christian and godly sense. But E.K. who had yesterday seen and heard another meaning of this unity required, utterly abhorred to have any dealings with them farther, and did intend to accept at their hands the liberty of leaving off to deal with them any more...¹²

Dee required some clear proof that the angels really did intend that each should have intercourse with the other's wife. The command appeared written in Latin on a white crucifix. Dee was shocked. The faith he had placed in the angels seemed to crumble away beneath his feet.

Hereupon we were in great amazement and grief of minde, that so hard, and (as it, yet seemed unto me) so unpure a Doctrine, was popounded and enjoined unto us of them, whom I alwayes (from the beginning hitherto) did judge and esteem, undoubtedly, to be good Angels: And had unto E.K. offered my soul as a pawn, to discharge E.K. his crediting of them, as the good and faithful Ministers of Almighty God. But now, my heart was sore afflicted upon many causes: And E.K. had (as he thought) now, a just and sufficient cause, to forsake dealing with them any more.¹³

It did not take Dee long to reconcile himself to this strange doctrine, however. That same night when he left Kelley and went to his bedroom he discovered his wife lying awake, waiting to hear the latest teachings of the angels. "I then told her, and said, Jane, I see that there is no other remedy, but as hath been said of our cross-matching, so it must needs be done. Thereupon she fell a weeping and trembling for a quarter of an hour: And I pacified her as well as I could; and so, in the fear of God, and in believing of his Admonishment, did perswade her that she shewed herself prettily resolved to be content for God his sake and his secret Purposes, to obey the Admonishment."¹⁴

The four signed a solemn covenant on April 18, 1587. They agreed to "this most new and strange doctrine" and enjoined the angels to fulfill their part of the bargain and deliver the final teachings in Enochian magic as they had promised. They pledged: "we will for thy sake herein captivate and tread under foot all our humane timorous doubting of any inconvenience which shall or may fall upon us, or follow us (in this world, or in the world to come) in respect, or by reason of our embracing of this Doctrine..."¹⁵

In return, they expected the angels to reward them for their obedience. Dee writes:

Now it was by the women as by our selves thought necessary to understand the will of God and his good pleasure, Whether this Covenant and form of words performed, is and will be acceptable, and according to the well liking of his Divine Majesty: And that hereupon, the act of corporal knowledge being performed on both our parts, it will please his Divine Majesty to seal and warrant unto us most certainly and speedily all his Divine, Merciful and bountiful Promises and Blessings; and also promises us wisdom, knowledge, ability and power to execute his justice, and declare and demonstrate his infallible verity amongst men, to his honour and glory.¹⁶

How long the four continued in their communal marriage is not known. The account of the wife-swapping Covenant is almost the final incident recorded concerning the occult partnership between Dee and Kelley. It has been speculated that the cross-matching was unsuccessful, but there seems no basis for this belief, other than the fact that Kelley and Dee drifted apart soon after the Covenant was signed. However, the reason for this may have been Kelley's growing acclaim as an alchemist, which caused him to spend more time in the company of the Emperor Rudolph and other Bohemian nobility. Kelley put on a good enough show for Rudolph to persuade the King to give him the title eques auratus, which in England was later interpreted as a knighthood. Dee referred to Kelley as a "Baron of the Kingdom of Bohemia."¹⁷

It might be speculated that if the angels fulfilled the promises made to the two men, Kelley was gifted with the ability to manufacture the genuine red powder, at least for a short period. As fanciful as this notion may be, it would explain Kelley's sudden success as an alchemist. Dee's eldest son, Arthur, always maintained in later life that he had actually seen Kelley make gold in Bohemia,¹⁸ and had played on the floor with the new gold bars. Whatever the truth, Kelley enjoyed a sudden fame and wealth in Bohemia that attracted the attention of the Emperor.

There is no record of how Joanna Kelley felt about the cross-matching arrangement, but she was probably just as horrified as the other three partners. The exchange of wives (or husbands, depending on how you look at it) was carried out only because of the great gifts of knowledge and power promised by the angels if Dee and Kelley would, once and for all, prove their faith. There is little evidence to suggest that lust was the motivating factor, at least on the part of the human beings involved.

A GNOSTIC UNION?

It is common for modern critics to regard the whole affair as a trick by Kelley to sleep with Jane Dee. They say the incident is out of character with the rest of the Enochian communications, that Kelley was deeply unhappy with his own wife, and perhaps infatuated with Jane Dee. This is to view the matter from a jaded, modern perspective which dismisses the sanctity of the marriage vow. Adultery was a serious crime in Elizabethan times, particularly to those men and women who considered themselves good Christians.

I see no reason to suspect that Kelley is any less sincere in his expression of horror than Dee or his wife. As for it being out of character for the angels, they had previously delivered several radical doctrines to Kelley that can only be described as Gnostic, or at least non-Christian:

- That Jesus was not God.
- That no prayer ought to be made to Jesus.
- That there is no sin.
- That mans soul doth go from one body, to another childes quickening or animation.
- That as many men and women as are now, have always been: That is, so many humane bodies, and humane souls, neither more nor lesse, as are now, have always been.
- That the generation of mankind from Adam and Eve, is not an History, but a writing which hath an other sense.
- No Holy Ghost they acknowledged.
- They would not suffer him to pray to Jesus Christ; but would rebuke him, saying, that he robbed God of his honour, etc."

The question then becomes, what was the motive of the angels? In my opinion, it was to bring about a symbolic union between Dee and Kelley. Remember, the angels regarded Dee and Kelley as two halves of a single living unit that would transmit their system of magic to humanity. Both were necessary, and neither could succeed without the full dedication of the other. Since neither Dee nor Kelley would ever have agreed to a homosexual union to bind themselves together spiritually with the occult energies of sex, the angels chose the next best option and used the wives as surrogates. Each wife represents her husband. In Christianity, husband and wife are one flesh. By lying with Jane Dee, Kelley was uniting with an extension of Dee himself; similarly, by taking Joanna Kelley to his bed, Dee joined in a symbolic manner with Kelley.

There is a great deal of Gnostic imagery in the Enochian communications and Keys, and one of the features of Gnosticism is the use of sexual energy to bring about a union with the divine in order to achieve a heightened spiritual awareness and an enlightened mind. This technique of using sex for spiritual awakening is common around the world. It is employed in European shamanism, in Voudoun, and in Tantric sects in India, China, and Tibet. It also finds frequent occurrence among some schools of modern Western magic such as the Odo Templi Orientis, which is closely associated with the teachings of Aleister Crowley.

It is frustrating that the Enochian diaries break off so soon after the exchange of the wives. Suitably empowered with sexual energy, the revelations of the subsequent scrying sessions probably contained many profound secrets. Perhaps the teachings on how to actually employ the Watchtowers and Keys of Enochian magic so earnestly sought by Dee were delivered in the weeks and months following the union of the four. Perhaps, as I suggested above, Kelley learned the manufacture of the red powder. If so, the transcription of those conversations have never been discovered. If there was any such record, it appears to have been lost forever.

CHAPTER FOUR

Enochian Magic and the Apocalypse

THE PURPOSE OF THE ANGELS

Why did the angels deliver Enochian magic to John Dee? It seems this question is never asked by those who study Dee and his angelic transcripts. Scholars tend to dismiss the teachings of the angels as either deliberate conscious deceptions by Kelley, or airy fantasies called up from the depths of his unconscious mind during the scrying sessions. Modern Enochian magicians, when they consider the matter at all, seem content to accept the explanation of the angels that the magic was a fulfillment of the patriarch Enoch's wish that the wisdom of the angels be taught to the human race.

Knowing why the magic was given to Dee is central to understanding its real purpose. Dee believed the magic was a reward for his service to the angels in conveying their message to the rulers of Europe. He saw himself as their prophet, and thought that at some time in the near future the angels would give him permission to perform the initial eighteen-day ritual of evocation that would allow him to use the spirits of the Watchtowers for his own personal ends.

A COVENANT UNFULFILLED

In essence, Dee regarded his dealings with the angels as a legal contract. Enochian magic was payment for services rendered. This is a familiar pattern in medieval magic. The witch's pact with the Devil (if it ever truly existed) involved acts of evil performed in exchange for occult powers the witch might then use to fulfill his or her desires. The black pact between ceremonial magicians and the Devil is essentially the same as the witch's pact, save that the magician usually got the power first and pledged to turn over his soul to the Devil after the date of his death (the time of which might be specified in the pact).

The Book of Spirits mentioned in Chapter One is another form of binding agreement between magician and spirits. By signing the Book, the spirits evoked by the magician pledge their obedience. The Book of Spirits is separate from the black pact. A magician, if he or she was spiritually pure, could gain the sworn obedience of spirits merely by calling upon the authority of God without having to offer services or sacrifices in return. This is how John Dee understood his blank book of forty-eight silvered leaves.

Dee viewed his arrangement with the Enochian angels as similar to the Covenant between the ancient Hebrews and IHVH. Indeed, he may have seen himself as a latter-day Moses. God, through his messengers, talked to Dee, and Dee carried these divine teachings and commandments to the kings and leaders of different peoples. He regarded the "cross-matching" of the wives as a test of his faith, similar to the test of Abraham's faith when God commanded Abraham to sacrifice his first-born son Isaac (Genesis 22:2). He specifically calls the letter to God signed by himself, Kelley, and their wives, in which they agree to exchange bed partners, a "Covenant," and mentions in it their "Abraham-like faith and obedience unto thee our God."¹

There is no mention made in the Covenant of specific payment by God for the obedience of Dee, Kelley and their wives, but previously the spirit Madimi sets forth the form of compensation:

Behold, if you resist not God, but shut out Satan (through unity amongst you) thus it is said unto you, Assemble your selves together every seventh day, that your eyes may be opened, and that you may understand by him that shall teach you, what the secrets of the holy books (delivered you) are: That you may become full of understanding, and in knowledge above common men."²

Every seventh day is Monday, the Sabbath or holy day of the Enochian angels.

"INSTRUMENTS OF THRASHING"

It seems implausible that the angels, who throughout the conversations show concern only for their own purposes, should convey with great difficulty over a period of years the system of Enochian magic purely for the benefit of Dee and Kelley. When Dee and Kelley request aid from the angels on personal matters, the angels either put them off with vague promises or tell them outright that human concerns do not interest them. With the possible exception of Madimi, who came most often in the form of a young girl and formed a close personal relationship with Dee, the angels show no affection for the men.

The Enochian angels manipulated Dee and Kelley as unwitting instruments to achieve their own higher purpose. The angels planted the system of Enochian magic among humankind for angelic reasons. These had nothing whatsoever to do with the wishes of either Dee or Kelley. Indeed, they have nothing to do with the desires of mortal humanity, and it is extremely naïve for any modern Enochian magician to believe that Enochian magic was delivered to the earth for his or her personal benefit.

The angels intend that Enochian magic be used to initiate the process of violent and destructive transformation linking our present aeon, which is ending, with the new aeon that is about to dawn—a transformation like that described in the biblical book of Revelation. In many places throughout the angelic conversations, the words of the angels are filled with apocalyptic imagery. Gabriel expresses this higher purpose very clearly while speaking with the authority of God, although Dee probably failed to gather the full implications of his words.

I have chosen you, to enter into my barns: And have commanded you to open the Corn, that the scattered may appear, and that which remaineth in the sheaf may stand. And have entered into the first, and so into the seventh. And have delivered unto you the Testimony of my spirit to come.

For, my Barn hath been long without Threshers. And I have kept my flayles for a long time hid in unknown places: Which flayle is the Doctrine that I deliver unto you: Which is the Instrument of thrashing, wherewith you shall beat the sheafs, that the Corn which is scattered, and the rest may be all one.

(But a word in the mean season.)

If I be Master of the Barn, owner of the Corn, and deliverer of my flayle: If all be mine. (And unto you, there is nothing: for you are hirelings, whose reward is in heaven.)

Then see, that you neither thresh, nor unbinde, untill I bid you, let it be sufficient unto you: that you know my house, that you know the labour I will put you to: That I favour you so much as to entertain you the labourers within my Barn: For within it thresheth none without my consent'

THE BLINDNESS OF JOHN DEE

Dee firmly believed that the angels intended to honor him as their prophet and spokesman to the princes and potentates of the world. He seems never to have asked himself why the angels chose to bestow upon him the precious system of Enochian magic, but simply accepted it as a reward for his lifelong piety. He regarded himself as chosen by God, and did not question the choice. Kelley, on the other hand, always believed the angels were deceiving and using them. He judged they were demons in disguise.

It is difficult to understand how Dee could have remained ignorant of the implications of Enochian magic. The reason the angels chose Dee as the human instrument to record its details was his intellectual genius, his extensive knowledge of ciphers and his skill in the mathematical magic of the Kabbalah. Dee was one of the few men of his age willing and able to receive such a transmission, and clever enough to make sense of it.

OPENING THE GATES

The primary action of the magic is the opening of the gates of the four Watchtowers that stand at the corners of the world. Each Watchtower has twelve gates, which lead to twelve angelic "cities" or dimensions of reality. The gates of the Watchtowers are opened by means of the forty-eight Keys or Calls (the angels use both names). They may be termed Calls because they evoke the angelic hierarchies from the cities, through the gates of the Watchtowers, and into our universe. The leader of each hierarchy (named on the squares of the Watchtowers) and his numerous followers have specific functions recorded by Dee in his Latin manuscript Liber Scientiae Auxilii et Victoriae Terrestris.⁴

Dee was aware of the angelic teaching that the disobedience of Adam was responsible for the curse of God upon the Earth. The Earth is regarded by the angels as a goddess. The Watchtowers were established at the moment time began, which was when Adam was expelled from the Garden: "But in the same instant when Adam was expelled, the Lord gave unto the world her time, and placed over her Angelic Keepers, Watchmen and Princes."⁵ We know that the Watchtowers are equivalent to the Watchmen from Kelley's great vision of the Watchtowers, expounded by the angel Ave: "The 4 houses, are the 4 Angels of the Earth, which are the 4 Overseers, and Watch-towers...."⁶

The universe of time, in which exists human consciousness, is established and maintained like a little bubble in the vast sea of eternity. It is the Watchtowers that sustain the bubble's cohesion. The Watchtowers are equivalent to the four pillars of Egyptian mythology that support the sky and keep it from crashing chaotically down upon the earth. The four ruling angels in the towers (who are not really separate from the towers but part of them) are time keepers—they maintain and regulate the laws of cause and effect.

To open the gates of the Watchtowers is to mingle the eternal with the temporal, to admit the angels into our world: not only the holy angels who follow God's plan and execute his judgment during the transformation known as the apocalypse, but the fallen angels who sinned with the daughters of men, and who will act as instruments of punishment. It is in this sense that Enochian magic is the "instrument of thrashing." Elsewhere, the angel Mapsama tells Dee: "You called for wisdom, God hath opened unto you, his Judgement: He hath delivered unto you the keyes, that you may enter...." A gate, once opened, permits travel in either direction.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE ANGELS

Both the language of the Keys and the conversation of the angels are filled with apocalyptic imagery. The angels seem to introduce it in an almost random way when Dee is asking about the health of distant friends or trying to get money to travel, or when Kelley is attempting to wheedle from them the secret of the red powder. However, this description of the manner in which the goddess Earth will be punished and tormented because she harbors sinful humankind is the true doctrine of the angels, as Mapsama tells Dee:

The heavens are called righteous, because of their obedience. The earth accursed, because of her frowardnesse. Those therefore, that seek heavenly things, ought to be obedient; lest with their frowardnesse, they be consumed in the end, burnt to ashes with fire, as the Earth shall be for her unrighteousnesse.⁷

This, in a nutshell, is the doctrine the angels have Dee preaching to the crowned heads of Poland and Bohemia. The forwardness, or impudence, of the goddess Earth lies in her providing sustenance and shelter to incarnated human souls. The goddess Earth offers bits of her own body to human souls, and from these bits they form their bodies of flesh. At the same time, they become one flesh with the goddess, and thus her children. The stated necessity to punish her, and erring human souls, is the justification the Enochian angels offer for the coming apocalypse.

Dee understood the apocalypse in the traditional Christian sense. This is not exactly the same as the way the Enochian angels understand it. To Dee, the apocalypse was to be a series of physical disasters brought about by the angelic agents of God at the will of God and at a preordained time. However, it is implicit from the Enochian conversations that the apocalypse will begin with the opening of the gates of the Watchtowers, and that these gates can only be opened by humankind from the inside. Enochian magic is the tool delivered by the angels that will enable humankind to open the gates.

"INVOCATION PROCEEDETH OF THE GOOD WILL OF MAN"

We know that the angels cannot open the gates from the outside because to open them requires the use of evocation (or as the angels term it, invocation). This is not within the power of angels, as Ave tells Dee:

Dee: As for the form of our Petition or Invitation of the good Angels, what sort should it be of?

Ave: A short and brief speech.

Dee: We beseech you to give us an example: we would have a confidence, it should be of more effect.

Ave: I may not do so.

Kelley: And why?

Ave: Invocation proceedeth of the good will of man, and of the heat and fervency of the spirit: And therefore is prayer of such effect with God.

Dee: We beseech you, shall we use one form to all?

Ave: Every one, after a divers form.

Dee: If the minde do dictate or prompt a divers form, you mean.

Ave: I know not: for I dwell not in the soul of man.

Evocation (calling out) and invocation (calling in) are functions of human free will. Spiritual beings must be invoked into our reality by human beings. We must open the gates and admit the servants of Coronzon (the Enochian name for Lucifer) ourselves. Evocation and invocation are not a part of the business of angels, but of humans.

The angels can manipulate the time of the apocalypse by veiling or revealing the true knowledge of the Watchtowers and the Keys as it suits their purposes. They made very clear to Dee that he was not to work the ritual evocation of the Keys without their express permission, which was never granted in Dee's lifetime. To be doubly sure, they withheld details of the working. Although they promised to reveal these details after the fulfillment of the Covenant, there is no evidence that they kept their word. If they did, the manuscript appears to have been lost.

"I HAVE NOTHING IN ME TIED TO TIME"

The understanding of the apocalypse held by fundamentalist Christians is that it will be primarily a series of physical disasters provoked by physical agents. The angels of judgment will appear upon the surface of the Earth in unpleasant physical bodies and sow material plagues, cause volcanic eruptions, earthquakes, and so on. This is a painfully materialistic understanding. The agents of the apocalypse are spirits, and spirits have no bodies. They exist in the astral world and cannot directly affect the physical world.

For angels to affect the physical world, they must use human beings as their fleshy instruments. They do this by controlling the behavior of human beings through the unconscious mind. By manipulating humans they are then able to cause those humans to change the physical world. Indeed, it is only through the media of human perceptions that angels are able to perceive the physical universe. That is why it was necessary for souls to incarnate in the first place. Human beings are incarnated angels.

The limitation of angelic awareness is indicated by the angel Gabriel, who, when asked by Dee for some information about Albert Laski (who was not present), states: "When we enter into him, we know him; but from him, he is scarce known unto us..."² The difficulty arises because angels dwell in eternity and men dwell in time. An unnamed angel says to Dee: "For he that dealeth with me, dealeth not as with a man; for I have nothing in me tied to time, much lesse hath he that sent me."³ This great difficulty the angels have in handling time may account for the nonsequential way the Enochian teachings were received.

In my opinion, the apocalypse prepared by the Enochian angels must be primarily an internal, spiritual event, and only in a secondary way an external physical catastrophe. The gates of the Watchtowers that stand guard at the four corners of our dimension of reality are mental constructions. When they are opened, they will admit the demons of Coronzon—not into the physical world, but into our subconscious minds.

Spirits are mental, not material. They dwell in the depths of mind and communicate with us through our dreams, unconscious impulses, and more rarely in waking visions. They affect our feelings and our thoughts beneath the level of our conscious awareness. Sometimes they are able to control our actions, either partially as in the case of irrational and obsessive behavior patterns, or completely as in the case of full possession. Through us, by using us as their physical instruments, and only through us, are they able to influence physical things.

THE DEMONS WITHIN OURSELVES

The Enochian communications teach us that not only must humanity itself initiate the cosmic drama of the apocalypse through the magical formula delivered to John Dee and Edward Kelley more than four centuries ago, but humans must also be the physical actors that bring about the plagues, wars, and famines described with such chilling eloquence in the vision of St. John. We must let the demons of Coronzon into our minds by means of a specific ritual working. They will not find a welcome place there all at once, but will worm their way into our subconscious and make their homes there slowly over a period of years or even decades. In the minds of individuals that resist this invasion they will find it difficult to gain a foothold, but in the more pliable minds of those who welcome their influence they will establish themselves readily.

Once they have taken up residence, we will be powerless to prevent them turning our thoughts and actions toward chaotic and destructive ends. These apocalyptic spirits will set person against person and nation against nation, gradually increasing the degree of madness and chaos in human society until at last the full horror of Revelation has been realized upon the stage of the world. The corruption of human thoughts and feelings may require generations to bring to full fruition. Only after the wasting and burning of souls is well advanced will the full horror of the apocalypse achieve its final fulfillment in the material realm.

APOCALYPSE IS NOT PREORDAINED

What the Enochian angels intended the Keys to accomplish, and what the Keys are actually able to do, may be entirely different. Spirits are not infallible. They often deceive human beings, and sometimes even themselves. Simply because the angels believed this system of magic could trigger the apocalypse does not necessarily mean it can do so. It does not even mean that there is, or will be, such a thing as an apocalypse.

However, it seems clear that it was the intention of the angels that the Keys be ritually applied to the Watchtowers, not so that human beings could learn divine secrets of nature, as Dee believed, but to open the way for the demons of Coronzon to enter into our unconscious minds. Once firmly established in our personal unconscious, these spirits would then be able to gain an increasing control over our physical world by manipulating our perceptions, emotions and thoughts.

Enochian magic has been used for over a century by modern magicians working in the Golden Dawn tradition and its derivatives without any obvious signs of initiating a universal Armageddon. It is evident that it can be employed for personal reasons, even though this is not the primary function intended by the angels who delivered it. Modern magicians do not perform the full eighteen-day invocation that was to be the catalytic trigger of the apocalypse. The details of this complex Apocalypse Working (as I call it) were probably never delivered to Dee and Kelley, although it may be possible to reconstruct its outline. Instead, modern magicians nibble at the edges of Enochian magic, using various aspects of it in their ritual practices. Even incomplete and misapplied, it is a highly potent form of magic.

It may be that Enochian magic was deliberately designed by the angels to be an effective system of personal magic in order to insure its survival and continuous use by human beings. What better way to guarantee that the system will still be understood in a practical way when the angels at last determine that the time has come to nudge some chosen magician, through visions and insights, into performing the Apocalypse Working? In the meantime, individual Enochian magicians have been able to use the system for their own private ends, and will go on doing so.

CHAPTER FIVE

The History of Enochian Magic

ROBERT COTTON BUYS A LIBRARY

After Dee's death in 1608, his library was sold to the antiquarian Sir Robert Bruce Cotton (1570–1631). Cotton also acquired at least some of Dee's magical apparatus, including his scrying table, one of his crystals, and the wax seals used to support both the crystal and the legs of the table. Some of these objects afterwards made their way into the British Museum collection via the Cottonian Library. The stone was acquired by the British Museum in later years. The table was extant in Meric Causabon's day. The brass engraving of its top, pictured at the beginning of A True and Faithful Relation, was copied from the original design. This table has since disappeared.

The history of the transcript of the angelic conversations is curious, since it reveals an almost supernatural survival of some of the manuscripts. Those acquired by Cotton (part of Dee's Liber Mysteriorum) make up the content of Casaubon's A True and Faithful Relation. Charlotte Fell Smith called these "the last thirteen books" of the transcript.¹ They cover the period from May 28, 1583, to April 2, 1587, with increasingly large gaps of time toward the end of the record. They resume again, briefly, in the year 1607 from March 20 to

September 7. During this latter period, Dee relied on the inferior scrying services of Bartholomew Hickman. The 1607 transcripts contain nothing of value. The gap between the last scrying session with Kelley and the first recorded session with Hickman is called by Casaubon "a vast chasma or hiatus."²

About the books of the transcript that were published by Casaubon, John Aubrey wrote: "Meridith Lloyd says that John Dee's printed booke of Spirits is not above the third part of what was writt, which were in Sir Robert Cotton's library; many whereof were much perished by being buried, and Sir Robert Cotton bought the field to digge after it."³ About this burying of the manuscripts, Casaubon states: "The Book had been buried in the Earth, how long, years or moneths, I know not; but so long, though it was carefully kept since, yet it retained so much of the Earth, that it began to moulder and perish some years ago, which when Sir Thomas C. [Robert Cotton's son] ... observed, he was at the charges to have it written out, before it should be too late."⁴

BURIED IN THE EARTH?

The notion that Dee's magical books were buried in a field to prevent discovery is very romantic, but seems too far-fetched to be taken seriously. More likely, the mold on the transcript was the result of careless storage before Cotton acquired it. However, it is possible that Dee or his eldest son Arthur (1579-1651) took the extreme measure of interment to ensure that the angelic conversations remain secret. Arthur was upset about Casaubon's book, which was published eight years before his own death. This annoyance had nothing to do with the content of the book, since Arthur himself was involved in occult and alchemical experiments. He simply did not want the teachings of the angels known, and did not wish his father's name associated with them.

Some of Dee's lost diaries and other papers passed into Arthur's hands. Apparently, Arthur searched diligently for any instructions Dee might have left describing how to actually use Enochian magic. Deacon writes: "Arthur spent much time in his later years trying to recover his father's missing manuscripts, which were supposed to be scattered as far afield as Prague, Rome, Brussels and Amsterdam."⁵ After Arthur's death "his remaining notes and any manuscripts belonging to his father seem to have been dissipated among his numerous children ... and, except for odd scraps of information here and there, to have been lost to posterity."⁶

THE SECRET DRAWER IN JOHN DEE'S CHEST

The survival of Dee's transcript of the angelic conversations that took place prior to May 28, 1583, is even more remarkable. Casaubon knew nothing about their existence. Thirteen years after the publication of A True and Faithful Relation, the earlier papers fell into the hands of the antiquarian Elias Ashmole. Ashmole, who was well known around London as a buyer of old manuscripts, bartered them in exchange for a book from one of the warders of the Tower of London, who in turn had acquired them from his wife.

While courting her first husband, the wife of the warder had bought an old chest with a "very good lock and hinges of extraordinary neat work" from a shop. It had formerly belonged to the surgeon John Woodward, who probably bought it at Dee's estate sale in 1609. She kept the chest for twenty years without noticing anything odd about it. Then, while moving it one day, she heard a rattle inside. Her second husband pried up the bottom and discovered "a large secret drawer stuffed full of papers, and a rosary of olivewood beads with a cross, which had caused the rattle."

The papers in Dee's chest covered the conversations with the angels from December 22, 1581, down to the beginning of Casaubon's book. They also contained the manuscripts 48 Claves Angelicae, De Heptarchia Mystica and Liber Scientiae Auxiliis et Victoriae Terrestris—a truly extraordinary treasure. Since some of it is written in Latin and the rest in Dee's rather crabbed hand, the Tower warder probably considered it of little value. Ashmole, of course, was delighted.

EARLY ENOCHIAN SCHOLARS

Thanks to the scholarly care of Cotton and Ashmole, these manuscripts have survived to the present day. Ashmole spent considerable energy understanding the system of Enochian magic. Peter French writes about Ashmole that "he seems to have studied the 'Spiritual Diaries' seriously as a means of contacting angels. Ashmole's biographer, C. H. Josten, conjectures that he may even have attempted to repeat the angelic experiments."⁸ Like Arthur Dee before him, Ashmole was, in the end, baffled by the missing instructions concerning the actual application of the Keys to the Watchtowers.

From time to time other scholars with occult inclinations have attempted to unravel the transcripts. There is an interesting section concerning the tables of Enoch in British Library manuscript Harley 6482. It is part of a larger magical workbook (Harley 6481-6) ascribed to the seventeenth-century Hermetic magician

Thomas Rudd, who published Dee's famous Preface to Euclid's Elements in 1651.

ENOCHIAN MAGIC IN THE GOLDEN DAWN

Since the mini-revival of Enochian magic that took place in the middle of the seventeenth century, there does not appear to have been any serious attempt to understand and practice the teachings of the angels until the efforts of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. A secret Victorian society dedicated to the practice of ritual magic, the Golden Dawn was founded in London in 1887 by three Freemasons determined to revive the intellectual magic of the Renaissance and create a true Rosicrucian society.

One of the founders, Samuel Liddell "MacGregor" Mathers (1854-1918), spent much of his time as a young man burrowing through the piles of dusty manuscripts in the library at the British Museum, where many of Dee's writings were kept. He undoubtedly read some of the angelic conversations in their original form, but seems to have derived most of his personal system of Enochian magic from the True and Faithful Relation. There is no mention in Golden Dawn Enochian magic of the material in Dee's Heptarchia Mystica, which is made up of angelic teachings recorded before the point where Casaubon's book begins.

The Enochian magic of the Golden Dawn is almost completely concerned with the Great Table of the four Watchtowers and the forty-eight Keys or Calls, which Mathers was perceptive enough to relate to the Table. It deals only with the angels or spirits whose names may be extracted from the Watchtowers by a specific set of rules—there is no mention of the spirits of the Thirty Aethers, or the ninety-one geographical genii who rule the different regions of the world. Thus, Golden Dawn Enochian magic is only a portion of the magical system received by Dee and Kelley.

To his credit, Mathers was able to add, in a more or less intelligent way, many details concerning the Watchtowers that are not clearly stated in the angelic conversations. In Golden Dawn magic, the Watchtowers are explicitly connected with colors, signs of the zodiac, directions, letters of Tetragrammaton, and occult elements. These correspondences have immense usefulness in practical rituals that employ the Watchtowers. The Keys were related by Mathers (or one of his associates) to different parts of the Great Table, and to the spirits located in those parts, so that speaking a particular Key in Enochian evokes a particular spirit. The system of Enochian magic used in the Golden Dawn will be the subject of a later chapter.

ALEISTER CROWLEY

One of the young members of the Golden Dawn was Aleister Crowley (1875–1947). Crowley is the most famous magus of the twentieth century. When he was a young child, his mother (a member of the fanatical Plymouth Brethren sect) referred to him as the Beast. His young mind seized on this label as a revelation. In his autobiography he writes: "But my mother believed that I was actually Anti-christ of the Apocalypse...." [and above on the same page,] "I have never lost sight of the fact that I was in some sense or other the Beast 666." Here, the Beast and the Antichrist are confused, but the confusion was his mother's, not Crowley's, who always understood himself to be merely the herald of the Antichrist.

Crowley eagerly devoured Golden Dawn magic. He was strongly drawn to the magic of the dark side—the goetia. His mentor in the Golden Dawn, Allan Bennett, warned him against this line of study, but Crowley paid no heed. This attraction to evil, coupled with his Bohemian habits, made him unpopular among the conservative leaders of the Order. Eventually, Crowley and the Golden Dawn parted company, but he continued to use the Golden Dawn teachings for the remainder of his life. More than with any other aspect of Golden Dawn magic, he was fascinated with the Enochian language and the Keys to the Watchtowers. Crowley considered himself a reincarnation of Edward Kelley, and to some extent he shared Kelley's scrying ability.

While wandering through Algeria in 1909, Crowley invoked the Enochian Aethers in reverse order from the twenty-eighth to the first, using the nineteenth Key for all of them. The Key for all thirty of the Aethers is the same save for the name of the Aether involved. Thus, the last thirty Keys are really a single Key that is applied to the thirty Aethers. Previously, while visiting Mexico in 1900, he had invoked the thirtieth and twenty-ninth Aethers, so he was merely taking up where he had left off.

CROWLEY'S INVOCATION OF THE AETHERS

His method of working was similar in some respects to that of Dee and Kelley. He would find a private place where he could be alone with his disciple, Victor Neuberg. Then he would recite the nineteenth Key with the name of the Aether he sought to invoke inserted in the text at the proper place. It is not clear to me whether he used the English or the Enochian version of the Key. The Enochian version would be correct practice, but in his Confessions he speaks of "changing two names" to suit the Key to each Aether. In the English version, two words must be changed for each Aether, but in the Enochian version, only one word. So perhaps Crowley invoked the Aethers using the English version of the nineteenth Key.

After sensing the presence of the angel of that Aether, he gazed into a large topaz that was set in a decorated wooden cross. Whatever he saw in the stone, or experienced more directly, he described. Neuberg sat beside him and wrote his words down in a notebook, just as Dee had recorded the words of Kelley more than three centuries earlier. This record formed the work known as the Vision and the Voice.

Crowley states in his autobiography, "We walked steadily to Bou Saâda, invoking the Aethyrs one by one, at convenient times and places, or when the spirit moved me. As a rule, we did one Aethyr every day."¹¹ He does not seem to have employed the first eighteen Keys while invoking the Aethers. He understood the eighteen preliminary Keys in the way they had been taught him by the Golden Dawn. Describing them, he says that the first two Keys relate to the quintessence, or elemental Spirit, while the next sixteen relate to the four elements in subdivisions of four. This is the Golden Dawn teaching.

Crowley demonstrated a sound intuitive comprehension of the Keys and the Watchtowers. He had trouble reconciling the various interpretations of the Aethers—whether they are concentric angelic spheres that lie beyond the bounds of the four Watchtowers, or angels whose names are written on the Watchtowers, or merely names for different geographical regions on the surface of the earth. This confusion is understandable, since nowhere does Dee write anything to clarify the matter.

Crowley chose to consider the Aethers in the first, most mystical sense. He describes the Watchtowers as "composing a cube of infinite magnitude."¹¹ This is above the usual understanding.

THE GREAT BEAST UNLOCKS THE GATES

If, as I postulate earlier, Enochian magic was delivered by the angels to act as the catalyst for the apocalypse, it is interesting to note that the primary practitioner of that magic firmly considered himself to be the Great Beast of Revelation. After leaving the Golden Dawn, Crowley went on to create his own occult mythos. He saw himself as the herald for the dawning Aeon of Horus, which he believed began in April 1904, with his inspired reception of the Book of the Law, dictated to him by his guardian angel, Aiwass.

Crowley's guardian angel cast Crowley into a role similar to that forced upon John Dee by the Enochian angels. Crowley was both the sacred scribe and the prophet of the god Ra-Hoor-Khuit (Horus). His instruction was to record the sayings of the god and to spread his message across the world via the Book of the Law. "Now ye shall know that the chosen priest & apostle of infinite space is the prince-priest the Beast and in his woman; called the Scarlet Woman, is all power given. They shall gather my children into their fold: they shall bring the glory of the stars into the hearts of men."¹²

The Aeon of Horus may be understood in a general sense as similar to the astrological Age of Aquarius. Many ancient cultures divide time into a repeating series of ages, each age with its unique defining characteristics. For example, in the system of the Kabbalah, we are presently living in the Age of Geburah, which is characterized by severity and warfare. The next age will be the Age of Tiphareth, a time of harmony and peace. In Crowley's personal mythos, the dawning Aeon of Horus has supplanted the old Aeon of Osiris, the Egyptian god of death and rebirth that Crowley related to Jesus Christ.

There are some parallels between Crowley's angel-inspired Book of the Law and Dee's Key of the Thirty Aethers. In the Book of the Law is written: "We have nothing with the outcast and the unfit: let them die in their misery: For they feel not. Compassion is the vice of kings: stamp down the wretched & the weak: this is the law of the strong: this is our law and the joy of the world."¹² In the Key of the Thirty Aethers appear the words: "Govern those that govern; cast down such as fall; bring forth with those that increase, and destroy the rotten."¹³ Both these passages refer to the effects of karma, the cause and effect of the natural world. Elsewhere in the Book of the Law is written: "Yea! deem not of change: ye shall be as ye are, & not other. Therefore the kings of the earth shall be Kings for ever: the slaves shall serve. There is none that shall be cast down or lifted up: all is ever as it was."¹⁴

The Aeon of Horus is one of strife and warfare, even as the time of the apocalypse is a time of destruction. Horus states in the Book of the Law: "Now let it be first understood that I am a god of War and of Vengeance."¹⁵ And elsewhere: "Mercy let be off: damn them who pity. Kill and torture; spare not; be upon them."¹⁶ In the Key of the Thirty Aethers is written: "the reasonable creatures of Earth (or men), let them vex and weed out one another; and the dwelling places, let them forget their names; the work of man and his pomp, let them be defaced...."¹⁷

Crowley embraced the symbolism in Revelation, applied it to himself, and understood it with reference to his prophetic Book of the Law. He called himself the Great Beast, his wife (and later his various mistresses) the Scarlet Woman and the Whore of Babalon. In Enochian the word babalon means "wicked" and the word babalond means "whore"—thus the change in spelling of this word, although Crowley justified it on numerical grounds. He also interpreted the text of the Book of the Law to mean that his son would become the Antichrist. Concerning the Scarlet Woman, the Book of the Law states: "then will I breed from her a child mightier than all the kings of the earth."¹⁸ This interpretation was an error: the Antichrist has yet to show himself.

There are no direct references in the Book of the Law to the Enochian Keys, although two places are suggestive. Part of the Book of the Law reads: "There are four gates to one palace; the floor of that palace is of silver and gold, lapis lazuli & jasper are there, and all rare scents jasmine & rose, and the emblems of death. Let him enter in turn or at once the four gates; let him stand on the floor of the palace."¹⁹ This might be interpreted as a reference to the Great Table of the Watchtowers, which is four-sided and has four parts. Elsewhere is written: "in these are mysteries that no Beast shall divine. Let him not seek to try: but one cometh after him, whence I say not, who shall discover the key of it all."²⁰ If there really is a hidden connection between the Book of the Law and Enochian magic, perhaps this refers to the Enochian Keys.

ENOCHIAN MAGIC IN THE MODERN WORLD

Many modern groups that practice the form of ritual magic descended from the Golden Dawn (directly or via Crowley) use Enochian magic extensively. Particular notice might be taken of the Aurum Solis, an organization dedicated to Hermetic philosophy and magic founded in England in 1897, which claims to be completely independent of the Golden Dawn. The Aurum Solis teachings include the Great Table of the Watchtowers, the Keys, and the spirits of the thirty Aethers.²² The late Anton LaVey, leader of the California-based Church of Satan, employed an edited version of the Keys that was derived from the writings of Aleister Crowley.

In the last few decades Enochian magic has undergone another period of rebirth. Increasingly, Dee's writings are finding their way into popular books of ceremonial magic. This process is slow, and it is unfortunate that no single text exists that contains the complete Enochian communications with the numerous Latin passages translated into English. However, enough of the material has emerged to present an overview of Enochian magic that is fairly complete, and to allow the magic to be used for practical ends.

CHAPTER SIX

The Tools of Enochian Magic

GIFTS FROM THE ANGELS

The articles of furniture for the scrying sessions were all added at the direction of the Enochian angels. At first, it appears that no special instruments were used. Dee placed one of his scrying crystals in a "frame" on the edge of his desk in his private study at Mortlake. This frame (given to him by a friend) is nowhere clearly described, but a small drawing of it made by Dee appears in the margin of the manuscript page dated December 22, 1581 (Sloane MS 3188, folio 8), beside the words "I thereupon, set by him, the stone in the frame."¹ The picture shows a frame with four outward-curved legs resting on a flat circular ring. The crystal itself is surrounded by a vertical band of the frame that leaves its front (and presumably its back) exposed. On the top of this band is a small cross. It may have been made of gold, since a gold frame is mentioned elsewhere.

On the first scrying with Kelley, which took place on March 10, 1582, the alchemist knelt on the floor in front of Dee's desk. He peered into the stone, which may have been placed in the sunlight beaming through the west-facing window of the study, in obedience to orders the angel Annael had delivered to Barnabas Saul on December 21, 1581. Kelley prayed aloud and invoked the angel Annael into the stone. Meanwhile, Dee retreated to his Oratory (a small room attached to his study) and entreated the appearance of the angels with prayers of his own. Within fifteen minutes, Kelley saw the angel Uriel in the stone.

The angels had informed Saul on December 21 that he and Dee might "deal both kneeling and sitting."² It is likely that Kelley soon began to use the green chair in the study, with the crystal in its stand on the edge of the desk. Dee sat on the other side of the desk, recording in his journals the events described by Kelley. Prayer was frequently used to encourage the angels to appear in the stone when they were slow to come. Dee fell into the habit of using prayer to both open and close the scrying sessions. These prayers appear to have been spontaneous compositions, not predetermined elements of a formal ritual. The appearance of the angels in the stone was often preceded by the withdrawing of a "golden curtain" from the depths of the stone.

Almost immediately, the angels began to describe to Kelley the essential ritual furniture the two would require for future communications. This consisted of the sacred stone, the Table of Practice, the seven Ensigns of Creation, the Sigillum Aemeth and four lesser sigils of the same pattern to be placed under the legs of the table, various silk cloths to be spread under and over the table, circular seals to be placed under the scryer's feet, a seal ring, and a lamén which contained a "token" of Dee's name hidden amongst its letters.

Dee continued to employ the Table of Practice, the Sigillum Aemeth, and the angelic stone throughout his association with Kelley. It is probable that he also continued to use the other ritual objects, although they are not mentioned in the later transcript. Dee considered these things essential to the success of the communications because they had been explicitly prescribed by the angels themselves. However, it should be noted that Kelley first established communication quite easily without them.

THE SEAL RING

The seal ring was delivered on March 14 by the angel Michael. Charlotte Fell Smith states that this was a physical ring,³ presumably going on the assumption that it was a plant by Kelley to impress Dee. This may be a misreading of the transcript on her part. The angel Michael makes the seal ring appear out of the flames of his sword, then says to Dee through Kelley: "After this sort must be the ring. Note it. I will reveal thee this ring, which was never revealed since the death of Solomon, with whom I was present."⁴ The implication is that the ring is the same as Solomon's fabled seal ring. Then Michael sets the ring down on the table of practice and has Dee note it with care. "After that he threw the ring down upon the table and it seemed to fall through the table."⁵

The transcript of the conversations can sometimes be misleading. The passage quoted above probably means that Kelley described Michael setting down the ring, described the ring in detail to Dee, then told how the angel threw the ring through the tabletop. The ring is apparently important, since Michael tells Dee: "Without this ring thou shalt do nothing."⁶

The ring bears the name of an angel, Pele (P-E-L-E), which means "Worker of Wonders." Dee recognized the name from Reuchlin's De Verbo Mirifico.⁷ The name of this angel also appears in Agrippa's Occult Philosophy,⁸ presumably drawn from Reuchlin. In addition to these four letters, there is a large circle in the center of the square bezel with a horizontal bar through its center, and above the bar the letter V while below the bar the letter L appears. Note that these two letters appear in the upper right corner of the Ensign of Sol. It is possible that the circle and bar are intended for the letters O and I. The angel Carmara mentions that the ring is to be made "in perfect gold."⁹

THE ANGELIC STONE

Dee owned at least three scrying speculums, and probably more. One was a flat, circular obsidian mirror with a small handle on one side that had a hole drilled through it for hanging the mirror up on a thong or peg. This is commonly said to be of "Aztec origin"¹⁰ although I have never seen any proof to support this assertion. It does not appear to have been used much, if at all, to communicate with the Enochian angels. Another was a crystal globe that was probably the size and shape of a small egg. It is likely to this that he refers when he speaks of his "first sanctified stone." This was the stone into which Dee first tried to scry. It was also used by Barnabas Saul and, for the period from March 10 to April 28 of 1582, by Edward Kelley.

The third magic mirror, Dee's "principal stone" and "holy stone" and "usual shew-stone," was delivered to Dee in an apparently miraculous manner on April 28, 1582. While scrying at Dee's desk, Kelley looked toward the west window of the study and saw a bright object lying on the mat that covered the earthen floor beside one of Dee's stacks of books. An angel the size of a small child, with a flaming sword in his hand, picked up the object "as big as an egg" and extended it to Dee. The angel Michael told Dee through Kelley, "Go toward it and take it up." Dee writes:

I went toward the place, which E K pointed to: and till I came within a foot of it, I saw nothing, and then I saw like a shadow on the ground or mats hard by my books under the west window. The shadow was round, and less than the palm of my hand. I put my hand down upon it, and felt a thing cold and hard. Which (taking up) I perceived to be the Stone before mentioned.¹¹

For the rest of his life, Dee remained convinced that this crystal had been given to him by angelic means. It immediately became the main scrying instrument. When Dee went to Europe, the stone went with him. He valued it above all his other material possessions, with the possible exception of his library at Mortlake. Speaking of the angels to the Emperor Rudolph II, he said, "yea they have brought me a Stone of that value, that no earthly Kingdom is of that worthinesse as to be compared to the vertue or dignity thereof."¹²

What are we to make of this crystal? It seems likely that it was placed on the floor by Kelley before the scrying began—perhaps unconsciously while Kelley was possessed by the angels. Kelley was susceptible to possession. At one point he complains to Dee that he does not like the spirits "moving in his head." Elsewhere, he tells Dee of "a great stir and moving in his brains, very sensible and distinct, as of a creature of humane shape and lineaments going up and down to and fro in his brains, and within his skull: sometimes seeming to sit down, sometimes to put his head out at his ear."¹²

If so, where would Kelley have obtained such a stone? Large, near perfect spheres of rock crystal were no more common, and no cheaper, in the sixteenth century than they are today. Kelley was not a rich man. Perhaps the crystal really was an apport—the appearance of a physical object out of thin air. It is a mystery that is never likely to be solved. In any case, Dee had the stone set in a gold frame with a cross on the top, a depiction of which is shown below.

Modern students of Enochian magic cannot count on the angels materializing a crystal for them. A sensible alternative is to buy a crystal ball of good quality, either of glass or rock crystal, and a stand to set it on.

THE TABLE OF PRACTICE

On April 29, the day after the delivery of the holy stone, the Table of Practice was finished. It was two cubits high. By two cubits, an English yard (thirty-six inches) was meant.¹⁴ The top was square, also a yard in both dimensions, so that the overall shape of the table was cubic. It stood on four narrow wooden legs. The angels specified that it be made of "sweet wood," which is another name for laurel. The laurel tree has powerful associations in magic and scrying dating back to ancient Greece.

Frame of Dee's Showstone

The distinguishing feature of this table is the design painted on its top. This is clearly illustrated at the beginning of Casaubon's True and Faithful Relation by a brass-cut engraving that was taken from the original table in the Cottonian library. Around the edge is a border of

Table of Practice

Enochian letters. Each side of this border contains twenty-one letters—the number of letters in the Enochian alphabet. An Enochian B is inscribed in each corner of the border. Robert Turner speculates that the Enochian B is equivalent to the number seven.¹⁵ This is a reasonable speculation, in view of the importance of seven in Enochian magic and the prevalence of the Enochian B.

The letters in this border are read right to left, after the normal manner of Enochian writing, and are oriented to be read from outside the edge of the table, so that a person reading the border would walk in a complete circle clockwise around the table. The letters in the border are generated in a Kabbalistic and fairly complex way from a seven-by-twelve-letter square that is composed of the seven-letter names of the seven Kings and seven Princes of the Heptarchia Mystica with the initial letter B removed from all fourteen names. The angels give two forms of this square. I have reproduced the rationalized second form below, since it contains all the necessary information.

(1st King) aligon	ornogo (1st Prince)
(2nd King) obogel	efafes (2nd Prince)
(3rd King) abalel	utmono (3rd Prince)
(4th King) ynepor	lison (4th Prince)
(5th King) naspol	rorges (5th Prince)
(6th King) napsen	ralges (6th Prince)
(7th King) lumaza	agenol (7th Prince)

Table of the Kings and Princes

Starting at the upper-left corner of the border and moving clockwise, each side of the Holy Table contains the letters in three adjacent columns from the table of the Kings and Princes. The columns are read right to left and top to bottom from the first to the seventh Prince or King. Thus, the upper edge of the Holy Table begins o-s-o-n-s-s-l whereas the bottom edge begins n-l-l-r-l-n-a.

It is not really necessary to understand this table of the Kings and Princes to practice Enochian magic, but it is interesting to know where the letters in the border of the Table of Practice come from. Also, it illustrates very clearly that the Enochian magic of the seven Kings (which is linked to the seven traditional wandering bodies of astrology) is an essential component of the Enochian magic of the Watchtowers and Keys as it was received by Kelley using the Holy Table. In Enochian magic based on the Golden Dawn system, the importance of the Kings is not understood.

The smaller table at the center of the Table of Practice consists of twelve Enochian letters. Its pattern is the same as that of the twelve stones on the breastplate of the high priest of ancient Israel: four rows and three columns. These twelve letters relate to the twelve tribes, the twelve gates of New Jerusalem, the twelve overt permutations of Tetragrammaton, the twelve signs of the zodiac, and the twelve Enochian names of God that appear on the middle rows of the Watchtowers. Unfortunately, this relationship is not always clear in Dee's manuscripts.

The letters on the central table (3 x 4) of the Holy Table of Practice are extracted from the middle of the 7 x 12 table of the Kings and Princes. I have highlighted them in boldface type to make them easier to locate.

which appears in Liber Mysteriorum Quinta Appendix, saying "Casaubon's rendering is quite plainly in error. The letters that border the top and bottom edges of the table are obviously written backwards, while those that make up the left and right hand borders are transposed. In addition to these errors the 4 x 3 square that takes up the centre is also given in a reversed order."¹⁶

Turner blames this inversion in Casaubon's plate on an error by the engraver. He suggests that such errors are common, and are due to the process of engraving itself. He cannot understand why so many Enochian scholars have failed to pick up on what is, to him, an obvious error, and blames it on the habit of occultists to blindly accept traditions in magic without examining their source material (which is certainly true).

After carefully considering the question, I have come to the conclusion that the plate in Casaubon is probably a correct representation of Dee's Table of Practice. The artist who executed the plate was working from Dee's actual Table, and in other respects he seems to have done a fairly accurate job. Why should he make the glaring mistake of inverting everything left to right? It does not seem reasonable, especially when the seven smaller tables, the Ensigns of Creation (which, in my opinion were actually painted onto the surface of Dee's Table of Practice) are not inverted, but occupy their correct position. If the engraver was going to invert the rest of the Table left to right, it is fair to assume he would also have inverted the Ensigns of Creation.

Turner may have failed to consider that the design for the Table of Practice that appears in Liber Mysteriorum Quinta Appendix is executed in Latin letters. Latin is read left to right. Enochian is read right to left. When an Enochian word is transposed into English, it must be mirror-inverted as we do with Hebrew words, which are also written and read right to left.

We may presume that the Enochian letters in the border of the Holy Table form words of power (even though these words are not known) or at least that their order is significant to the angels. Dee must have understood the need to invert everything when transposing the Latin letters in his manuscript design into the Enochian letters on the actual physical Table. Thus, it seems likely that Casaubon's engraver made no mistake, and the representation of the Table in the brass cut is correct.

The angels tell Dee concerning the Sigillum Aemeth: "We have no respect of cullours."¹⁷ However, of the Table they say the Enochian letters written around the edges must be painted in yellow oil paint, and that the oil used to mix the pigment should be "perfect oil, used in the church."¹⁸ Yellow must be significant in connection with Enochian letters. This color for the letters agrees with the color in which they first appeared to Kelley in a vision:

... it is to be Noted, that, when E.K. could not aptly imitate the forme of the Characters, or letters, as they were shewed: that they appeared drawn on his paper with a light yelow culor, which he drew the blak vpon, and so the yellow cullor disapearing, there remayned onely the shape of the letter in blak ...¹⁹

As a substitute for oil used in a church, which the modern Enochian magician will find hard to obtain, premixed oil paints should be consecrated before they are applied to the Table, which was apparently painted in several colors: "The table was painted in brilliant colours, primarily yellow, blue and red"²⁰

Beneath the Table on the floor of the scrying chamber a red silk carpet "two yards square" was laid. The four smaller seals of Aemeth (see below) within their protective containers of laurel were set upon the carpet, and the Table legs positioned on top of them, probably in depressions cut into the lids for added stability. These containers were probably disk-shaped, although they may have been spherical or hemispherical.

On top of the Table a simple white linen cloth was spread that hung down almost to the floor. Upon this was placed the wax Sigillum Aemeth and (if they were made of tin rather than painted directly on the tabletop) the seven Ensigns of Creation. Over the Sigillum Aemeth (and the tin Ensigns), a silk cloth with tassels at the corners was spread. This was colored an iridescent red and green, so that it changed from one color to the other when viewed from different angles. On top of this red-green silk cover, the scrying stone in its golden frame was placed directly upon the Sigillum Aemeth in the middle of the Table.

These are the explicit directions of the angels. However, there is some evidence that Dee did not adhere in every respect to these instructions. Casaubon in his preface speaks of a cushion and a candlestick with a taper. His reference is based on the June 25, 1584, entry in Dee's diary:

A voyce said, bring up the shew-stone.

Dee: I had set it down on the Table, behinde the Cushion with the Crosses, for I had furnished the Table with the Cloath, Candles, etc. as of late I was wont: Hereupon I set up the stone on the Cushion.²³

There appear to have been at least two candlesticks involved. The "Cushion with the Crosses" may have been placed upon the Sigillum Aemeth, and may have been a substitute for the red-green cloth with the tassels.

The cushion seems to have served as a support for the stone. The candles were probably placed on either side of the stone on the Table of Practice.

THE ENSIGNS OF CREATION

The seven complex talismans known as the "Arms" or "Ensigns of Creation" may either be painted directly onto the top of the Holy Table of Practice, or engraved on tablets of purified tin, which are then placed in a circle around the Sigillum Aemeth. It is evident from the reproduction of Dee's Table that appears in Casaubon that Dee painted these talismans directly onto the surface as an integrated part of the design.

Their placement is shown by the outlines on the illustration of the Holy Table, above (see p. 67). They are arranged radially so that they may be read from the point of view of the center of the table. Turner notes that they are to be placed seven inches from the edge of the Holy Table²⁴ although they are shown nearer the edge in the Casaubon engraving.

Precisely what these talismans are remains mysterious. A note in the appendix of Liber Mysteriorum Quintus states that the Arms are "proper to every King and Prince in their order."²⁵ This implies that they relate directly to the Kings and Princes of the planets on the Table of the forty-nine Good Angels, which appears in Dee's De Heptarchia Mystica.

The only occultist who appears to have made a serious attempt to understand these Ensigns is Thomas Rudd. He assigned the Ensigns in a circle clockwise according to the ascending kabbalistic order of the seven "planets"—Moon, Mercury, Venus, Sun, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn. To the letters in the Ensigns, he gave the names of various demons from the Goetia such as Buer, Belial, Gaap, and so on.²⁶

In briefly examining Dr. Rudd's system, Turner observes "I feel that we can safely disregard Dr. Rudd's hypotheses with regard to these matters."²⁵ I am in complete agreement with Turner here. Rudd's notion that all the numerous occurrences of the letter B in the Ensigns indicates the names of goetic demons whose names all start with B is, to put it mildly, absurd. The reasoning behind the complex structure of these seven talismans is unknown, and will likely remain unknown into the foreseeable future, since it is nowhere explained in the surviving record of the angelic conversations.

SIGILLUM AEMETH

The Sigillum Aemeth, or more properly Emeth (seal of truth), also called by the angels the Sigillum Dei (seal of God), is a wax disk that is placed in the center of the Holy Table. The crystal in its gold holder rests on top of the disk during scrying. Its making is described in the second book of Dee's Liber Mysteriorum, which is as yet unpublished. Concerning this sigil, the angel Uriel tells Dee: "This seal is not to be looked upon without great reverence and devotion."²⁶ It is to be made of "perfect wax," nine inches in diameter, and between an inch and a half and an inch and a quarter thick.

Sigillum Aemeth (front)

In March, 1582, Dee was instructed by the angel Michael to draw a circle and divide its edge into forty equal parts. There appeared to Kelley forty "white creatures, all in white silk long robes, and they were like children."²⁷ Each of these spirits opened its silk robe at the breast to reveal a letter and number, or sometimes a letter alone. Dee was instructed to write these in the spaces at the edge of the seal clockwise in order beginning at the top.

Within the outer circle of forty letters and numbers, Dee inscribed concentrically a heptagon, an interlocking heptagon, a smaller heptagon, and at the center an interlocking pentagram.

The larger heptagon is divided into forty-nine parts, and filled up with forty-eight letters (the final space contains a cross). There is probably a direct connection between these forty-nine spaces containing forty-eight letters and the forty-nine gates of understanding, of which only forty-eight may be opened. Each side of the larger heptagon contains one of the seven sacred names of God, which Dee derived from a forty-nine letter square.²⁸

This square was delivered to Kelley on March 20, 1582. The angels instructed Dee to read downward, and when he did so he discovered that the square consists of the names of seven familiar angels of the planets in the Kabbalah: Zaphkiel (Saturn), Zadkiel (Jupiter), Cumael (Mars), Raphael (Sun), Haniel (Venus), Michael (Mercury) and Gabriel (Moon). This same list appears in Cornelius Agrippa's Three Books of Occult Philosophy,²⁹ a work in Dee's library with which Kelley was familiar. Agrippa was also used by the angels as the source for the ninety-one geographical regions of the earth later in the angelic communications. When the rows of this square of planetary angels are read across from left to right, they yield the seven sacred names of God in the larger heptagon.

Just inside the larger heptagon appear seven names that are characterized by the angels as "names not known to the angels, neither can they be spoken or read of man. These names bring forth seven angels, the governors of the heavens next unto us. Every letter of the angels' names bringeth forth seven daughters. Every daughter bringeth forth her daughter, every daughter her daughter bringeth forth a son. Every son hath his son."³⁰

This seems confusing but is actually fairly simple. The seven names of God that not even the angels can pronounce are arranged in the form of a letter square that was scryed by Kelley on March 21, 1582:³¹

S	A	A	²⁶ / ₈	E	M	E ₃₀
B	T	Z	K	A	S	E ₃₀
H	E	I	D	E	N	E
D	E	I	M	O	L ₃₀	A
I ₃₀	M	E	G	C	B	E
I	L	A	O	I ²⁶ / ₈	V	N
I	H	R	L	A	A	L ²⁶ / ₈

This square is structured upon another set of seven planetary angels found in the literature of the Kabbalah:

Sabathiel (Saturn), Zedekiel (Jupiter), Madimiel (Mars), Semieliel (Sun), Nogahel (Venus), Cochabiel (Mercury), Levanael (Moon). Like the first square, it also is given in the Occult Philosophy of Agrippa.³² The names are based on the Hebrew names of the planets, with the suffix "el" added to make them the names of angels.

To extract the names of the seven new angels of the "heavens next unto to us" (that is, the spheres of the planets), read the letters down diagonally from the upper right to the lower left, starting with the letter S in the upper left corner of the square (thus, for Zabathiel: S, ab, ath, 21/8 = iel). To extract the names of the Seven Sons of Light, read the letters diagonally from upper left to lower right starting at the lower left corner of the square, but separated into individual names by each diagonal line (thus, I, Ih, Ilr, etc.). To extract the names of the Sons of the Sons, read diagonally up from the lower left to the upper right starting with the lower right corner of the square (thus, E, An, Ave, etc.). To extract the names of the Daughters of Light, read diagonally from upper left to lower right starting at the upper right corner of the square (thus, E(l), Me, Ese, etc.). To extract the names of the Daughters of the Daughters of Light, read diagonally from the upper right to the lower left starting at the upper left corner of the square (thus, S, Ab, Ath, etc.).

You will notice that some compromise and adjustment must be made in fitting the letters of the names to the letters in the square. The S in the upper left corner becomes the similar sounding Z in the name of the planetary angel Zabathiel. The fraction 21/8 signifies variously El, E or L separately, I, or Iel. When 8 appears alone, it stands for L. The numbers 26 and 30 also appear to stand for L. The Enochian spelling of the planetary angel of Mercury (Corabiel) differs from the spelling that appears in Agrippa (Cochabiel).

The names of the "governors of the heavens" are written between the points and in the center of the pentagram: Zabathi(el), Zedekiel, Madimiel, Semiel, Nogahel, Corabiel and Levanael.

The seven names written upon the the interlocking heptagram are the Seven Sons of Light, who are subject to Prince Hagonel.³³ Reading clockwise, they are: I, Ih, Ilr, Dmal, Heeoa, Beigia and Stimcul. The names on the smaller heptagon are the Seven Sons of the Sons and derived from the Sons of Light: E(l), An, Ave, Liba, Rocle, Hagon(el) and Ilemese. It is intended that these names have from one to seven letters. To accomplish this, it is sometimes necessary to double the "el" into a single compound character.

The names inside the points of the interlocking heptagram are those of the Daughters of Light: E(l), Me, Ese, Iana, Akele, Azdobn and Stimcul. Similarly, the names just outside the smaller heptagon are the names of the Daughters of the Daughters: S, Ab, Ath, Ized, Ekiei, Madimi and Esemeli.

On the back of the Sigil of Emeth, Uriel ordered Dee to inscribe a large circle-cross with double beams on the end of each arm. In the angles of the cross are written the four letters A, G, L, A clockwise from the upper left corner. AGLA is a Kabbalistic name of God compounded from the first letters in the Hebrew phrase "Ateh Gebor Le-Olahm Amen" (Thou art mighty forever, O Lord).

The angels ordered that four smaller wax seals be made that were identical to the Sigillum Aemeth. These were to be set under the legs of the Holy Table inside hollow wooden cavities. It is unclear whether these wooden containers, which were to be made of "sweet

Sigillum Aemeth (back)

wood" (laurel) were attached to the legs of the Table, or were disk-shaped wooden boxes upon which the legs rested. "The four feet of the table must have 4 hollow things of sweet wood, whereupon they must stand. Within the hollow spheres thy seals may be kept unperished. One month is all for the use thereof."³⁴

Dee considered the Sigillum Aemeth his most sacred possession, with the possible exception of the holy stone which he believed had been supernaturally materialized by the angels. He carried it with him on his travels through Europe, and brought it back intact to Mortlake. It has survived to the present, and may be seen in the British Museum along with the other relics of Dee's scrying.

SEALS OF THE ANGELIC MINISTERS

Dee is told by Carmara on November 17, 1582: "when thou invokest, thy feet must be placed upon these tables ... comprehending 42 letters and names. But with this consideration: that the character (which is the first of the 7 in the former book) be placed upon the top of the table, which thou wast and art and shall be commanded to have and use."³⁵

The tables mentioned by the angel Carmara are the circular seals of the forty-two angelic ministers that serve under each of the seven heptarchical Princes. Each seal is formed from forty-two letters extracted by Kabbalistic means from the Table of the forty-nine Good Angels. Each letter is the name, or stands for the name, of a ministering angel.

First, the letters are written in a letter square of six rows and seven columns. Then this square of forty-two is transformed into a ring, with each of the six rows written out in its own compartment, proceeding clockwise around the ring. Turner interprets the second part of Carmara's instructions quoted above to mean that Dee must place the seal or character of the Prince who rules the forty-two ministers on top of the circular table of the ministers. Accepting this interpretation for the moment, it is not perfectly clear whether the seal of the Prince must be a separate seal that fits within the ring of the forty-two ministers, or whether it may be inscribed within the ring upon the circular table of the forty-two ministers itself. The latter practice would be more convenient.

I am inclined to interpret the second part of Carmara's instructions to mean that the seal of the Prince who rules the day the scrying is performed should be placed on top of the Holy Table of Practice, beside the showstone in its golden frame. However, the wording is ambiguous, and may be taken either way.

No dimensions for the seals of the forty-two angelic ministers are given, but they probably should be large enough to place both feet together upon them. It may be that they are intended to be small, and that the feet should be set over the seals to cover them; or it may be that the feet should fit inside the ring of forty-two letters. If the feet are to fit inside the central space on the seals, a diameter of at least twelve inches is required. If the feet are merely to be set on top of the seals, a diameter of four inches will suffice. This is left to the discretion of the Enochian magician. (See Chapter Nine, where the seals of the Princes and the tables of their Ministers are shown.)

THE HOLY LAMEN

On March 10, 1582, Dee received from an angel who called himself Uriel an irregular triangular figure filled with obscure characters. This was to be his personal symbol of authority, called a Lamen in ritual magic (Dee spelled it "Lamyne"). It was out of keeping with the rest of the Enochian symbols, being unbalanced and seemingly not based on a letter-number system of derivation. Indeed, it had a very goetic look.

At a later date the angel Il declared to Dee that this first Lamen was "false and divilish" and that the angel who had represented himself as Uriel was an impostor. Another Lamen was revealed to Dee, and is represented in Dee's Liber Mysteriorum Quinta Appendix.

This true Lamen is composed of eighty-four Enochian letters inscribed upon a symbol that consists of a square tilted up on its corner, within another square which it touches at the corners, which in turn is set inside a third square. It is to be drawn on a piece of paper four inches by four inches. The Enochian letters should be done in yellow oil paint. I suggest that the background be alternate colors of red and blue, to harmonize the Lamen with the Holy Table.

Ideally, this Lamen should be placed in a gold frame so that it may be hung around the neck on a gold chain, with the letters clearly visible. A frame similar to a small picture frame with a glass front would reveal the letters while at the same time protecting the Lamén from damage. However, none of this is specified by the angels, so the exact form of the frame and its material is at the discretion of the maker.

John Dee's Second Lamén

The angel Carmara tells Dee that the Lamén comprehends "the form of thy own name."³⁶ Dee, who was skilled in ciphers, was unable to locate any trace of his name in the form of letters on the Lamén.

Dee: The character or lamén for me was noted that it should contain some token of my name. And now in this accounted the true character of dignification, I perceive no peculiar mark or letters of my name.

Uriel: The form in every corner considereth your name.

Dee: You mean there to be a certain shadow of Delta?

Uriel: Well.³⁷

By "Delta" Dee means the Greek letter Delta, which he was in the habit of substituting for his name in his magical diaries. It is not clear to me how a Delta may be extracted from the corners of the Lamén, unless it is the triangular spaces created between the central and middle squares. Also, there are three Enochian letters in each corner of the middle square. These form a triangle and might be considered a "shadow of Delta."

Since there seems to be no specific occurrence of Dee's name in the letters of the Lamén, it may be used as a general Lamén in all Enochian magic. To make it personal, the magician should write his or her magical name on the back of the square of paper where the Lamén is drawn and colored. The magical name is the name given to the magician during group initiation, or received psychically during solo practice, and represents the magical self of the magician.

If there are any Enochian magicians foolish enough to deliberately seek to evoke the evil spirits or demons of the Great Table, it would be appropriate for them to use the first goetic version of Dee's lamén, and to write their magical name on the back to personalize it. Since the sole function of this first lamén is in goetic theurgy, it did not seem necessary to reproduce it in this book. Those determined to go to the Devil in their own fashion will find the goetic lamén in Turner's Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee.

THE TABLES OF THE KINGS

The Tables of the Kings are to be painted on flat disks of laurel ("sweet wood") small enough that they can be held in the hand during ritual work. Each consists of the seal of the King (a geometric sigil with the name of a related Son of the Sons of Light written upon it in Latin characters) surrounded by a ring containing the name of the King, which in turn is surrounded by an outer ring containing seven letters (or numbers), some of which are reversed left to right. The letters of the outer ring appear to be related by some unknown cipher system to the letters in the name of the King.

Unfortunately, Dee does not describe the method by which the letters on the outermost ring are derived. He refers to them only as the "characters and words annexed to the Kings' names in the outer circumference of the great circle or globe."²⁸ This would not have mattered had he drawn all seven of the tables of the Kings, but he left only a single example in the margin of his manuscript.

Round Table of King Babalel

It seems fairly obvious that the letters in the outermost ring of the table relate directly to the letters in the name of the King. Babalel's name contains two Bs, two As, two Ls and one E. The outer ring contains two Ss, two Rs, two odd characters that look like reclining 6s, and one inverted P. However, I have not been able to determine the method of this cipher. For this reason, it is not possible to perfectly re-create the other six tables of the Kings. They may be made with the outer rings blank so that, if in the future the method for deriving the outer characters is discovered, they may be filled in on the tables.

THE USE OF THE FURNITURE

Most, if not all, of the furniture and tools described above were used by Dee and Kelley at each scrying session. They certainly employed the Holy Table of Practice, the angelic showstone, the Ensigns of Creation, the single large Sigillum Aemeth and its four smaller replicas under the legs of the table. Dee probably wore the Lamén and ring at each communication with the angels. He and Kelley may have worked with their feet upon the circular seals of the forty-two angelic Ministers of the Princes. If these seals of the Ministers were employed, they would probably have been used in turn on the days ruled by the Princes. However, I have seen no evidence that these seals of the Ministers were ever employed by Dee.

In the Golden Dawn system of Enochian magic, which is the most prevalent form of Enochian magic worked in modern times, all of the above instruments are completely ignored. This simplified the Enochian system of the Golden Dawn, but was a serious oversight on the part of its creator (probably MacGregor Mathers).

I strongly recommend that anyone who is serious about the practice of Enochian magic construct the Holy Table, the Sigillum Aemeth with its four lesser counterparts, the seven Ensigns of Creation (if these are not painted on the surface of the Table itself), the ring, the Lamén, the seven seals of the forty-two Ministers (to be placed under the feet during scrying in the crystal on the corresponding days of the week), and the seven round tables of the Kings. This is the basic minimum requirement for Enochian magic as it was delivered by the angels to Dee through Kelley.

CHAPTER SEVEN

The Enochian Language

THE TONGUE OF THE ANGELS

The force that empowers Enochian magic is the Enochian language. The angels claimed that this was the actual language spoken in heaven before the expulsion of Adam from Paradise. When Adam entered the world and time began, said the angel Gabriel, he could not speak. He had forgotten the angelic tongue spoken by him in his innocence. He "began to learn of necessity" the primal form of Hebrew, which is not the same form that Hebrew takes in historical times, although it did share the same basic division of letters into groups of three, seven and twelve.

The true pronunciation of this primal Hebrew has been lost, which is why Hebrew does not carry the same occult force it originally possessed. However, even the primal Hebrew spoken by Adam could not begin to compare with the authority and might of the tongue of the angels: "for as this Work and Gift is of God, which is all power, so doth he open it in a tongue of power, to the intent that the proportions may agree in themselves."¹

According to the angels, the Enochian language is able to express the primal essence of things directly.

In this language, every letter signifieth the member of the substance whereof it speaketh. Every word signifieth the essence of the substance. The letters are separated, and in confusion: and therefore, are by numbers gathered together, which also signify a number. For as every greater containeth his lesser, so are secret and unknown forms of things knit up in their parents. Being known in number, they are easily distinguished, so that herein we teach places to be numbered, letters to be elected from the numbered, and proper words from the letters, which signify substantially the thing that is spoken of in the center of the Creator.²

When the patriarch Enoch was taken up into heaven alive, he was instructed in the primal language of the angels, and learned to speak it. For this reason it is called Enochian, being the tongue taught to Enoch. In order to work the magic of the Watchtowers, it is necessary to be able to sound Enochian letters and speak the Keys in the original Enochian. The Keys are of little power when voiced in English.

THE ENOCHIAN ALPHABET

The Enochian alphabet is written from right to left and has twenty-one letters, rather than the twenty-two of Hebrew. This allows the letters to be divided into three groups of seven. Three and seven are magically potent numbers. Three is the number of the holy trinity in its numerous forms in different religions. Seven is the number of the traditional planets of astrology (which include the Sun and Moon). These are the seven "lights" that rule the twelve names of God that rule the ninety-one geographical spirits on the Great Table of the Watchtowers.

The Germanic rune alphabet known as the futhark is divided into three families or clans of eight runes each. This threefold division is so ancient, it may be coeval with the invention of runes. Each clan, or aett, takes its name from the first rune in the clan, which is regarded as its patriarch. The structure of the Enochian alphabet appears to be very similar, except that each family of Enochian letters contains seven members. We know the Enochian alphabet has a threefold division because the names of the letters were revealed to Kelley in three groups of seven.³

Donald Laycock points out that all the letters in the Enochian names for the Enochian letters total sixty-four, a number that may have significance as a magic square. Enochian appears to be an alphanumeric cipher system rather than a normally evolved language. It is possible that the names for the letters were generated by letter squares similar to those so common throughout Enochian magic, although no one has proposed how this may have been accomplished.

The names, shapes and ordering of the letters of the alphabet we can be fairly confident about, because the letters were revealed to Kelley in a vision on May 6, 1983, as recorded in his own manuscript diary Liber Logaeth.⁴ They appeared on the page before him in a "light yellow cullor" and Kelley traced their outlines exactly before this supernatural color faded. Despite the fact that Kelley traced out each letter to ensure absolute accuracy, the common Enochian typeface used today contains several serious inaccuracies. For the table of the Enochian alphabet given here, and the other illustrations in this work, I have created a completely new Enochian typeface in both print and script characters that I call Madimi. It more accurately represents the shapes of the letters that Kelley received from the angels.

Particular notice should be taken of the small dot in the corner of the letter Pal, which is transliterated into English as x. This dot, which seems to be similar to the dot in the lowercase Latin letter i, is invariably overlooked when the Enochian alphabet is reproduced. Yet it cannot be a mere blemish in the manuscript, because it appears in both the set of letters transmitted to Kelley on May 6, which may be called formal or print letters, and in the less detailed set of letters recorded by Dee in pen, which may be called Enochian cursive or script.

In the standard Enochian typeface used in Regardie's Golden Dawn and elsewhere, the letter Veh (c/k) is shown as two completely separate parts. This is wrong. Also, the letter Med (o) appears as two strokes that curve in opposite directions. The strokes should curve in the same direction. In the standard typeface the letter Gal (d) has two appendages that curve in opposite directions. The bottom appendage should be straight. By the same token, the letter Or (f) has two straight appendages in the standard typeface, whereas the lower appendage should be crescent. The letter Pal (x) is shown as a simple right angle in the standard typeface, but the horizontal bar should project beyond the vertical bar on the left side. The letter Fam (s) appears as two separate crescent strokes in the Golden Dawn, but it is shown in both the print and script versions, as well as in the engraving of the Table of Practice in Casaubon, as a single connected figure. Finally, the letter Ceph (z) is almost identical in the standard typeface to the Latin letter P, but the upper point of the crescent should project well past the vertical bar on the left.

I point out these serious errors in the shapes of the Enochian letters that appear in books (including my own books, in those cases where I allowed the Golden Dawn typeface to be used) because this is a matter that is never questioned. Although I have stylized the letters for my Madimi font, you may be certain that the significant features of the letters are accurately presented.

ENOCHIAN NUMEROLOGY

What is uncertain is the numerical value of each letter. Robert Turner suggests that the initial letter Pa (b) has a value of seven, because seven is the most important number in the early Enochian communications, and Pa is the most common and most important letter.⁵ Why else would it be set in the corners of the Table of Practice, except to stand for the sevenfold magic of the angelic heptarch? Why else would it head the names of the 49 good angels of the heptarch?

We may speculate that the reason the Enochian alphabet is headed by the letter B is because this is the first letter in the first word of the first book of the Bible. The Hebrew Genesis begins with the word "BeReshit," which translates "In the beginning." If the first Enochian letter does have a value of seven, the values of the remaining letters do not seem to follow any logical order, as do the letters of Hebrew. A system of numerical values can easily be imposed on the Enochian alphabet, but this would not be a natural part of Enochian magic.

Laycock postulated the letters that stand for the numbers from one to nine, based on their occurrence in the Enochian Keys.⁶ When we add in Turner's B, we get this list:

L = 1	S = 4	B = 7
V = 2	O = 5	P = 8
D = 3	N = 6	M = 9

It is simple to produce higher numbers by combining these letters if some positioning system is used to indicate powers of ten, but this is not the system employed by the Enochian angels. For example, the number 12 is not, as we might expect, LV—it is OS. The number 33 is PD. The number 456 is CLA. No one has yet been able to make sense of this strange numeration. Therefore, numbers can be used in Enochian magic where these have previously been generated by the angels, but it is dangerous for the modern Enochian magician to generate new numbers, since it is impossible to be certain of their meaning.

PRONUNCIATION OF ENOCHIAN WORDS

Enochian names are uncommonly difficult to pronounce, and also very hard to remember, because the arrangement of their letters appears almost random. This results in strange little consonant clusters that never occur in English or any other European language. For example, the name of the demon Tplabc would puzzle most speakers, as would that of the angel RxnL. Enochian names are generated by various systems of magic squares. Their significance, and thus their power, arises from the placement of the letters in the name upon those squares.

This is not the case with actually Enochian words, which usually may be vocalized in the normal way without tripping up the tongue. Enochian words appear to constitute a true language with its own odd rules of syntax, although there are numerous exceptions to the rules. The verb conjugations are often irregular. For example, the present tense of the verb "to be":

I am	zir, zirdo
we are	gea (?)
you are	geh
he/she/it is ...	i
they are	chiis, chis, chi

There is no form for "we are" in the Enochian text transmitted to Dee and Kelley. None of the verb declensions are complete. I have conjectured gea, but Enochian is so irregular there is only a slight chance that this is the correct form. This limitation of the language led Crowley to coin a number of Enochian words for use in his personal system of magic. Crowley's new words have, through decades of use, acquired a certain respectability.

Eventually, if Enochian is ever to attain the usefulness of a true language, someone with extensive linguistic training will have to radically expand its vocabulary.

Concerning the structure of the language, Laycock states, "there is nothing strikingly un-English about the grammar: no trace of the construct case or irregular plurals of Hebrew or Arabic, no clear indication of multiple cases or complex verb forms, as in Latin and Greek."⁷ He goes on to say that the order of the words is similar to English. This is what we might expect if Enochian were drawn from the unconscious mind of Edward Kelley, who knew little Latin and no Greek or Hebrew (although he was able to transmit Greek dictated to him by the angels, who used it as a means to communicate privately with Dee through his scriber without Kelley knowing what was discussed).

The more I study Enochian, the more I am inclined to believe that the angels were autonomous residents of the unconscious, not of Kelley, but of Dee himself. They were able to draw upon Dee's extensive knowledge of ciphers, his vast literary scholarship, and his language skills, to construct the system of Enochian magic and the Enochian language. In my opinion they used Kelley merely as an instrument for communicating with Dee's conscious mind. This radical hypothesis explains how Kelley was able to deliver the Enochian teachings, so many of which are completely beyond his conscious intellectual capability. It presupposes that the angels were able to link Dee's unconscious mind with that of Kelley in some mysterious way. It also explains how Dee was able to make sense out of the convoluted angelic teachings (they were based on his own thoughts and studies), and shows why on several occasions the angels referred to Dee and Kelley as two parts of a single whole.

However, if the Enochian language was the product of Dee's unconscious, we would expect it to be more consistent. Dee's abilities as a linguist were extensive. Perhaps the irregularities in the grammar can be explained by the complex method of transmission and the source. Dee's conscious mind was uncommonly well ordered, but his unconscious may have been less linear.

THE GOLDEN DAWN METHOD

The technique used by the members of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn to pronounce Enochian names was straightforward. Regardie sums it up succinctly in his introduction to the Enochian teachings in the Order papers: "for practical purposes, the language is pronounced by taking each letter separately, whenever a lack of vowels renders it necessary. But, with a little practice, the pronunciation will come instinctively when the student wants it. 'Z' is always pronounced 'Zod' with a long 'o.'"⁸

The leader of the Golden Dawn, S. L. MacGregor Mathers, wrote concerning the pronunciation of Enochian:

Briefly, regarding the pronunciation of the Angelical Language, thou shalt pronounce the consonants with the vowel following in the nomenclature of the same letter in the Hebrew Alphabet. For example, in [the Hebrew letter] Beth, the vowel following "B" is "e" pronounced AY. Therefore, if "B" in an Angelic Name precede another as in "Sobha" [whose, or whom], thou mayest pronounce it "Sobeh-hah." "G" may be either Gimel or Jimel (as the Arabs do call it) following whether it be hard or soft. This is the ancient Egyptian use, whereof the Hebrew is but a copy, and that many times a faulty copy, save in the Divine and Mystical Names, and some other things.

Also "Y" and "I" are similar, also "V" and "U," depending whether the use intended be vowel or consonant. "X" is the ancient Egyptian power of Samekh; but there be some ordinary Hebrew Names wherein "X" is made Tzaddi.¹

One of the three original founders of the Golden Dawn, Wynn Westcott, inserted the following note into one of his rituals:

In pronouncing the Names, take each letter separately. M is pronounced Em; N is pronounced En (also Nu, since in Hebrew the vowel following the equivalent letter Nun is "u"); A is Ah; P is Peh; S is Ess; D is Deh.

NRFM is pronounced En-Ra-Ef-Em or En-Ar-Ef-Em. ZIZA is pronounced Zod-ee-zod-ah. ADRE is Ah-deh-reh or Ah-deh-er-reh. TAASD is Teh-ah-ah-ess-deh. AIAOAI is Ah-ee-ah-oh-ah-ee. BDOPA is Beh-deh-oh-peh-ah. BANAA is Beh-ah-en-ah-ah. BITOM is Beh-ee-to-em or Beh-ee-teh-oo-em. NANTA is En-ah-en-tah. HCOMA is Heh-co-em-ah. EXARP is Eh-ex-ar-peh.²

In another place Westcott mentions that the name OOMDI should be pronounced "Oh-Oh-Meh-Deh-ee."³

Following these directions literally, beginners in Enochian magic sometimes attempt to pronounce each individual Enochian letter, even where there is no need. The advice of Regardie that the letters be pronounced separately "wherever a lack of vowels renders it necessary" should be borne firmly in mind.

THE METHOD OF DEE AND KELLEY

The members of the Golden Dawn overlooked the directions in Dee's diaries concerning the correct pronunciation of the Enochian language. As a rule of thumb, wherever possible, Enochian should be pronounced as you would pronounce English. Only where unnatural consonant clusters in the names make this impossible should individual letters be sounded. Effectively, the names are made pronounceable by the addition of vowels in somewhat the same way that written Hebrew, which consists solely of consonants, is voiced by the insertion of vowel marks.

Dee left scattered phonetic keys in the section of the diaries dealing with the Enochian language. He used "dg" to indicate soft "g" and "s" to indicate soft "c." In several places he indicates that "ch" is to be pronounced "k." The word ds (who, which, that) is pronounced "di-es." The letter "z," as Regardie observed, is to be pronounced "zod" where it cannot be merged with the rest of the word, but not always.

For example, the name of the angel Zaxanin would be vocalized as it is in English, but the word znurza (swear; swore) should be pronounced "zod-nur-za." By way of contrast, Aleister Crowley, who learned the pronunciation of Enochian in the Golden Dawn and sounded every letter, voiced this word "zod-en-ur-re-zod-a." Besides being awkward, this is clearly contrary to Dee's practice.

Donald Laycock, who provides the most complete directions on the pronunciation of Enochian⁴ gives the general rule "consonants as in English, vowels as in Italian." Unfortunately, this is likely to be of limited use to those who do not speak Italian. He goes on to explain that this means "u" should be pronounced as in "put," not as in "but," and also states that in Dee's time the "r" would always be pronounced wherever it occurs.

It should be noted that in Elizabethan times it was a common fashion to substitute "v" and "u," and also "i" and "j." In places I have exchanged the "v" that occurs in Dee's original spelling for a "u" to render pronunciation easier. In the Enochian alphabet "v" and "u" are both indicated by the letter Van. When this letter occurs at the beginning of a word, it is written "v" when followed by a vowel, but "u" when followed by a consonant.

THE TRUE FORM OF ENOCHIAN

The bottom line on the pronunciation of Enochian is that no one really knows what pronunciation Dee and Kelley used, let alone how the angels intended the language to be pronounced. Kelley undoubtedly heard it spoken correctly by the angels, and probably transmitted an accurate version to Dee. But Dee's phonetic notations are makeshift and haphazard. One thing we know for certain is that the members of the Golden Dawn and Aleister Crowley spoke Enochian incorrectly.

An expert linguist with a knowledge of how Elizabethan English sounded, and what accents were current near London and in the county of Worcestershire (where Kelley grew up), who studied Dee's phonetic guides carefully, could probably make a fairly close approximation of the Enochian language spoken by Dee. The rest of us will have to content ourselves with a less accurate version. We can take some comfort in the knowledge that, no matter how badly we mispronounce Enochian words, we are almost certain to be closer to the original than MacGregor Mathers or Aleister Crowley, who both used Enochian magic with good results.

CHAPTER EIGHT

The Heptarchia Mystica

THE ANGELIC HEPTARCHY

In 1582, Edward Kelley scribed the complete system of angel magic that is recorded in Dee's manuscript De Heptarchia Mystica. This was one of the works found in the secret drawer of Dee's chest fifty-four years after Dee's death, and for this reason it escaped inclusion in Casaubon's A True and Faithful Relation. Its neglect has continued down to the present. Although the magic of the angelic heptarchy is an integral part of Enochian magic, it was completely ignored by the Golden Dawn, and consequently by Aleister Crowley, who learned his Enochian magic from the Golden Dawn. Most modern Enochian magicians rely on these three sources, and seem at a loss to know what to do with the heptarch.

A heptarchy is a government of seven rulers. The word had particular meaning for Dee as an Englishman and historian. Anglo-Saxon England was composed of seven kingdoms between A.D. 449 and 828. This group of seven kingdoms was called the Heptarchy. Seven has great occult significance because there are seven wandering bodies that rule the heavens in ancient astrology. The seven astrological planets also rule the Earth through the seven days of the week.

The divine authority of the seven planets is recognized in Christian mythology. They are the seven stars held in the right hand of Christ (Revelation 1:16) and the seven lamps of fire that burn before the throne of God, who are also called the seven Spirits of God (Revelation 4:5). Each planet is thus a ruling angel. The imagery in Revelation plays a large role in the Enochian teachings, as I have tried to show in my book Tetragrammaton.¹

THE TABLE OF THE FORTY-NINE GOOD ANGELS

In the Enochian heptarchy, the seven spheres of the planets are ruled by seven angelic Kings. Each King has a Prince, who is the active power of the King. Under each Prince are five Nobles. The names of these forty-nine angels begin with the letter B, which may represent the number seven. The names were revealed to Kelley letter by letter upon a complex table in the shape of a cross with seven separate parts.²

Kelley received this sevenfold cross on April 29, 1582. Seven angels approached holding seven square tables. Each square table was composed of forty-nine cells, and each cell had a letter and a number written in it. The ordering of these letters and numbers appears to be random. The first table was filled with the letter B. The angels used this as the center of the cross, and joined the other six tables to its sides. Moving around the central table clockwise, tables two and three were compressed together and joined to the top, table four was joined to the right, tables five and six were compressed and attached to the bottom, and table seven was joined to the left edge of the central table.

It was then a simple matter to extract the names for the forty-nine good angels of the planets. Starting with the cell in the central table of the cross that contained B1, Dee looked to the cell in the second table that also contained the number one, and found there the letter A.

In the third table of the cross, the cell with the number one contained the letter L. In the fourth table the cell with the number one contained the letter I. In the fifth, the letter G. In the sixth, the letter O. In the seventh, the letter N. These seven letters composed the name of the first of the heptarchical Kings, BALIGON.

In this way, Dee extracted in order forty-nine angels, which he arranged in the form of a ring that was divided into seven parts, each containing seven names. These parts of the ring were associated with the seven planets in an apparently random order. Dee called this table the Tabula Angelorum Bonorum 49.

Tabula Angelorum Bonorum 49

THE MINISTERS OF THE PRINCES

Each Prince also has a hierarchy of forty-two Ministers who rule the hours of the day in six groups of seven Ministers, each group ruling four hours of the twenty-four. Every one of these forty-two Ministers is represented by a single letter, so that each of the six groups collectively has a single name that is composed of seven letters. The names of the forty-two Ministers under each Prince are "extracted by a laboriously complex method from the Table of the forty-nine Good Angels."³ In this way they are composed of the names of the angels. Fortunately, it is not necessary to know this method to use the Ministers.

The angels informed Dee that the King of each planet and his subordinate Prince rule the entire day associated with the planet of the King. Curiously, the serving Prince of each King is associated with a different planet on the Tabula Angelorum Bonorum. The six ranks of seven Ministers rule four-hour periods in succession, beginning at midnight.⁴ To take the Ministers of Prince Blisdon (Jupiter) who serves King Bnaspol (Mercury), the ruler of Wednesday, as an example:

E L G N S E B	(hours 1-4)
N L I N Z V B	(hours 5-8)
S F A M L L B	(hours 9-12)
O O G O S R S	(hours 13-16)
N R P C R R B	(hours 17-20)
e r g d b a b	(hours 21-24)

The individual letters that represent the Ministers were each expanded into a seven-letter name by a simple process of permutation.⁵ This technique is common throughout Enochian magic. The letter of each Minister is moved to the front of its rank, and the remaining six letters written behind it. To take as an example the Ministers of Prince Blisdon, shown above:

ELGNSEB:

Elgnseb, Lgnsebe, Gnsebel, Nsebelg, Sebelgn, Ebelgns, Belgnse

NLINZVB:

SEVEN AND TWENTY-FOUR

It should be noted that each group of seven Ministers rules 240 minutes. These numbers have significance with respect to the throne of God described in Revelation 4:4-5:

And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold.

And out of the throne proceeded lightnings and thunders and voices: and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God.

The twenty-four Elders rule over time: specifically the twelve hours of the day and the twelve hours of the night. They are measured, or governed, by the seven lamps before the throne, which are the seven planets. In the heavens, the planets govern the time divisions of the twelve houses by moving through them. On earth, the planets are represented by the days of the week, and in magic are assigned the twenty-four hours of the day to rule in a week-long cycle. The planets repeat themselves in twenty-four sets of seven over the 168 hours of the week. The assignment of the forty-two Ministers to the hours in groups of seven, each of which rules 240 minutes, is another expression of this ancient temporal relationship between twenty-four and seven.

THE GRIMOIRE

The grimoire portion of De Heptarchia Mystica is somewhat confused in the manuscript. It seems to have been deliberately scrambled by the angels during its transmission. However, it can be reassembled with a fair degree of confidence. It is divided into seven sections. Each part concerns a day of the week, the angelic King who rules that day, and the planet of that day. Serving each King is the Prince of a different (but presumably related) planet, and the forty-two Ministers of that Prince. The single-letter names of the Ministers are arranged in a square of six rows, each row containing the seven letters that rule the 240-minute segment of the day of the King whom their Prince serves.

In addition to these angelic names, each part of the grimoire contains the circular seal of the forty-two Ministers of the Prince, the seal or character of the Prince himself, and a seal containing the name of one of the seven Sons of the seven Sons of Light. These seals that contain the names of the Sons are probably the seals of the Kings.

You will recall from Chapter Six that the names of Sons of the Sons were derived by reading diagonally on a letter table received by Kelley on March 21, 1582. You will also recall that the character of the Prince is to be placed on the Table of Practice (or perhaps on the circular seal of the Ministers, depending on the interpretation), and the circular seal of the Ministers is to be put under the feet of the magician during the invocation of the angels into the stone.

THE FIRST TABLE OF THE KINGS AND PRINCES

The relationship between the Kings and the Princes has a basis elsewhere in the angelic communications. It results from the first form of the letter square from which the Enochian letters on the Holy Table of Practice were derived. This letter square is composed of the names of the Kings and Princes (minus the initial B in each name) written side by side in a square of seven rows and twelve columns. I gave the second, rationalized form of this table in Chapter Six while explaining how the Enochian letters on the Table of Practice were derived. Shown here is an earlier form in which each King was not aligned with its own Prince.⁶

(7th Prince)	lonega	nogila	(1st King)
(1st Prince)	ogonro	legobo	(2nd King)
(2nd Prince)	sefafe	lelaba	(3rd King)
(3rd Prince)	onomtu	ropheny	(4th King)
(4th Prince)	nodsil	lopsan	(5th King)
(5th Prince)	segror	nespan	(6th King)
(6th Prince)	seglar	azamul	(7th King)

First Table of the Kings and Princes

The relationship between the King and Prince on each row of this table is the same relationship that exists in Dee's heptarchical grimoire. The letters in the names of this earlier table are read from right to left. For example, Bnaspol, the King of Mercury who rules Wednesday and is the fifth King on Dee's circular Tabula Angelorum Bonorum 49, is mated with the fourth Prince, Blisdon, who is the Prince of Jupiter. Why this odd relationship between the Kings and Princes exists is not clear, but at least there is a letter square to show that it was not a mistake.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE USE OF THE HEPTARCHY

In general preparation for the work, the magician should fast moderately and maintain a scrupulous cleanliness, both of the body and the clothing. The ritual place must also be kept clean and tidy. Alcohol, tobacco, drugs and sex should be avoided for at least a day before the ritual. Avoid all extremes of behavior. If a series of related rituals is undertaken, abstinence and chastity on the part of the magician will greatly increase the likelihood of success.

A general prayer for the success of the work should be spoken three times each day during the entire period of the ritual working: at dawn, at midday, and at sunset. Dee used the following prayer, which I have simplified somewhat, but the magician may compose an original prayer that perfectly expresses his or her attitude toward the work.

O Almighty, eternal, true and living God; O King of Glory; O Lord of Hosts; O Creator of Heaven and Earth, and of all things visible and invisible: grant unto your simple servant (N.) your manifold mercies.

I most humbly beseech you to have mercy upon me, to have pity upon me, to have compassion upon me, one who long since has faithfully and sincerely sought to obtain a portion of true knowledge and understanding of your laws and ordinances established in the natures and properties of your creatures.

And since it has pleased you, O God, of your infinite goodness, by your faithful and holy spiritual messengers, to deliver to me a true understanding and comprehension of the orderly form and manner of heptarchical magic, that I may have the use, counsel and help of your many good angels according to their functions and offices, I do most humbly beseech your divine Majesty to favor and forward my present endeavor in this work.

For the sake of your dearly beloved Son, Jesus Christ (O Heavenly Father) I ask that you grant to me this blessing and portion of your heavenly grace. Henceforth enable me and make me apt and acceptable in body, soul and spirit, so that I may always enjoy the friendly conversation and plain, sensible and perfect help, in both word and deed, of your mighty, wise and good spiritual messengers; especially blessed Michael, blessed Gabriel, blessed Raphael and blessed Uriel. Also, especially of those Ministers of the heptarchical mysteries, under the method of the seven mighty Kings and their seven faithful and princely ministers, with their subjects and servants to them belonging.

In your great mercy and grace, O Almighty God, confirm that you are the true and Almighty God, creator of heaven and Earth, upon whom I call and in whom I put my trust. And that your Ministers are true and faithful angels of light, with whom I deal by this heptarchical art.

Grant this prayer, O Heavenly Father, that I may be enabled to better serve you to your greater honor and glory. Grant this for the sake of your only begotten son, Jesus Christ.

Amen. Amen. Amen.'

ERECTING THE RITUAL CHAMBER

The magician lays the red silk carpet or its substitute on the floor of the ritual chamber, positions the four hemispherical cases of laurel that contain the four lesser duplicates of the Sigillum Aemeth, and sets the legs of the Table of Practice upon the disks holding the wax seals. The Table is oriented so that its top edge is in the east. Over the surface of the Table a plain linen undercloth is laid that hangs down almost to the carpet. The Sigillum Aemeth is placed on this cloth, in the exact center of the table. If tin plates are used for the seven Ensigns of Creation, these are spaced around the great wax seal of Aemeth as shown in the diagram of the tabletop. Otherwise, the Ensigns are painted directly upon the Table.

A smaller cloth of iridescent red-green silk with golden tassels at its corners is now laid over the Sigillum Aemeth and the Ensigns. The tassels should hang about midway down the legs of the Table. On top of this in the middle of the Sigillum Aemeth is set the scrying stone in its gold frame of four legs (in my opinion this frame should have three legs, but Dee illustrates it with four legs). A consecrated white candle in a single candlestick should be put in the middle of the eastern quarter of the Table to burn during the ritual.

On the edge of the red carpet to the west of the Table of Practice, the magician places the circular table of the forty-two Ministers who serve on the day of the ritual. He stands on this circle of letters during the invocations, and, when seated in the green wooden chair while scrying, rests his feet on it.

The seal of the Prince of the day, who rules the Ministers, is set in the middle of the western quadrant of the Table of Practice. (By another interpretation of Dee's text, this seal is placed on top of the circular table of the Ministers, and then the magician stands on both the seal and the table.)

During the invocations and scrying, the magician holds in his hand (probably the left hand) a circular disk of laurel on which is painted the seal of the King associated with the day. The seal is surrounded by a ring containing the seven letters in the name of the King of the day. A second outer ring contains corresponding cipher letters related to the letters in the name of the King.

Around the neck on a gold chain or silk thread the holy Lamen hangs so that it lies over the heart of the magician. The seal ring of Solomon is worn on the finger (probably the right index finger). Although no robe is mentioned in the manuscript, a simple robe of white linen would be appropriate for ritual work. The feet are best left bare, but this is not specified.

EXORDIUMS TO THE KINGS AND PRINCES

Standing on the circular table of the Ministers of the Prince who serves the King of the day, with the round table of the King in the left hand and the seal of the Prince on the Table of Practice, the magician speaks the Exordium to the Heptarchical King:

O noble King (N.), in this name and by whatever other names you are called or may truly be called (recite his other names, if known), and by your government, charge, disposition and kingly office, which is (briefly describe the office of the King), in the name of the King of Kings, the Lord of Hosts, the Almighty God, creator of heaven and earth and of all things visible and invisible, I invoke and summon you into this holy crystal stone. Amen.

O right noble King (N.), come now and appear with your Prince and his Ministers, and your subjects, clearly to my sight in a good and friendly manner to my comfort and help, to advance the honor and glory of Almighty God by my service. That by the wisdom and power of your kingly office and government I may be helped and enabled to attain my purpose, which is (state your purpose). Amen.

Come, O right noble King (N.), I say, come! Amen.⁸

After reciting the Exordium to the King, the magician speaks the Exordium to the Prince:

O noble Prince (N.), in this name and by whatever other names you are called or may truly be called (recite his other names, if known), and by your government, charge, disposition, office and princely dignity, which is (briefly describe the office of the Prince), in the name of Almighty God, the King of Kings, and for his honor and glory to be advanced by my faithful service, I invoke and summon you into this holy crystal stone. Amen.

I require you, O noble Prince (N.) to come now, and to show yourself visibly in a good and friendly manner, along with your Ministers, servants and subjects, to my comfort and help, that my purpose shall be well and truly fulfilled, which is (state your purpose) in Wisdom and Power according to the properties of your noble office. Amen.

Come, O noble Prince (N.), I say, come! Amen.⁹

These exordiums to the Kings and Princes have been modernized and edited to clarify their purpose. The spaces in the exordiums should be filled in using the information provided in the descriptions given in Chapter Nine. In a separate section of his manuscript, Dee listed specific characteristics and qualities of the individual Kings and Princes that are intended to be used in their invocation into the stone.

A portion of this material is composed of statements actually uttered by the spirits to Dee through Kelley.

These statements express essential aspects of the spirits. By repeating these statements, prefaced by the words "you have said," the magician demonstrates a true knowledge of the spirit. It is an ancient belief in magic that by reciting the acts and nature of a spirit, as well as voicing its name and describing its appearance, power is gained to command that spirit. Dee relied on this technique in his invocations.

Where several statements made by a spirit were recorded by Dee, I have selected only the most potent and characteristic. In a few instances no statements are given by Dee. I have supplied them from the descriptions of the spirits. These descriptions of the spirits, their functions, their alternative names and their statements must be incorporated into the appropriate places of the exordiums. It is this explicitly expressed knowledge of the names, descriptions, statements, and offices of the spirits that gives the magician power over them.

CLOSING THE RITUAL

After communicating with the angels through the medium of the scrying crystal and directing them according to the ritual desire, the magician speaks a general prayer of thanks to God, the King, and the Prince, then dismisses the angels from the stone in the name of the King of Kings, Almighty God. The candle is extinguished and the stone put away. The tasseled silk cloth is removed and the Sigillum Aemeth stored in a safe place, along with the seals and other instruments. If the Table of Practice is erected in a ritual temple where it will not be disturbed, it may be left covered by the white linen cloth and standing on its four wax seals and red carpet.

CHAPTER NINE

The Heptarchical Angels

THE KING OF KINGS

There is some confusion about the names and offices of the seven Kings. King Carmara, the first King to appear to Kelley, is related by Dee to both Monday (Moon) and Friday (Venus). The same is true of Prince Hagonel, the Prince who serves Carmara. Yet both Monday and Friday have Kings and Princes of their own whose names begin with B, in accordance with the system used for all the other names of the forty-nine good angels.

Dee states quite clearly concerning Baligon, the King of Friday and Venus, "he is the same mighty King, who is here first described by the name of Carmara."¹ Nevertheless, I am inclined to place Carmara in a position of superior authority over the other seven Kings, and similarly to place Hagonel in authority over the other seven Princes whose names start with B.

Carmara is pre-eminently a King of the Moon, which enjoys a special position in Enochian magic. Monday is the Enochian Sabbath, or holy day, on which Dee and Kelley received the majority of important angelic communications. Thus, in my opinion, Carmara is a kind of King of Kings (although this title, strictly speaking, is reserved for Jesus Christ), and Hagonel is a Prince of Princes.

Carmara tells Dee:

First cast thine eyes unto the general Prince, Governor or Angel that is principal in this world. Then place my name that thou hast already. Then the name of him that was showed thee yesterday (with the short coat). Then his power, with the rest of his six perfect ministers. With these three thou shalt work to a good end. All the rest thou may use to God's glory for every one of them shall minister to thy necessities.¹

The principal Governor of the world is probably Jesus Christ. After him in authority follows Carmara, followed by Hagonel, his Prince. Then come the six ranks of Ministers who serve Hagonel, with each rank containing seven members. "All the rest" would seem to be the seven Kings whose names begin with B, along with their Princes and Ministers.

I find it useful to think of Carmara acting as the general leader of the Kings under the name of King Blumaza, a name he assumes for his function as King of the Moon. Similarly, I regard Prince Hagonel as assuming the name of Prince Bagenol for his position of authority as the Prince of the Moon.

The cause of the confusion is Dee's identification of Carmara and Hagonel with the King Baligon (Venus) and Prince Bagenol (Moon), who rule Friday, but also with King Blumaza (Moon) and Prince Bralges (Saturn), who rule Monday. This dual identity, and indeed the very existence of Carmara and Hagonel, has never been satisfactorily explained. They would seem to be unnecessary to the system of heptarchical magic. Yet clearly the angels placed them in the position of highest importance.

THE COMING OF KING CARMARA

Carmara was called into the showstone by the archangel Uriel. He came with the appearance of a gracefully proportioned man dressed in a long purple robe (purple was the regal color of the Roman emperors) wearing a triple crown upon his head. Seven other spirits who took the form of men and subsequently declared themselves to be the seven heptarchical Princes waited on him. Uriel gave Carmara a rod divided into three parts, two of which were black (probably the ends) and one red. Concerning Carmara, Dee writes:

This King only was the orderer, or disposer of all the doctrines which I term Heptarchical, and first by calling the 7 Princes, and after that the 7 Kings: and by giving instructions for use and practice of the whole doctrine Heptarchical: for the first purpose and fruit thereof to be enjoyed by me ...²

We may assume that the Princes were summoned first because they are the active agents of the heptarchical magic. The Kings sit in authority over the Princes and command their actions, but do nothing directly. The Kings are the seats of power, and the Princes are their instruments.

Carmara revealed to Dee a flag on a pole. The pole had three points, similar to a crown, at its top. The obverse or front of the flag bore, on the right side, the image of a woman without arms standing in a dress. On the left side, it bore the large capital letters C and B, one above the other, inverted as in a mirror left to right. On the reverse of the flag were the Royal Arms of England, called by Dee "the flag old," which was the English flag from 1400-1603. It consists of four quarters, with two quarters diagonally opposite each containing three fleurs-de-lis (symbol of France), and the other two quarters each holding three reclining lions (lions passant guardant—symbol of England).

Carmara called this flag "the Sign of the Work." We can only speculate about its meaning, since it was never explained by the angels. The fact that the figure on it is female is significant, since all the other heptarchical angels are male (or, in some cases, male and female combined). Queen Elizabeth was the symbol of supreme authority in England in Dee's day. This image may represent her heavenly counterpart, the mysterious Mother of the angel Madimi, who is the same as the Queen of Heaven of Revelation 12:1. Perhaps she is shown without arms because she acts through her angelic agents, not directly. The C on the flag may signify the name Carmara, while the B may stand for the forty-nine good angels whose names all begin with B.

PRINCE HAGONEL AND HIS GREAT SEAL

After Carmara, Prince Hagonel appeared in the form of a man in a red robe. Dee notes that all the Princes have red robes, but the robe of Hagonel was shorter than the robes of the other Princes. Likewise, all the Princes have circlets of gold upon their heads rather than crowns. Hagonel held in the palm of his right hand "a round ring with a prick in the midst," which may mean a disk since Dee describes it as "hanging also over his middle fingers." Hagonel told Dee that this ring or disk was Hagonel's seal. It bore the name Barees. Dee drew it in the form of the symbol of the Sun (☉) in his manuscript.

All of the Princes together held up a great star with seven points which Dee called the "Heptagon Stellar." It seemed to Kelley to be made of copper, the metal of Venus. Dee drew this star in his manuscript. The seal of Hagonel was placed in its uppermost point. The name of the first Prince, Bornogo (Venus), who is Prince under King Bobogel (Sun) on Sunday, was written to the right of the uppermost point. The name of the second Prince, Befafes (Sun), who is Prince under King Babalil (Mars) on Tuesday, was written to the right of the second point, moving clockwise.

The Heptagon Stellar

This copper star appears to be the great seal of the heptarchical grimoire. It illustrates the correct order of the days for the material that follows. The days are to be ordered according to the order of the Princes on the ring of the forty-nine good angels: Bornogo (Sunday), Befafes (Tuesday), Butmono (Thursday), Blisdon (Wednesday), Brorges (Saturday), Bralges (Monday) and Bagenol (Friday). Dee adheres to this order in his presentation, with the exception of placing the angels of Friday (seventh Prince) ahead of the angels of Monday (sixth Prince). I believe this to be an error, and I have corrected it in the present chapter.

THE SONS OF LIGHT AND THEIR SONS

After the Princes present this great copper symbol, the servants of Prince Hagonel are presented. These are the "Sons of men and their Sons." The "Sons of men," Dee noted, are the same as the Sons of Light.

Sons of Light

I, Ih, Isr, Dmal, Heeoa, Beigia, Stimcul

Sons of the Sons

E(I), An, Ave, Liba, Rocle, Hagon(el), Ilemese

You will remember that the Sons of Light and their Sons were inscribed upon the heptagram and lesser heptagon of the Sigillum Aemeth, while the Daughters of Light and their Daughters (who are not mentioned here) were inscribed in the spaces inside the heptagram and lesser heptagon.

Both the Sons of Light and their Sons were described to Dee on March 21, 1582. The Sons of Light came as seven youths with bright, pleasant expressions, wearing white garments and white silk cloths on their heads that hung down like twisted rope in the back to touch the ground. Every one of them carried a metal ball in his hand. The first Son carried a ball of gold, the second silver, the third copper, the fourth tin, the fifth iron, the sixth quicksilver, and the seventh lead. All had round tablets of gold on their breasts that bore the letters of their names.

The Sons of the Sons came in the forms of small boys wearing purple gowns with long, hanging sleeves ("like priests' or scholars' gown-sleeves"), and purple cloths about their heads that hung in the back in twisted wreaths down to the ground. They had green triangular tablets on their breasts on which were written the letters of their names. Dee notes that the letters of the first Son of the Sons, El, were combined together into a single character. Sometimes only the E is used to represent this spirit. It should be noted that the "el" in the name Hagonel is also combined into a single character to produce six letters in this name.

THE KEY TO THE SEALS OF THE KINGS

The metal balls in the hands of the Sons of Light may be extremely important. I am inclined to believe that they are the key to the correct placement of the seals of the Kings (each of which contains a name of the Sons of the Sons) with the proper day and King. The planetary metal associated with the Son of Light who corresponds with the Son of the Sons on the seal of each King should be the same as the planetary metal of the Prince serving the King. If my speculation is correct, the relationship between the seals of the Kings and the Princes of the Kings would be as follows:

Sunday

1st Prince: Bornogo (Venus)

2nd King: Bobogel (seal of 3rd S. of S. Ave: copper)

Tuesday

2nd Prince: Befafes (Sun)

3rd King: Babalel (seal of 1st S. of S. E(I): gold)*

Thursday

3rd Prince: Butmono (Mars)

4th King: Bynepor (seal of the 5th S. of S. Rocle: iron)

Wednesday

4th Prince: Blisdon (Jupiter)

5th King: Bnaspol (seal of the 4th S. of S. Liba: tin)*

Saturday

5th Prince: Brorges (Mercury)

6th King: Bnapsen (seal of the 6th S. of S. Hagonel: quicksilver)

Monday

6th Prince: Bralges (Saturn)

7th King: Blumaza (seal of the 7th S. of S. Ilemese: lead)

Friday

7th Prince: Bagenol (Moon)

1st King: Baligon (seal of the 2nd S. of S. An: silver)*

The asterisks after the metals of the Sons of the Sons in the seals of the Kings are those that have been changed from the ones given in Dee's manuscript. The placement of the other four seals in the Heptarchia Mystica is in accord with this system I have proposed.

Below, I have allowed the seals of the Kings to remain in the days and with the Kings to which Dee assigned them in his Heptarchia Mystica. The key I have suggested above may be in error. Since so much of the structural basis for Enochian magic remains hidden, it is always dangerous to make changes, or to state emphatically that some portion of the system is incorrect.

THE ANGELS OF THE SEVEN DAYS

In the descriptions that follow, it should be noted that although I use the words of Dee's manuscript in many places, this is not a transcription of the Heptarchia Mystica, but my attempt to interpret and expand Dee's often cryptic comments, and to rationalize the structure of the grimoire.

*SundaySecond King: Bobogel (Sun)

He appeared in a black velvet coat, close round hose with velvet upperstocks overlaid with gold lace, wearing on his head a velvet hat-cap with a black feather in it. His cape hung rakishly from one shoulder. He wore his purse on a long thong around his neck that was tucked inside his girdle, and on the other side of his girdle an ornamental gilded rapier. Platform overshoes raised his silk slippers above the mud of the street. His beard was long, his manner ostentatious.

His office is the granting and distribution of all wisdom and science. He teaches philosophy, natural history, and a true understanding of the mysteries of the universe.

"It is not too late to learn."

First Prince: Bornogo (Venus)

He appeared in a red robe wearing a gold circlet upon his head, and showed his seal.

His is the art of transforming the corruption of nature into perfection. He teaches the knowledge of metals, and ministers under his king Bobogel the bestowing of all true learning that is grounded in wisdom.

"What thou desirest in me shall be fulfilled."

Seal of Prince Bornogo

The 42 Ministers of Bornogo

The first group of seven ministers appeared in costly formal clothing similar to that worn by King Bobogel. The other ranks were dressed as ruffians. The last group of seven appeared to be women from the front but men from the rear. They danced, leapt into the air, and kissed one another.

All came forward into a circle. The seven sages stood together. The first sage raised his right foot to reveal an L, the letter of his name. The rest did the same, each in his turn.

The first seven merged together into a flame and sank down into the transparent fiery globe of the new world. The second seven fell through the earth like drops of molten metal. The third seven clasped their hands together and dropped down in a dense smoke. The fourth seven joined together and fell like drops of water. The fifth seven fell down like hailstones. The last seven vanished away.

On another occasion when summoned by King Carmara these ministers came carrying a large round table over their heads. They laid it on the ground and stood around it. On the table before each minister was the letter of his name.

Tuesday

Third King: Babalel (Mars)

He appeared wearing a long white robe. The left sleeve was white and the right sleeve black. He seemed to stand upon the surface of water. A crown of gold adorned his head. On his forehead the letters of his name were written.

Seal of King Babalel: 4th S. of the Sons - Liba

The power of this king arises from the depths of waters. He is the mighty and wonderful ruler of waters.

"Glorify, praise and honor God."

Second Prince: Befafes (Sun)

He appeared in a long red feathered robe with a circlet of gold upon his head. Written on his golden girdle were the letters of his name. He opened the front of his robe, and appeared to be lame when he walked. His manner was noble and courteous.

Seal of Prince Befafes

He is the prince of the seas whose power is on the waters. He served Moses to punish Pharaoh of Egypt by closing up the Red Sea on the Egyptian army, and also was a servant of Solomon and the magician Michael Scot, who named this prince Mares. It may have been Dee's belief that it was this spirit who saved him and Kelley from drowning in the English Channel during a gale.* The Egyptians named him Obelison, that is, a pleasant deliverer.

"Use me in the name of God."

The 42 Ministers of Prince Befafes

The first rank of seven ministers had circlets of gold around their heads to indicate that they are Princes of the Waters. All of the ministers had the letters of their names written on their foreheads. The letters of the first seven fell down between their feet and were covered over with moving water.

The first seven took the water in their hands and threw it into the air. It became clouds. The second seven threw up the water, and it turned into hail and snow. Each rank in turn threw the water into the air. Then all dived into the water and vanished away.

These noble ministers are of great power, dignity and authority. Some measure the motions of waters and regulate the saltiness of the seas. Some give success in sea battles. Some rule the fishes and monsters of the deep. Some deliver up treasures and unknown substances from beneath the waves. In general they distribute God's judgments upon the waters that cover the globe.

Thursday

Fourth King: Bynepor (Jupiter)

He appeared in royal robes with a golden crown on his head. The power of this king is distributed throughout and sustains the general state and condition of things. He is in all, and all have their being by him. Although he had a beginning, he can never have an end. He is the workmanship of the word of God, only a single degree lower than the Vita Suprema (Highest Life). He is the Vita Superior (Higher Life), of whom it may be said: the Vita Infima (Lowest Life) is measured by your hands. He begins new worlds, new peoples, new royal dynasties, and new forms of government. Yet none of his power is of himself, but all comes from the name of God.

"Thou shalt work marvels by my workmanship in the Highest."

Third Prince: Butmono (Mars)

He appeared in a red robe with a golden circlet on his head.

All the beasts of the earth are embrued with the vital essence of this spirit, and take their living pattern from him, excepting only humankind, which is formed in the image of God. He knows the origin, the living, and the end of all beasts, and regulates them with the measure of time. His seal is their glory.

He came dressed in a robe of many colors, but predominantly red, and wore on his head a circlet of gold.

Seventh King: Blumaza (Moon)

He appeared as a man with a regal manner, wearing a red robe and a crown of gold.

Sixth Prince: Bralgas

He appeared in a red robe with a circlet of gold on his head. He is the last of the seven Princes who hold up the points of the Stellar Heptagon. Note: It seems clear to me from the text that Friday should be moved to the front of this list of the days of the week, ahead of Sunday, and that the days should be ordered according to the order of the Kings, not the order of the Princes (Friday, Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday, Wednesday, Saturday, Monday). I have tried to present the material as it is given in Dee's manuscript, but the manuscript is quite confused. It was necessary to restructure some of it.

CHAPTER TEN

The Great Table of the Watchtowers

THE FORTY-EIGHT GATES TO THE CITIES OF WISDOM

On April 12, 1584, at Cracow, the angel Nalvage (through Kelley) said, concerning Enochian magic:

Raphael that brought up the prayers descended: and he was full with the power, & spirit of God: and it became a Doctrine, such was never from the beginning: Not painted, or carved: filed, or imagined by man, or according to their imaginations, which are of flesh: but simple, plain, full of strength, and the power of the holy Ghost: which Doctrine began, as man did, nakedly from the earth: but yet, the image of perfection. This selfsame Art is it, which is delivered unto you an infallible Doctrine, containing in it the waters, which runne through many Gates: even above the Gate of Innocency, wherein you are taught to finde out the Dignity and Corruption of nature: also made partakers of the secret Judgements of the Almighty to be made manifest, and to be put into execution.... I am therefore to instruct and inform you, according to your Doctrine delivered, which is contained in 49 Tables. In 49 voyces, or callings: which are the Natural Keyes, to open those, not 49 but 48 (for One is not to be opened) Gates of understanding, whereby you shall have knowledge to move every Gate, and to call out as many as you please, or shall be thought necessary, which can very well, righteously, and wisely, open unto you the secrets of their Cities, & make you understand perfectly the [mysteries] contained in the Tables. Through which knowledge you shall easily be able to judge, not as the world doth, but perfectly of the world, and of all things contained within the Compasse of Nature, and of all things which are subject to an end.¹

On May 21 of the same year, after delivering to Dee the names of the parts of the earth that are ruled by the first fourteen Aethers, the angel Mapsama spoke more specifically about the Gates:

Mapsama: These Calls touch all the parts of the World. The world may be dealt withall, with her parts; Therefore you may do anything. These Calls are the keyes into the Gates and Cities of wisdom. Which [Gates] are not able to be opened, but with visible apparition.

Dee: And how shall that be come unto?

Mapsama: Which is according to the former instructions: and to be had, by calling of every Table.²

When Nalvage says that the doctrine of Enoch is not "painted, or carved: filed, or imagined by man, according to their imaginations, which are of flesh: but simple, plain, full of strength," he means that it is mathematical and geometrical in nature. The forty-nine tables are the large number-letter squares in Dee's Book of Enoch, each of which has forty-nine rows by forty-nine columns. From these were extracted, at the directions of the angels, the Enochian Keys.

The forty-eight gates of the cities, or astral residences, that may be open by the forty-eight Calls or Keys, are symbolically represented by a large letter square that is divided into four parts by a central cross called the Black Cross (it is colored black in Dee's manuscript). This large letter square is known as the Great Table. Each of the four quadrants on this Table is called a Watchtower. Twelve of the celestial cities are accessed through each Watchtower. The gates of the Watchtowers must be opened to allow the passage of the Enochian angels from their own cities into the universe of human consciousness. Each city is represented, or keyed, by a set of letters in a geometric and numerical pattern.

Tyson's Restored Great Table

THE GREAT TABLE AND THE CITY OF GOD

There seems to be an implicit similarity between the structure of the Great Table and the structure of New Jerusalem described in Revelation 21 and 22. New Jerusalem is laid out in a square. Each wall has three gates, for a total of twelve, "and at the gates twelve

Four Rivers of New Jerusalem

angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel." The walls of the city have twelve foundations, or foundation stones, each a semiprecious stone upon which is written the name of one of the twelve apostles of Jesus. These stones are probably intended to be the same that were in the breastplate of the High Priest of Israel.³

In the center of New Jerusalem, the Lamb of God (Christ) is seated upon a throne from which flows the river of the water of life. This is usually depicted as having four streams that flow outward in the four cardinal directions.

John Dee was aware of this similarity in structure between the Great Table and New Jerusalem. He drew two square diagrams showing the assignment of the twelve tribes to the four directions of space based on Numbers 2 and 7, and Revelation 21, in his magical journal that deals with the assignment and evocation of spirits on the Great Table.⁴

Order of the Twelve Tribes of Israel

The diagram on the left places the tribes of Israel in the quarters of the world they are assigned in the second chapter of the biblical book of Numbers, where the ordering of the tents of the tribes around the Tabernacle is described. This same ordering of the tribes to the directions occurs in the seventh chapter of Numbers, which sets forth the order in which the tribes made sacrifice at the altar. The order unfolds in a single cycle east, south, west and north, proceeding clockwise. As will be seen later on, this ordering of the directions is crucial to a true comprehension of the placement of the Watchtowers on the Great Table. In the center of the diagram, Dee has written in Latin that this is the biblical order and perfect condition of the tribes.

In the diagram on the right, the tribes are ordered to the directions as they were delivered to Dee by the Enochian angels. Next to the name of each tribe is the name of its guardian or tutelary angel. Notice particularly the numbers Dee has inserted into this diagram. The ordering of the tribes and the angels proceeds in three clockwise cycles of four around the square, each cycle beginning in the east. These cycles have great importance in connection with the ordering of the Enochian Keys on the Great Table. This numbering system was also used by the angels to link the tribes with the ninety-one Princes of the Thirty Aethers. In the center of this diagram, Dee has written in Latin that this is the order of the tribes of Israel after the Diaspora, or scattering, as it exists in the year 1585 (presumably the year he drew the diagram).

These diagrams may represent New Jerusalem or the great altar of sacrifice, or both. Notice that there are three levels in each diagram, or (regarding them as altars) three steps. It is not clear in the diagrams whether the tabs containing the directions should be considered as a separate level, or placed on the same level as the first step. The altar for burnt offerings was square and three cubits high, which may have signified three steps or levels.³

THE ARCHITECTURE OF THE GREAT TABLE

The Great Table as a whole reflects this imitation of the pattern of New Jerusalem. Ignore for the moment the letters written on it and consider it as the ground plan for a walled city or fortress that contains within it lesser walled compounds. Each of the long columns and rows would then represent a street. At the ends of these streets are gates. The city has three primary avenues leading into it from each of its four sides, and four lesser avenues. When the four lesser avenues are considered, each side of the Great Table has seven gates, for a total of twenty-eight; a significant number, because it is the number of the Mansions of the Moon. The Great Black Cross that runs through the center of the Table may be assumed to represent the four streams of the river of life that flows out from the throne of Christ, situated at the intersection of the cross.

There are forty-two of these avenues on the Great Table, and since each avenue has two gates, eighty-four gates in all (twenty-one gates, the number of Enochian letters, for each Watchtower). The Great Table may be considered as a whole entity which is divided into four quarters by the Black Cross running through its center. Each quarter, or Watchtower, is in some respects a smaller version of the Great Table. It also has a cross running through its center that divides it into four quarters. Each Watchtower has one main gate in each side and two lesser gates, for a total of twelve exterior gates. By the same token, each quarter of a Watchtower has a cross running through it that divides it into four parts.

Quarters of the Watchtower have only one external gate in each wall, for a total of four.

The central row of each Watchtower, called the "line of God," contains three divine names of power. Reading left to right, these names are composed of three, four and five letters each. For example, the line of God in the Watchtower that occupies the upper left corner of the Great Table contains the divine names ORO, IBAH and AOZPI. There is a direct correlation between these twelve divine names, the twelve permutations of the Hebrew name of God, IHVH, and the twelve tribes of Israel, as I will demonstrate later. It should be noted that each line of God contains a total of twelve letters, and that all four contain forty-eight letters, the number of the gates to the angelic cities.

There may be an important distinction between the spirits represented by the letters in the avenues upon the Great Table, and the spirits represented by the letters contained within the sixty-four walled enclosures. I am inclined to think of the spirits whose names lie within the enclosed spaces as female, and the spirits whose names lie on the avenues, or arms of the crosses, as male, although there is no explicit evidence in Dee's diaries that this sexual division exists. The enclosed spaces call to my mind the walled-off seraglios of Eastern monarchs where their brides and concubines were kept isolated.

This diagrammatic aspect of the Great Table and the Watchtowers is almost never mentioned in descriptions of Enochian magic. Dee makes no reference to it directly in his Enochian diaries and workbooks, but it may be inferred from comments made by the angels. I do not wish to mislead you. This city architecture of the Great Table is my personal speculation, and is not an established aspect of modern Enochian magic.

THE SQUARE AND THE CIRCLE

It is more certain that the Great Table is intended to be surrounded by a larger circle. The square of the Table represents our own earthly realm below the sphere of the Moon. The angels inhabit it in their manifest, earthly forms—that is, their names. The greater circle stands for the totality and unity of creation, embracing the three realms of heaven, earth and hell. The Great Table is thus the central portion of the plan of the universe, foursquare because it is manifest and imperfect.

The image of the Great Table as a square within a circle appears a number of times in the Enochian books. Perhaps the most important occurrence is a diagram in the unpublished manuscript Liber Scientiae that was drawn by Dee. It represents the Great Table surrounded by flags bearing the twelve divine names that occur in the middle rows of its Watchtowers. This image is vitally important because it established the orientation of the quarters of the Great Table to the four directions. The upper left quadrant lies in the east, the upper right quadrant in the south, the lower right quadrant in the west, and the lower left quadrant in the north.

The square or cross surrounded by a circle also occurs on the golden medallion that shows the various elements of Kelley's Vision of the Four Watchtowers (see the next chapter). It appears in the illustration of the thirty Aethers, where the innermost of thirty concentric circles is divided into four, whereas all the other circles are divided into three. It is a part of Kelley's Vision of the Round House which (in my opinion) describes the flow of dynamic forces upon the Great Tablet. Clearly, it was of the highest importance. It is an expression of the squaring of the circle, which was, along with the making of the stone and the elixir of life, one of the three great works of alchemy.

The Great Table is a mandala, a mystical image composed of a circle and a square, or cross, that symbolizes a non-physical place accessible through meditation and transcendent awareness. Concerning Eastern mandalas, Carl Jung remarked: "The Eastern and more particularly the Lamaic mandala usually contains a square ground-plan of the stupa. We can see from the mandalas constructed in solid form that it is really the plan of a building. The square also conveys the idea of a house or temple, or of an inner walled-in space. According to the ritual, stupas must always be circumambulated to the right, because leftward movement is evil."⁶

The mandala appears most commonly in the West in the form of Hermetic or alchemical images. The accompanying mandala of Solomon's Temple is particularly interesting, because it shows seven gates in each side, which are explicitly linked to the twenty-eight Mansions of the Moon. The inner cross, lying within the circle of the Moon, has three gates in each arm, and these are explicitly linked to the twelve months of the year. Notice that the central eye of God has seven points, which stand for the seven planets.

Solomon's Temple

THE THREE LEVELS

The Great Table has three levels or hierarchies of angels that are reflected in its structure. The first level concerns the entire Table. When this is divided into four parts by the Great Black Cross, the second level of the four Watchtowers is indicated. Similarly, when each Watchtower is divided into four parts, the third level of the sixteen lesser quarters appears. The angels tell Dee:

For every Table hath his key, every key openeth his gate, and every gate being opened, giveth knowledge of himself, of the entrance, and of the mysteries of those things whereof he is an enclosure. Within these Palaces you shall find things that are of power. For every Palace is above his City and every City above his entrance.⁷

This description evokes the ground plan of a medieval city constructed upon a hill, a familiar sight in Dee's time. The palace of the ruler occupied the crest. Surrounding it on the sloping sides of the hill huddled the houses of the common folk. At a still lower level down the hill, a protective wall enclosed the city. The wall contained a gate, or gates, to permit travel both into and out from the city.

THE KEEPERS OF TIME

The four Watchtowers, which are themselves angels, stand guard at the four extremities of our universe. They are equivalent to the four great pillars of Egyptian mythology that hold up the sky and separate Earth from heaven. These Watchtowers were established at the same moment Adam and Eve were expelled from Eden, or so testify the Enochian angels: "Adam received punishment for his offense, in that he was turned out into the earth, and so did Adam, accursed, bring all misery and wretchedness into the world. But in the same instant when Adam was expelled, the Lord gave unto the world her time, and placed over her Angelic Keepers, Watchmen, and Princes."⁸

There are several important points to be noticed in the quotation above. One of the most important is that because of Adam's sin of disobedience, God laid a curse upon the entire world. This curse is what we know as karma, or cause and effect. Karma exists in time. Time began the moment Adam was driven out of Paradise. At the same moment, it was necessary to establish angelic Keepers and Watchmen to ensure the continuance of the Earth in time. The Princes mentioned are presumably the aerial spirits known as the "princes of the air," who are said to be present throughout the entire world.

Access through the gates of the four Watchtowers is access outside the realm of time and karma. It is access to the angels who dwell in Paradise, and indeed to all spiritual creatures who have been barred by God's curse from walking the paths of the Earth. The high angels in the palaces and cities behind the gates of the Watchtowers have the authority to rule over the lesser spirits who inhabit the aerial terrestrial realms of our universe. By some Kabbalistic accounts, these earth-bound spirits are the offspring from the union between the fallen angels described by Enoch and mortal women.

THE NINETY-ONE REGIONS OF THE THIRTY AETHERS

Among these earth-bound spirits are those that rule over the various geographical regions of the world. Each of these geographical spirits (which is identified with the region it rules because it is the tutelary spirit or genius of that region) has its own sigil on the Great Table.

In my opinion, it was the prospect of obtaining command of these tutelary spirits of the kingdoms of the world that was the basis of John Dee's attraction to Enochian magic. Dee received this system of magic in the years just prior to the launch of the Spanish Armada against England. It was a time of exploration and colonization for his native country. This expansion of influence was threatened by the might of Spain. Dee earnestly sought control of the geographical spirits on the Great Table so that through them he could control the fates of the kings of Europe, and remove the dark cloud of foreign domination from England's horizons.

About these geographical genii the angel Nalvage states:

There are 30 Calls yet to come. Those 30 are the Calls of Ninety-one Princes and spiritual Governours, unto whom the Earth is delivered as a portion. These bring in and again dispose Kings and all the Governments upon the Earth, and vary the Natures of things with the variation of every moment; Unto whom, the providence of the eternal Judgement, is already opened. These are generally governed by the twelve Angels of the 12 Tribes: which are also governed by the 7 which stand before the presence of God [see Revelation 4:5].²

It was no doubt in reference to the power of these spirits of nations that Casaubon makes mention in his subtitle to his book A True and Faithful Relation, which reads in part "Tending (had it Succeeded) to a General Alteration of most States and Kingdomes in the World."

THE POWERS OF THE WATCHTOWERS

In addition to controlling the tutelary spirits of the nations of the Earth, the Watchtowers offer the promise of all human knowledge, including the perfect knowledge of medicine, the arts, and the sciences. They give command of the elemental spirits of the world, movement from place to place (presumably by supernatural means), the transformation of the forms of things, and enable the discovery of hidden things, including the location of treasures and rich mines. No human secret is unknown to them.

The promise of limitless knowledge, even of an abstract kind, was alluring to Dee, who had dedicated his life to study. Later, in his private meeting with Rudolph II, Dee would confide this lifelong passion to the Emperor:

Hereupon I began to declare that All my life time I had spent in learning: but for this forty years continually, in sundry manners, and in divers Countries, with great pain, care, and cost, I had from degree to degree, sought to come by the best knowledge that man might attain unto in the world: And I found (at length) that neither any man living, nor any Book I could yet meet withal, was able to teach me those truths I desired, and longed for: And therefore I concluded with my self, to make intercession and prayer to the giver of wisdom and all good things, to send me such wisdom, as I might know the natures of his creatures; and also enjoy means to use them to his honour and glory.³

Even more attractive must have been the prospect of peering into the veiled intrigues of the courts of Europe, and gaining information concerning the political plots and maneuverings of great men. As a secret agent of the English crown, his mouth must have watered at the intelligence-gathering possibilities of the Watchtowers.

Perhaps sensing this lust for forbidden knowledge, both heavenly and earthly, the angel Ave cautions Dee and Kelley about the limitations of the Watchtowers. At the same time, he cannot resist boasting of their powers:

Ave: Notwithstanding, to know the world before the waters, To be privy to the doings of men, from the waters to Christ; from Christ unto the rewarding of the wicked: The wicked doings of the flesh, or the fond and devilish imaginations of man, or to see what the blessed Kingdom shall be, and how the earth shall be dignified, purged, and made clean, is a meat too sweet for your mouths.

Dee: Curiosity is far from our intents.

Ave: But there is neither Patriarch nor Prophet sanctified, Martyr, or Confessor, King, or Governour of the people upon earth, that his name, continuance, and end, is not (like the Moon at midnight) in these Tables.

[Dee's marginal note: Ergo, these are here to be learned out.]¹¹

This is quite a boast. It is easy to see why Ave said to Kelley concerning lesser systems of magic, "Nay, they all played at this." Other forms of magic deal with the angels and spirits already present in our universe—the spiritual offspring that arose from sexual union between the fallen angels who taught sciences and arts to humankind and mortal women. Enochian magic holds out the promise to reach beyond the sealed gates of the four Watchtowers and gain the authority and power of the higher angels who have never fallen from grace or walked the byways of the earth. Conversely, it also allows communion with the dark angels who have been cast down into the Abyss for their sin of rebellion. The gates of the Watchtowers are the gates to both heaven and hell.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

The Vision of the Watchtowers

DRAMA IN THE CRYSTAL

The four Watchtowers were not delivered to Kelley merely in the form of abstract letter squares, but were also presented as visionary dramas in which the crystal became the stage and the angels and lesser spirits assumed the roles of characters. The most important and complete playlet is the one I have named the Great Vision. It is remarkable for its beauty, complexity, and mystery.

The Great Vision represents the different classes of angels whose names appear on the tables of the Watchtowers and their hierarchical relationship. Because this vision is so central to Enochian magic, I have given it here in its entirety, along with my commentary.

Wednesday, June 20, 1584

Dee: It is first to be noted, that this morning (early) to E.K. lying in his bed, and awake, appeared a Vision, in manner as followeth: One standing by his beds head, who patted him on the head gently, to make him the more vigilant. He seemed to be cloathed with feathers, strangely wreathed about him all over, etc.

There appeared to him [E.K.] four very fair Castles, standing in the four parts of the world: out of which he heard the sound of a Trumpet. Then seemed out of every Castle a cloath to be thrown on the ground, of more then the breadth of a Table-cloath.

Out of that in the East, the cloath seemed to be red, which was cast.

Out of that in the South, the cloath seemed white.

Out of that in the West, the cloath seemed green, with great knops on it.

Out of that in the North, spread, or thrown out from the gate under foot, the cloath seemed to be very black.

Out of every Gate then issued one Trumpeter, whose Trumpets were of strange form, wreathed, and growing bigger and bigger toward the end.

After the Trumpeter followed three Ensign bearers,

After them six ancient men, with white beards and staves in their hands.

Then followed a comely man, with very much Apparel on his back, his Robe having a long train.

After him came five men, carrying up of his train.

Then followed one great Crosse, and about that four lesser Crosses.

These Crosses had on them, each of them ten, like men, their faces distinctly appearing on the four parts of the Crosse, all over.

[Marginal note: These Crosses seemed not to be on the ground, but in the aire in a white Cloud. The great Crosse seemed to be of a Cloud, like the Rain-bow.]

After the Crosses followed 16 white Creatures.

And after them, an infinite number seemed to issue, and to spread themselves orderly in a compasse, almost before the four foresaid Castles.

Upon which Vision declared unto me, I straight way set down a Note of it; trusting in God that it did signifie good.

After noon, as E.K. sat by me, he felt on his head some strange moving: whereby he deemed that some spiritual Creature did visit him; and as we were continuing together, and I had red to E.K. some rare matter out of Ignatius' Epistles, Policarpus, and Martialis; some of the Sacrament, and some of the Crosse, a voyce answered, and said, That it is true, that the sign of the Crosse is of great force and vertue.

After this, the spiritual Creature seemed to E.K. to be very heavy on his right shoulder, as he sat by me in my study: and as E.K. considered the numbers of such as he had numbered to passe out of the four Gates (it is to wit, 1.3.6.1.5) The spiritual Creature said, the number 16 is a perfect number, consisting of 1.3.6.1.5. He said further more, God the father is a standing Pillar.

Dee: Upon which word I asked him, if I should write such matter as he was to speak. And he answered to E.K. at his right ear.

Spirit: If thou wilt.

Dee: His voyce was much like unto a man's voyce, not base, nor hollow.

Spirit: Divided with a straight line, is one and two.

Dee: What is to be divided with a straight line?

Spirit: The Pillar.

This spirit identified itself as Ave, the second of the Sons of the Sons of Light, who were revealed to Dee and Kelley during the reception of the heptarchical magic. His name appears on the smaller heptagon on the Sigillum Aemeth. He declared himself to be the feathered spirit who had patted Kelley on the head in the early morning hours, and said that it was he who had delivered the vision of the Watchtowers to Kelley. Ave commented at length on Kelley's vision.

Ave: Now therefore hearken unto me: for I will open unto you the secret knowledge of the Earth, that you may deal with her, by such as govern her, at your pleasure; and call her to a reckoning, as a Steward doth the servants of his Lord.

I expound the Vision.

The 4 houses, are the 4 Angels of the Earth, which are the 4 Overseers, and Watch-towers, that the eternal God in his providence hath placed, against the usurping blasphemy, misuse, and stealth of the wicked and great enemy, the Devil. To the intent that being put out to the Earth, his envious will might be bridled, the determinations of God fulfilled, and his creatures kept and preserved, within the compasse and measure of order.

What Satan doth, they suffer; And what they wink at, he wrasteth: But when he thinketh himself most assured, then feeleth he the bit.

In each of these Houses, the Chief Watchman, is a mighty Prince, a mighty Angel of the Lord: which hath under him 5 Princes (these names I must use for your instruction.) The seals and authorities of these Houses, are confirmed in the beginning of the World. Unto every one of them, be 4 characters, (Tokens of the presence of the son of God: by whom all things were made in Creation.)

Ensignes, upon the Image whereof, is death: whereon the Redemption of mankind is established, and with the which he shall come to judge the Earth.

These are the Characters, and natural marks of holiness. Unto these, belong four Angels severally.

The 24 old men, are the 24 Seniors, that St. John remembereth.

These judge the government of the Castles, and fulfill the will of God, as it is written.

The 12 Banners are the 12 names of God, that govern all the creatures upon the Earth, visible and invisible, comprehending 3, 4, and 5.

Out of these Crosses, come the Angels of all the Aires: which presently give obedience to the will of men, when they see them.

Hereby may you subvert whole Countries without Armies: which you must, and shall do, for the glory of God.

By these you shall get the favour of all the Princes, whom you take pity of, or wish well unto.

Hereby shall you know the secret Treasures of the waters, and unknown Caves of the Earth.

And it shall be a Doctrine, for you onely, the instrument of the World.

For, the rest of your Instructions, are touching the Heavens, and the time to come: of the which, this is the last and extreame knowledge.

This will I deliver unto you, (because I have yeilded you before the Lord.)

Upon Monday next, I will appear unto you: and shall be a Lesson of a few dayes.

Kelley: The will of God be done.

Dee: Amen.

Ave: In the mean season, desire you of God, such things, as are necessary for you.

He that filleth all things, and from whom all things live, and in, and through whom, they are sanctified, blesse you, and confirm you in peace.

Dee: Amen.

I beseech you, to Notifie this morning's Vision, by words: as all other holy Prophets have recorded theirs.

Ave: A Vision.

The sign of the love of God toward his faithful. Four sumptuous and belligerant Castles, out of the which sounded Trumpets thrice.

The sign of Majesty, the Cloth of passage, was cast forth.

In the East, the cloth red; after the new smitten blood.

In the South, the cloth white, Lilly-colour.

In the West a cloth, the skins of many Dragons, green: garlick-bladed.

In the North, the cloth, Hair-coloured, Bilbery juyce.

The Trumpets sound once. The Gates open. The four Castles are moved. There issueth 4 Trumpeters, whose Trumpets are a Pyramis, six cones, wreathed. There followeth out of every Castle 3, holding up their Banners displayed, with ensigne, the names of God. There follow Seniors six, alike from the 4 Gates: After them cometh from every part a King: whose Princes are five, gardant, and holding up his train. Next issueth the Crosse of 4 Angles, of the Majesty of Creation in God attended upon every one, with 4: a white Cloud, 4 Crosses, bearing the witnesses of the Covenant of God, with the *Prince [*King] gone out before: which were confirmed, every one, with ten Angels, visible in countenance: After every Crosse, attendeth 16 Angels, dispositors of the will of those, that govern the Castles. They proceed. And, in, and about the middle of the Court, the Ensigns keep their standings, opposite to the middle of the Gate: The rest pause. The 24 Senators meet: They seem to consult.

I, AVE, STOOD BY THE SEER:

It vanisheth.

So I leave you.¹

Dee thought the Great Vision so important that he had a medallion made of solid gold upon which the vision was depicted (see the illustration of the Golden Talisman, opposite). This relic has survived the centuries and is now in the keeping of the British Museum.

ANALYSIS OF THE GREAT VISION

Kelley sees four castles standing in the four quarters of the world. Ave informs Dee that these castles, which he calls "houses," are the four angels of the Earth, who are also the four Overseers and Watchtowers—it is not uncommon in magic for a place or thing to also be a spirit.

On Dee's golden talisman, these castles are depicted as medieval stone towers each with seven battlement stones (the northern tower has eight stones), one small square window containing four panes, and a large, open semi-circular gate. The seven battlement stones stand for the traditional planets of astrology, the square window represents the letter square of the Watchtower on the Great Table, and the arch of the gate is the crescent of the Moon, through whose sphere all heavenly beings must pass on their journey to the Earth.

This symbolism was probably unconscious, which would account for the eight battlement stones on the northern tower (unless this number has some hidden significance). The four Watchtowers are depicted similarly on the medallion, with only minor variations, so Dee probably intended them to be perceived as identical.

The Golden Talisman

It should be noted that in the engraving of the medallion in Casaubon the colors of the four cloths are inverted top to bottom and left to right. The engraver shows green in the east, red in the west, black in the south and white in the north. I have restored the colors to the arrangement described in Kelley's vision. This inversion was not an error by the engraver—it also appears on the original golden medallion in the British Museum. Dee may well have had some reason for inverting the colors, and it may be the same reason the Enochian letters were inverted on the actual Table of Practice from the arrangement in Dee's manuscript drawing of the Table. However, since I can think of no good reason for changing the colors in Kelley's vision, I have put the colors in the same relative positions on the medallion.

Ave states that the Watchtowers were placed at the extremities of the world by God "against the usurping blasphemy, misuse, and stealth of the wicked and great enemy, the Devil." They act as a limiting influence on the chaotic works of the Devil upon the earth, and are necessary in order to preserve living creatures "within the compass and measure of order." They do not entirely exclude the influence of Satan, or prevent him from affecting the world, but check and bridle his malice to a degree that allows the orderly fulfillment of the "determinations of God." When Satan seeks to exceed that limit, the angels of the Watchtowers exert their power, and the Devil "feebleth he the bit."

From each tower, Kelley hears the simultaneous sounding of a trumpet. There is some ambiguity. Kelley says only that he hears the sound of a trumpet. Ave states that the trumpets sound thrice out of each tower, then contradicts himself a little further on and says the trumpets sound once. It may be that the trumpets sound one time, but sound three distinct notes.

Ave adds the detail that the gates open, and the "four Castles are moved," that is, show signs of movement within. Four cloths, each as wide as a tablecloth, are thrown out from the mouths of the towers toward the center, which Ave refers to as the "Court." Ave calls these the "sign of Majesty, the Cloth of passage." They are equivalent to the red carpets that are unrolled for the passage of dignitaries in our own day. The colors are important because they are linked to the four directions. The color of the east is red, that of the south is white, that of the west is green, that of the north is black.

Ave is more descriptive of these colors. The cloth of the east is the scarlet of new-spilled blood. The cloth of the south is the soft white of the lily petal. The cloth of the west is textured with the scales of a dragon and is serpent-green. The cloth of the north is the color of very dark human hair, or of bilberry juice (a deep blue-black berry that grows in England).

From each open gate a Trumpeter walks along the carpet toward the center court. The trumpets are of a very strange shape, with six bells. Ave describes them as a "Pyramis, six cones, wreathed." Kelley says that they are "of strange form, wreathed, and growing bigger and bigger toward the end." This would seem to mean that viewed from the front the six branching bells of each trumpet spread in the shape of a triangle. They were probably wreathed with flowers.

The beings who proceed out of each Watchtower after its Trumpeter are the angels ruling in that quarter of the Earth.

The three Ensign Bearers carry upon their flags the divine names that are written on the middle rows of the Watchtowers of the Great Table. The first flag bears a name of three letters, the second of four letters, the last of five letters, for a total of twelve. Ave calls these twelve ensigns (three from each tower) "the 12 names of God, that govern all the creatures upon the Earth, visible and invisible, comprehending 3, 4, and 5." These names have a direct correspondence with the twelve overt permutations of the Hebrew name of God, IHVH, which is known as the Tetragrammaton because it contains four letters.

After the twelve ensigns bearing the names of God come twenty-four Seniors who walk six abreast from each gate. Ave says of these old men that they are "the 24

Seniors, that St. John remembreth." St. John the Divine was the supposed author of the New Testament book Revelation. The reference is to Revelation 4:4—"And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold." The Seniors are the lords of the hours of the day. They establish and regulate linear time: the time-space continuum that we are familiar with as incarnated souls.

Ave explains: "These judge the government of the Castles, and fulfil the will of God, as it is written." The "government of the Castles" is what is known in the East as karma. Cause and effect is a function of time. Without time, karma would cease, and chaos would reign. There would be no divine law, no cosmic justice, no rational order. Satan (or Coronzon as the Enochian angels call him) seeks to overthrow the regulation of the Seniors, but is held in check by the four Overseers.

Behind each rank of six Seniors walks a richly robed King. Five Princes who serve him carry the hem of his long train. They are guardant, meaning that they walk with their faces turned toward Kelley. Of the King, Ave says: "the Chief Watchman, is a mighty Prince, a mighty Angel of the Lord." Twice, Ave calls the King of each Watchtower a Prince, causing Dee to write a correction in the margin of his manuscript (indicated with asterisks on page 159). The name of each King appears in its corresponding Watchtower on the Great Table, written in the form of a spiral about the intersection of the great cross of that Watchtower.

Connected with each King, and the Watchtower of which he is the animate expression, is a seal composed of four characters. Ave calls these "the authorities of these Houses" and says that they were "confirmed in the beginning of the World." About the four characters connected with each, he states that they are "Tokens of the presence of the son of God: by whom all things were made in Creation."

It is not clear what is meant here, unless it is the four graphic seals that were subsequently linked by the angels to the four Watchtowers on the Great Table. Three of these have four divisions, but one does not. The reference to four parts may be to the four letters of Tetragrammaton. At least, this is how this passage was interpreted by the founders of the Golden Dawn, who assigned the letters of Tetragrammaton in a complex relationship to the different parts of the Watchtowers on the Great Table.

After the Princes, a large cross with four lesser crosses in its quarters emerges from each tower. These seem to Kelley to float in the sky on white clouds, with each cross shimmering like a rainbow of many colors. Their pattern is reflected in the Watchtowers on the Great Table—each Watchtower has a large cross dividing it into four quarters, and a smaller cross in each quarter. On the smaller crosses, Kelley reports ten male faces. Ave refers to these as "ten Angels, visible in countenance." The lesser crosses on the Watchtowers of the Great Table each contain ten letters. Each letter is the name of one of these angels, who, as Ave says, bear "the witness of the Covenant of God."

Following the cloud with its five crosses, sixteen "white Creatures" issue from the gate of each Watchtower. Ave calls these "angels, dispositors of the will of those, that govern the Castles." The names of these angels occur in the lesser quarters of each Watchtower on the Great Table.

Finally, an "infinite number" of lesser angels issue forth and arrange themselves in a large circle, standing close to the towers. The wording of Kelley's vision suggests that they come out of the gates after the sixteen Dispositors, but Ave indicates that this multitude is made up of the angels of the thirty Aires, or Aethers, and that they come out from the rainbow crosses. These angels "presently give obedience to the will of men, when they see them." This is extremely important, because it explains why Enochian magic can only be worked with "visible apparition." The obedience of the angels of the Aethers to the magician requires that the magician see the angels in the crystal, or by some similar means.

This echoes the Irish folk tale that a leprechaun can only be commanded by a human being to reveal his treasure while he is held captive. Once he slips beyond the reach of his captor, he regains his freedom. Similarly, the jinn imprisoned by Solomon in brass bottles could be compelled to grant wishes to the persons who discovered them. These tales express a fundamental principle of spirit magic. To be controlled, a spirit must be embodied in some form. This form may be an image or a name. The manifest form of the spirit acts as a kind of psychic bottle that constrains the spirit and binds it to the human mind that conceives the form.

The Ensign Bearers stop at the ends of their ground cloths and maintain their ranks opposite their respective gates. The twenty-four Seniors approach each other in the middle of the Court, while the rest stand waiting in their places. The Seniors form a ring facing inward and seem to hold a consultation with each other. That is the end of Kelley's vision.

Ave points out to Kelley the importance of the numbers of each rank in this procession ($1 + 3 + 6 + 1 + 5 = 16$). This is the number of the Dispositors, or Disposers—those who arrange and set in right order the things of the manifest world, and who ensure that everything happens in its proper season and due sequence.

The communication between Dee and Ave following the initial description of Kelley's vision seems enigmatic, but is really quite simple. Ave merely points out to Dee that the vertical pillar of the central cross on each Watchtower of the Great Table will contain two columns of letters, and therefore it may either be regarded as one pillar, or two if the columns of letters are divided. At this point Dee has not received the Great Table, so the directions mean nothing to him.

CHAPTER TWELVE

The Transmission of the Great Table

THE TABLE OF THE EARTH

As he had promised during his exposition of the Great Vision, the angel Ave appeared to Kelley on the following Monday (June 25, 1584) and delivered the letter squares of the Watchtowers that compose the quadrants of the Great Table. These were presented in the form of visual images within the crystal.

First, Kelley saw the interior of the stone obscured by a white curtain. The curtain was then withdrawn and discarded in a heap in the background to reveal a standing figure in a white smock with a white circlet around his head. Although Kelley did not recognize the angel, Dee knew him to be Ave because the angel had promised to appear on Monday. As Kelley watched, fire consumed the angel to ashes. From the ashes he rose up renewed and brighter than before, saying: "So doth the glory of God comfort the just, and they rise again with a threefold glorie."¹

The angel extended his hands and seemed to spread or part the air in front of him. A square table appeared before the angel. This table represented the Great Table of the Watchtowers. Dee wrote in the margin of his manuscript "The Table of the Earth." This is also true, since the Great Table applies to the earthly (manifest) realm.

From the table Ave removed a black "Carpet" or cloth. From Kelley's earlier vision of the Watchtowers, we know that this corresponds to the north. Beneath the black cloth was a green cloth, which the angel next removed. The green cloth stands for the west. Beneath the green cloth was a white cloth, representing the south. After Ave pulled off the white cloth, a red cloth was revealed, corresponding with the east. The removal of the red cloth revealed the tabletop itself, which to Kelley appeared to be made of "earth, as Potter's Clay, very raw earth." The table was square, with four legs made of clay or earth. Two of the legs touched the ground, but two did not.

It should be noted that the removal of the different colored cloths symbolically traced a complete circle around the world counterclockwise. This is the direction of motion (as Carl Jung observed) from the conscious mind to the unconscious.⁷ The motion is from the circumference in to the center, which is symbolized by the bare clay top of the table. It is the ground of creation and the clay of Adam. The direction of travel around the compass is opposite to that which usually occurs in the Enochian manuscripts, but this is because Ave is traveling from the outward manifest world of Dee and Kelley into the secret center of the Earth, where all mysteries lie concealed.

Why the table should have two legs that touch the ground and two that do not is puzzling. Perhaps it refers to the four elements, two of which (Fire and Air) are light and rise up, and two of which (Water, Earth) are heavy and fall down. However, this is only speculation.

THE FIRST SEAL

On the upper-left corner of the table (the far left from Kelley's point of view) appeared the figure of a T with four bright beams of clear light rising from its top. This is the seal of the Watchtower of the east. The direction is not given, but we know it must be the eastern quarter of the table because it is the first revealed, and the east is the first quarter in Enochian magic. Ave, as he reveals the seals and after them the Watchtowers themselves, is now progressing from the center outward to the circumference.

To make doubly certain that Kelley noticed the position of this seal on the table, Ave pointed at the T with the four beams, saying:

Ave: That part of the Table of the earth of those that govern the earth: that is are governed by the seven Angels that are governed by the seven that stand before God, that are governed by the living God, which is found in the Seal of the living God, (Tau with the four) which signifie the four powers of God principal in earth, etc.

A voice: Move not, for the place is holy, and become holy.

Ave: I said not so, he said it, that beareth witnesse of himself. Unto this, obey the other three Angels of the Table.⁸

The "Seal of the living God" is the Sigillum Aemeth. "Tau with the four" indicates the capital letter T with the small number 4 written above it that is at the top of the outer ring of letters on the Sigillum Aemeth. This ring consists of forty letters, which are to be understood as four groups of ten. Tau is the Greek name for T. In Casaubon the last letter "u" in Tau is inverted (which often happened in old books) so that the text reads "Tan with the four," an obvious absurdity that has undoubtedly confused many students of Enochian magic.

The seven angels that "govern the earth" mentioned by Ave are the seven angels whose names appear in the larger hexagon on the Sigillum Aemeth (ZlIRHia, etc.). These curious names are extracted from a magic square composed of the seven more common names for the angels of the seven planets (Zaphkiel, etc.). These latter are "the seven that stand before God" (see Revelation 4:5).

Z	l	l	R	H	i	a
a	Z	C	a	a	c	b
p	a	u	p	n	h	r
h	d	m	h	i	a	i
k	k	a	a	e	e	e
i	i	e	e	l	l	l
e	e	l	l	M	G	+

The voice that spoke and commanded Dee and Kelley not to move was the voice of the King of the Watchtower of the east, which the T with the four beams represents. Ave cautioned the men to also remain still while receiving the seals of the other three Watchtowers.

THE SECOND SEAL

On the upper right corner of the table (the far right from Kelley's perspective) appeared a cross which Kelley described as "like an Alphabet Crosse." This symbol, because it is the second to appear, relates to the Watchtower of the south and reveals the placement of that Watchtower on the Great Table. Kelley remarks: "This Crosse, and the other T do seem to lye upon the Table, in a dim dunnish, or a sky colour. All the Table over seemeth to be scribled and rased with new lines."

Ave: The earth is the last, which is with the Angels, but not as the Angels, and therefore it standeth in the Table of the seven Angels, which stand before the presence of God in the last place, without a Letter, or number, but figured by a Crosse.

It is expressed in the Angle of that Table, wherein the names of the Angels are gathered, and do appear, as of Michael and Gabriel.

Dee: I remember, there is an Alphabetary Crosse.⁴

This is a clear reference to the small cross that marks the empty final square in the table of the seven planetary angels.

THE THIRD SEAL

The third seal of the Watchtowers appeared, as might be expected, on the lower-right corner of the table (the near right corner from Kelley's perspective). Moving around the points of the compass, this quarter of the table belongs to the Watchtower of the west. On it Kelley observed another cross with letters and numbers in its angles, as appears in the illustration of the four seals. The angel Ave makes the cryptic comment, "It is in that Table, which consisteth of 4 and 8." This refers to the fifth Ensign of Creation, one of the tin tablets to be placed on the Table of Practice during scrying. This Ensign, which is connected with Mercury on the Tabula Angelorum Bonorum 49, consists of four rows and eight columns. The seal of the Watchtower of the west occupies the second square in the bottom row on this Ensign.

THE FOURTH SEAL

Finally, on the lower left corner of the table of earth (the near left corner from Kelley's perspective), Kelley saw "a little round smoke, as big as a pin's head." This quarter of the table is related to the Watchtower of the north, which is the final point of the compass, moving clockwise around the Earth beginning in the east. The seal of the north is usually represented as a point or tiny circle with lines radiating from it.

Original Four Seals of the Watchtowers

In my judgment, the way these seals were revealed establishes the correct placement of the Watchtowers on the Great Table, and the relationship between the seals and the Watchtowers. Dee never recognized that the table of earth was intended by the angels to represent the Great Table, or that the order in which the seals were placed was to be followed in placing the Watchtowers themselves. Consequently, he remained in doubt about the positions of the Watchtowers on the Great Table for the rest of his life.

"GOD HIS SPIRITUAL CREATURES"

After the fourth seal was revealed, the crystal was obscured by a mist and Kelley heard "a great voyce of thumbling and rumbling" in the showstone. This cleared to reveal an infinite number of bright wormlike things going up and down in the air. Higher than these he saw a cloud of little black specks. They also floated up and down, and sometimes mingled with the worms.

Ave then delivered the monologue on Enoch that I have already quoted in Chapter One ("The Lord appeared unto Enoch," etc.). This is significant because its placement here links the Watchtowers strongly with the wisdom of Enoch, and indicates how central they are to Enochian magic. The Watchtowers are the very heart of the doctrine delivered by the angels.

Dark smoke boiled up from the table of earth, leaving behind it a golden slime. The worms and motes in the air touched down on the surface and ascended up again. Ave took the smoke and "tied it up," saying "I tie her not up from all men, but from the good." Another dark cloud covered everything. This cleared to reveal a grid. Ave told Kelley to note the number, and Kelley informed Dee that he counted thirteen columns and twelve rows. Apparently Kelley was viewing this grid at a right angle, because the grid of each Watchtower has twelve columns and thirteen rows.

Within the squares of the grid appeared characters or sigils. Ave remarked to Kelley, "They be the true Images of God his spiritual Creatures." He ordered Kelley to write down what he saw. Kelley protested that he could not. Dee urged Kelley to try his best. Kelley struggled along for a time, then "fire flashed in his face, and shortly after he said, I perceive they be easie to make, so that I tell the squares, by which the lines do passe, and draw from middle prick to middle prick." He finished drawing the sigils on the grid of the first Watchtower, then proceeded to fill in the grids of the other quarters of the Great Table.

These sigils are not illustrated in Casaubon, but it is obvious that they were the sigils of the ninety-one geographical spirits of the 30 Aethers (see Chapter Fifteen). It is interesting to note that the sigils of the genii of the parts of the Earth were conveyed by the angels before the actual Watchtowers themselves. It would therefore have been impossible for Kelley to consciously connect the graphic sigils with the letters of the spirit names upon which they are based.

THE FOUR WATCHTOWERS

Again the stone grew dark. Ave ordered Dee and Kelley to rest for an hour. No doubt the strain of concentration had been almost unendurable, particularly for Kelley. When the men resumed the scrying session, Ave immediately began to deliver the letters of the Watchtower of the east:

Ave: In the name of God, be diligent, and move not for the place is holy.

Take the first square: write from the left hand toward the right, you shall write small letters and great.

Say what you see [to E.K.]

Kelley: r Z i l a f A u t l p a

Dee: I finde here one square among these Characters that hath nothing in it.

Ave: It must be filled.

Kelley: a r d Z a i d p a L a m

Dee had not yet realized that the grid first seen by Kelley was tipped on its side, and had to be rotated a quarter turn. He was trying to insert the twelve letters of the first row into one of the columns, which have thirteen squares. It did not take him long to understand his error. Some of the letters in the Watchtowers are capitals because they begin the names of the ninety-one spirits of the regions of the Earth, which correspond with the sigils previously drawn on the grids (at a right angle, apparently!) by Kelley.

A few of the letters are mirror inverted left to right. These indicate that the names of the geographical genii that contain them may be written forward or backward. When written backward, they are the names of evil spirits, but when written forward, of good spirits.

Kelley scried the Watchtowers in the following order. Using their middle "lines of God" as identifiers, they are: 1) ORO, IBAH, AOZPI; 2) MOR, DIAL, HCTGA; 3) OIP, TEAA, PDOCE; 4) MPH, ARSL, GAIOL. After delivering the Watchtowers, Ave commented on the significance of the middle line and the pillar of God in each Watchtower.

Ave: Thou hast in the middle line o r o i b A h a o z p i. There are 6 lines above, and six below. That line is called linea Spiritus Sancti: and out of that line cometh the three names of God, from the East gate, being 3, 4, and 5 letters, which were the armes of the Ensignes that were spoken of before. Oro, ibah, aozpi, I said before, that God the Father a mighty pillar divided with a right line.

The Father himself, without the line.

The Father and Son by addition of the line.

These two lines beginning: f A i d

a r etc.

That is the great Crosse that came out of the East gate.⁴

The meaning is that the double vertical pillar that forms the center of each Watchtower and crosses the middle row of the Holy Ghost at a right angle signifies God the Father when double, but Father and Son when the two columns are separated by a vertical line. It is not clear in Casaubon which column of the Great Cross belongs to the Father and which to the Son. However, the left column is the column of mercy, which suggest that it belongs to the Son, whereas the right column is the column of judgment, suggesting that it belongs to the Father.

Dee had no problem correctly placing the first Watchtower in the upper left quarter of the Great Table, and linking it with the east. He correctly placed the second Watchtower in the upper-right corner of the Great Table, which is associated with the south. However, for some reason he inverted the third and fourth Watchtowers. He was going to place them correctly. He noted beside the fourth Watchtower, "This is the Table that had the little round smoke," which would have enabled him to place it in the lower left quarter. But immediately below he wrote a second note, saying, "No, it was the Table before."

The result is that on the first version of the Great Table, which is known as the Original Table, Dee has (in my opinion) inverted the third and fourth Watchtowers. The seals of the Watchtowers are placed correctly at the corners of the Original Table, as they were revealed by Ave. The four inverted capital letters are indicated by asterisks. It is not immediately obvious that the capital A in the bottom row of the OIP, TEAA, PDOCE Watchtower is inverted; however, Dee has drawn the A with a hook on its right leg, and written in the margin "A is arsward."

Dee numbered the Watchtowers on the Great Table in the order of their initial transmission, in two rows from left to right: 1. Upper left: ORO, etc.; 2. Upper right: MOR, etc.; 3. Lower left: OIP, etc.; 4. Lower right: MPH, etc. He was obviously uncomfortable about inverting the bottom two Watchtowers from their natural places on the points of the compass. Several times he asked the angels for confirmation.

Ave: Now, what is that, that is hard to you?

Dee: First, whether the Table (for the middle Crosse of uniting the four principal parts) be made perfect or no.

Ave: Thou hast found out the truth of it?

There is no question that this numbering of the quadrants on the Great Table was intended by the angels, at least at this stage. On January 14, 1585, Kelley received an extremely important vision which I have called the Vision of the Round House. This vision expresses, in a pictorial form, the flow of elemental energies on the Great Table. At the outset of the Vision of the Round House, the relationship between the four directions and the numbering of the quarters is clearly established.

On that place standeth a round House, it hath four corners [within] and 4 Windows: and every Window is round, and hath 4 round partitions, round also. It hath 4 Doores, and at the East Door is one step, at the South 2 steps, and at the North 3, and at the West Door, 4 steps."

The number of steps before each door is the numbering of the related quadrants on the Original Great Table.

However, accepting that this numbering of the quadrants of the Great Table is correct, it does not follow that the placement of the two lower Watchtowers on those quadrants is also correct. The seals of the Watchtowers are revealed in a circle around the points of the compass, east, south, west and north. Each class of angels also unfolds in a complete clockwise circle around the Great Table. In my opinion (and it is only that), the Watchtowers should be placed in a complete clockwise circle beginning in the east in the order in which they were first revealed.

THE TABLET OF UNION

After instructing Dee in some of the uses of the names on the Watchtowers, Ave delivered what is commonly called the Tablet of Union, because its letters appear on the central Black Cross of the Great Table. This Tablet is formed by combining the letters in the names of the three geographical spirits of the tenth Aether, ZAX: Lexarph, Comanan and Tabitom. These are written continuously left to right into the rows of a square with four rows and five columns. The initial L in the first name is omitted. Ave instructed Dee to "Look out Lexarph, with the two other that follow him, among the names of the Earth the three last: Lexarph, Comanan, Tabitom."⁹

Tablet of Union.

These names for the spirits of the tenth Aether had been revealed by the angel Mapsama to Kelley more than a month earlier, on May 21, 1584, along with the names of the other spirits of the first fourteen Aethers.¹⁰ Concerning the placing of the names of the Tablet of Union on the Black Cross, Ave instructed Dee: "Set them down without the first Table: That shall make the crosse that bindeth the 4 Angles of the Table together. The same that stretcheth from the left to right, must also stretch from the right to the left."¹¹

The meaning is that the letters in the first two rows of the Tablet of Union are written on the column of the Black Cross twice, with each set of letters progressing from the top and the bottom towards the middle so that the two sets of ten letters are reflected around the center. This type of reflection is known as a lake reflection. The letters of the last two rows of the Tablet are written on the beam of the Black Cross twice, with each set progressing from the center toward the edges so that the two sets are reflected around the center. This kind of reflection is known as a mirror reflection.

THE USES OF THE GREAT TABLE

After delivering the four Watchtowers to Dee and Kelley, Ave explicitly set out the uses to which the Great Table may be put.

Ave: Now to the purpose: Rest, for the place is holy. First, generally what this Table containeth.

1. All humane knowledge.
2. Out of it springeth Physick.
3. The knowledge of all elemental Creatures, amongst you. How many kindes there are, and for what use they were created. Those that live in the air, by themselves. Those that live in the waters, by themselves. Those that dwell in the earth, by themselves. The property of the fire, which is the secret life of all things.

4. The knowledge, finding and use of Metals; the vertues of them; the congelations and vertues of Stones -- They are all of one matter.

5. The Conjoyning and knitting together of Natures. The destruction of Nature, and of things that may perish.

6. Moving from place to place (as, into this Country, or that Country at pleasure.)

7. The knowledge of all crafts Mechanical.

8. Transmutatio formalis, sed non essentialis [transmutation of forms, but not of essences].

[Dee's marginal note: The ninth Chapter may be added, and is of the secrets of men knowing; whereof there is a peculiar Table.]¹²

The functions of the Great Table are set forth in greater detail in Dee's manuscript Liber Scientiae and will be examined in the next chapter, along with the extraction and use of the angelic names.

THE REFORMED GREAT TABLE OF RAPHAEL

On April 20, 1587, almost three years following the initial reception of the Watchtowers, the angel Raphael communicated a corrected version of the Great Table to Kelley. At that point, Kelley was disillusioned with the angels and wanted nothing more to do with them, but Raphael was persistent.

Dee: E.K. had this day divers apparitions unto him in his own Chamber, and instructions in divers matters which he regarded not, but remained still in his purpose of utterly discrediting those Creatures, and not to have any more to do with them. But among divers apparitions he noted this of one that said unto him.

Raphael: Joyn Enoch his Tables.

Give every place his running number.

Kelley: What mean you by places?

Raphael: The squares. Which done, refer every letter in the Table to his number, and so read what I will, for this is the last time I will admonish you.

Kelley: A man standeth in the Air in a fiery Globe of my heighth, accompanied with some hundred of Puppets: on the one side of him standeth a woman, and about her are four Clouds all white.

The man upon a white Triangle shewed these Numbers with spaces, as you see following [here follows a large numerical table, which I have omitted].

Dee: Note: When E.K. had shewed me this Note, I by and by brought forth my book of Enoch his Tables, and found the four letters r T b d to be the four first letters of the four principal squares standing about the black Cross: and that here they were to be placed otherwise than as I had set them. And in the first placing of them together, I remember that I had doubt how to joyn them; for they were given apart each by themselves.

Secondly, I found out the 4 Characters; saving they were inverted somewhat, and one of them closed: whereof I found none like, but very near. These Characters were of every square one.

Thirdly, I did take these numbers contained between the lines (some more and some fewer) to be words to be gathered out of the Table of letters: so many words as were distinct companies of numbers; it is to wit, 41.

Hereupon we began to number the squares wherein the letters stood in Enoch's Tables as I had them, but we could not exactly finde the words, but somewhat near. Hereupon being tired, and desirous to know the sense of that Cypher, we left off till after supper, and then we assayed again: but we could not bolt it out, thought we knew very near what was to be done by the instruction of a spiritual Voice, now and then helping us toward the practise.

At length, E.K. was willed to go down into his Chamber, and I did remain still at our Dineing Table till his return, which was within an hour or somewhat more. And at his return this he brought in writing [here is printed in rough form the amended Great Table of Raphael].

Raphael: The black Cross is right, and needeth no mending. But thus much I do, to let thee understand, that thou mayest consider thy self to be a man: And beneath this understanding, unless thou submit all into the hands of God, for his sake; who else leaving you, all naked, provideth in his creatures to his own glory.... I Raphael, counsel you to make a Covenant with the Highest, and to esteem his wings more then your own lives.¹⁴

The Reformed Great Table of Raphael, which I give here in its corrected form (see page 186), is the arrangement of the Watchtowers most often used in modern magic. The ordering of the Watchtowers on the Reformed Table was adopted by the Golden Dawn, and after the diaspora of the members of this Hermetic Order, was spread throughout English-speaking countries.

As you can see, Raphael does not allocate the Watchtowers around the quarters of the Reformed Table in the order of their initial reception any more than Dee did in the Original Table. He places the first received Watchtower (ORO, IBAH, AOZPI) on the east quarter of the Table, which is the upper left. However, he puts the fourth received Watchtower (MPH, ARSL, GAIOL) on the south quarter, the upper right. The third received Watchtower (OIP, TEAA, PDOCE) he puts on the west quarter of the Table, the lower right, but places the second received Watchtower (MOR, DIAL, HCTGA) on the north quarter of the Table, the lower left.

You must decide for yourself which version of the Great Table to use. In my opinion, neither the Original Table of Dee nor the Reformed Table of Raphael is correct in its placement of the Watchtowers on the quarters. This conviction led me to create yet a third version (see Chapter Ten), which I have named the Restored Great Table, because it restores the Watchtowers to their original sequence around the Earth. The Watchtowers are placed upon the Table in a clockwise circle beginning with the upper left quarter (east—ORO, IBAH, AOZPI), then the upper right (south—MOR, DIAL, HCTGA), then the lower right (west—OIP, TEAA, PDOCE), then the lower left (north—MPH, ARSL, GAIOL).

In this Restored Great Table, the numbering of the quadrants (as assigned to them in the Vision of the Round House) remains unchanged, but the numbers attached to the Watchtowers that occupy the two lower quadrants become inverted. The fourth Watchtower delivered by the angels (MPH, ARSL, GAIOL) is placed in the northern quadrant, which bears the number three, and the third Watchtower delivered by the angels (OIP, TEAA, PDOCE) is placed in the western quadrant, which bears the number four.

I suspect that the main reason Raphael felt compelled to deliver the Reformed Great Table to Kelley was to correct the placement of the last two Watchtowers, and that Kelley somehow got the instructions of the angel mixed up. Raphael also corrected many of the individual letters in the Watchtowers. I have adopted these letter corrections in my own Restored Great Table.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

The Angels of the Watchtowers

"EAST AND WEST, IN RESPECT OF YOUR POLES"

Each Watchtower has distinct classes of spirits that are arranged in a hierarchy of descending authority. The structure of the hierarchy and the functions of its parts are the same for all four Watchtowers. However, those angels whose names are on the Watchtower of the East only act in the east, while those whose names are on the Watchtower of the West only act in the west, and so on.

There is some ambiguity over just where the four parts of the Earth are to be reckoned. Dee quite reasonably asked whether this meant the four directions in relation to the magician, regardless of where he might be standing, or the four regions of the Earth. Ave replied, in a somewhat ambiguous fashion, that it meant the four directions with respect to the poles of the Earth.

Ave: The 24 Seniors are all of one Office: But when thou wilt work in the East, thou must take such as bear rule there; so must thou do of the rest.

Dee: Do you mean the estate, in respect of any place we shall be in, or in respect of any earthly place, accounted alwayes the East part of the world, wheresoever we be?

Ave: The East and West, in respect of your Poles. What will you else of me?

It is not clear from Ave's statement which system the angel intended. Dee's first suggestion, that east should be reckoned from the location of the magician, is a much more workable solution than to try to divide up the nations of the world. To decide whether a particular place lies in the east, south, west or north is by no means an easy task. Obviously, Sweden is in the north, but is England in the north or the west? Is Russia north or east? What about South America? Or Hawaii? Or Morocco? The only certain location is Jerusalem, which was considered to be the center, or navel, of the Earth.

For the sake of simplicity, I suggest that the four directions of the world be related to the place where the Enochian magic is being worked, when the effect is to take place away from the place of working. That is to say, if the magician works a ritual in London that is to take place in Paris, he or she should use the spirits of the eastern Watchtower. Only if the magic is to take effect in the same place as the working of the ritual should the four regions of the Earth be considered. For example, if the magician works a ritual in London that is to take place in the same part of London, without a specific geographical focus, the angels of the western Watchtower would be employed (since England was, in classical times, considered part of the west).

The accompanying table (opposite) shows a Watchtower with the offices of the angels whose names are found on its quarters. It should be noted that the quarters of the Watchtowers are numbered the same way the Watchtowers themselves are numbered on the Great Table.

Offices of the Angels on Any Watchtower

THE ANGELIC HIERARCHY

The angels on the Watchtowers are those described in an emblematic way in Kelley's Great Vision. The Watchtowers also contain the names of evil spirits not mentioned in Kelley's vision. The Watchtower of the East will be used as an example, but the same classes of angels and spirits are to be found in the same places on all four Watchtowers, and the office or function of each class of angel is similar on all the Watchtowers.

THE KINGS

The King is the angel that Ave describes as the Overseer and Watchtower. This suggests that the King and the Watchtower are, to some extent, synonymous. Ave also says, "the Chief Watchman, is a mighty Prince, a mighty Angel of the Lord." Kelley describes the King as "a comely man, very much Apparel on his back, his Robe having a long train." It is the function of the King to summon the six Seniors for judgments.

The name of the King of the Watchtower of the East is either Bataiva when the King evokes the Seniors for an act of mercy, or Bataivh when the King evokes the Seniors for an act of severe judgment. Ave says, "Thou hast Bataiva or Bataivh. You must take but one of them, either the [final] A or the h. A, comiter, and h in extremis Iudicis." It is a letter taken from the left column of letters on the double pillar of God in each Watchtower (presumably the column of the Son) that makes the King merciful, and a letter taken from the right pillar (presumably the column of the Father) that makes the King severe.

The name of each King is written in a clockwise spiral around the double intersection of the Great Cross on each Watchtower, beginning with the fifth letter in the line of the Holy Ghost or Spirit. The last letter in the name of the King of the east is either the A or h in the two squares that form the center of the Cross. The letters of the name Bataiva are highlighted in the accompanying diagram, which shows the center of the Watchtower of the East.

a	s	o	m	r	b
n	d	a	T	d	i
i	b	A	h	a	o
b	r	V	i	x	g
i	t	T	p	a	l

The only deviation from this pattern occurs on the OIP, TEAA, PDOCE Watchtower, which is the Watchtower of the North on the Original Table, but the Watchtower of the West on the Reformed Table of Raphael and also on my own Restored Table (remember, the quarters of the east, south, west and north do not shift on the Great Table even when the Watchtowers themselves are moved). On the OIP, TEAA, PDOCE Watchtower the letter "a" occurs twice in the intersection of the Great Cross. Dee has distinguished between the King of mercy (Eldprna) and the King of severity (Edlprna) by interchanging the second and third letters in the name of the King to indicate mercy.

The eight names of the Kings on the Original Great Table of the Watchtowers are as follows:

EAST:	Bataiva (mercy)	SOUTH:	Iczzhhca (mercy)
	Bataivh (severity)		Iczzhhcl (severity)
NORTH:	Eldprna (mercy)	WEST:	Raagios (mercy)
	Edlprna (severity)		Raagiol (severity)

THE BANNER NAMES OF GOD

The three names of God on the line of the Holy Ghost ("linea Spiritus Sancti") are those that were written on the three banners or ensigns carried out the gate of each Watchtower in Kelley's Great Vision. Ave called these the "names of God, that govern all the creatures upon the Earth, visible and invisible, comprehending 3, 4, 5." It is significant that there are twelve letters in the three names, and twelve names in all. This links the banner names with the twelve permutations of Tetragrammaton: a vital part of Hebrew occultism that both Dee and Kelley were familiar with from their studies.

The three banner names may be regarded as the divine authority of the King of the Watchtower, who is sometimes referred to by the angels as a prince to distinguish him from the One King, Christ. The four Kings of the Watchtowers carry out the edict of God the Son and God the Father. These two aspects of God are of one purpose, as is indicated by the pillar on the Great Cross, which is both the pillar of the Father when undivided, but also the pillar of Father and Son when divided with a line down the middle.

It is under these banners that Bataiva rules the east, Iczhhca rules the south, Raagios rules the west, and Eldprna rules the north (on the Original Table). Dee employs these twelve names in the opening "Fundamental Obesience" to God that comes before all his invocations in his personal Book of Spirits, which is recorded in his manuscript Liber Scientiae.³

The three names of God are extracted by reading across the line of Spirit from left to right. The diagram below shows the central part of the Watchtower of the East with the names of God in boldfaced type.

NORTH: Oip, Teaa, Pdoce WEST: Mph, Arsl, Gaiol

THE SENIORS

The Seniors of each Watchtower are described by Kelley as "six ancient men, with white beards and staves in their hands." Ave explicitly says of the twenty-four Seniors that they are "the 24 Seniors, that St. John remembreth." Therefore their description in the fourth chapter of Revelation applies: "And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold." Later, the elders arise from their seats and fall down upon their knees before the throne of Christ and "cast their crowns before the throne."

The Seniors (or Senators as they are also called by Ave) are the only group of angels in the Great Vision that perform two actions. They walk out of each gate in a single rank, six abreast, in company with all the other angels who surround the King. But when they reach the center of the four Watchtowers (called the "Court" by Ave, who is making a pun on the legal court of judgment), they go to the middle and form a ring. Although nothing is described in the middle of the court, this would be the location of the throne of Christ, which is always situated in the center of everything. Ave says: "They seem to consult."

In describing the manner of extracting the names of the Seniors to Dee, Ave says: "Now for your six Seniors: whose judgment is of God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost."⁴ The act of judicial judgement is clearly central to the role of the Seniors. The Seniors represent the twenty-four hours of the day, and thus time. They sit in judgment over the actions of the human race, which occur in time. As I have shown in my book

Tetragrammaton, the Enochian angels conceived of the Seniors as being seated around the throne of God in two rings of twelve chairs each, one ring directly above the other.⁴ Each ring was in two crescents of six chairs. This is indicated quite clearly in a vision Kelley experienced on January 13, 1584:

Now I see all those men, whose feet I saw before: And there sitteth One in a Judgement seat, with all his teeth fiery. And there sit six, on one side of him, and six on the other. And there sit twelve in a lower seat under them. All the place is like Gold, garnished with precious stones. On his head is a great stone; covering his head; a stone most bright, brighter then fire.⁵

The reason Ave says that the Seniors are "of God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost" is because their names trace out the Great Cross on each Watchtower, with each name beginning from one of the two letters at the intersection of the Cross and proceeding outward. The names of the two Seniors located on the line of the Holy Spirit may be written with either six or seven letters, depending on which of the two letters at the intersection of the Cross is chosen to begin the name. For example, the name of the first Senior of the east may be either Abioro or Habioro, reading from either of the letters at the center of the Great Cross to the left along the line of Spirit.

Ave tells Dee that he should make the names of the two Seniors located on the line of Spirit to be of seven letters "when the wrath of God is to be encreased." The addition of the extra letter intensifies the power of the Seniors, which is the power of judgment. For the sake of uniformity, the names of all six of the Seniors are usually written with seven letters. In the following diagram, the names of the Seniors of the Watchtower of the East are indicated in boldfaced type.

The names of the twenty-four Seniors on the Original Great Table are:

THE DISPOSITORS

The sixteen Dispositors in each Watchtower are located above the arms of the four lesser crosses. Ave says: "After every Cross, attendeth 16 Angels, dispositors of the will of those, that govern the Castles." It is the Dispositors who actually carry out the will of the Kings. Kelley describes them as "16 white Creatures." Concerning these sixteen angels who are above the lesser crosses, Ave tells Dee that they "have no participation with Devils."

There are four Dispositors above every lesser cross. Each is represented by a single letter. For example, the diagram below shows the subquarter of the east (upper left quarter) on the Watchtower that occupies the eastern quarter of the Original Great Table. In this diagram, the four Dispositors are highlighted in boldfaced type.

r	Z	i	l	a
a	r	d	Z	a
c	z	o	n	s
T	o	i	T	t
S	i	g	a	s
f	m	o	n	d

As was true of the single-letter names of the forty-two Ministers that serve each heptarchical Prince, these rows of single letters may be permuted to yield four names of four letters. For example, the four letters above the arm of the lesser cross in the eastern subquarter of the Watchtower of the East are r Z l a. Each letter represents an angel. By moving each letter in turn to the beginning of the row, four names of four letters are generated:

R z l a
Z l a r

The set of four Dispositors above the arm of each lesser cross is ruled by a specific name of God. This divine name is created by adding the letter in the Black Cross of the Great Table that stands in the same row as the four Dispositors to the head of the four letters of the Dispositors. In the example, the letter in the Black Cross that shares the same row with the Dispositors above the lesser cross in the eastern subquarter of the Watchtower of the East is e. This letter from the Black Cross is placed before the letters of the group of Dispositors to form the divine name Erzla.

By a similar process, the divine name that rules the four Dispositors above the southern lesser cross of the Watchtower of the East is Eutpa. The divine name that rules the four Dispositors of the western lesser cross of this Watchtower is Hxgzd. The divine name that rules the four Dispositors of the northern lesser cross is Hcnbr. The divine name is employed ritually to evoke the four Dispositors related to it.

Each of these four groups of Dispositors has its own function in Enochian magic.⁶ Dispositors in the eastern subquarters rule the "knitting together of Natures," which means the joining together of things, as in the process of growth or healing. The opposite power also applies, which is the destruction of natures, since the creation of one thing is the destruction of another. Elsewhere, in the list of uses of the Great Table, Ave tells Dee that these angels control: "The Conjoyning and knitting together of Natures. The Destruction of Nature, and of things that may perish."⁷ Those in the southern subquarters rule the "carrying from place," which probably signifies physical travel of persons and the movement of objects. In the list of uses of the Great Table Ave calls this: "Moving from place to place [as, into this Country, or that Country at pleasure]."

About those in the western subquarters, Ave tells Dee: "Herein may you find the secrets of Kings, and so unto the lowest degree," which seems generally to signify the revelation of secret things. In a marginal note, Dee shows that he understood this as "the secrets of men knowing."

Dispositors in the northern subquarters rule "All Hand-crafts, or Arts," which signifies the teaching and bringing of success in the arts and sciences. Dee understood this to mean "All humane knowledge."

The function of corresponding groups is the same on all the Watchtowers, but applies to different zones of the Earth. Ave tells Dee:

But you must Note, That as the Angels of the first of the four Crosses in the East, which are for Medicine: so are the first of the second, the first of the third, and the first of the fourth; so that for Medicine there be sixteen, and so of all the rest in their order: but that they differ in that, some be the angels of the East, other some of the West, and so of the rest.*

Ave is talking about the angels beneath the arms of the lesser crosses here, but the principle applies to the Dispositors as well. For example, the office of the four angels above the lesser cross of the west on the Watchtower of the East is to reveal secrets in the eastern part of the world. The function of the similar group above the lesser cross of the west on the Watchtower of the North is also to reveal secrets, but these four angels reveal the secrets of the northern part of the world.

Listed in the accompanying table are the names of the sixty-four Dispositors who stand above the arms of the sixteen lesser crosses on the Original Great Table, along with the ruling divine names and offices of these angels. Again, it must be stressed that the quarters east, south, west and north relate to the Great Table itself, not to the individual Watchtowers. The associations of the Dispositors with the directions will be somewhat different on the Reformed Table of Raphael and my own Restored Table because the Watchtowers occupy different quarters.

The Dispositors on the Original Great Table

THE ANGELS BOTH GOOD AND EVIL

These are the angels in each Watchtower whose names are written on either side of the lesser crosses beneath the arms of the lesser crosses. They are obviously related to the sixteen Dispositors, but this relationship is never made completely clear by the Enochian angels. The sixteen angels above the arms of the lesser crosses are said by Ave to be wholly good, whereas the sixteen angels below the arms are of a mixed nature, neither wholly good nor wholly evil.

Only one set of sixteen angels for each Watchtower appears in Kelley's Great Vision, so it is possible that by the Dispositors Ave intends the angels below the arms of the crosses. I tend to believe that the Dispositors are the angels above the arms because all the other angels in the Great Vision are good. It might be speculated that the sixteen angels above the arms rule the sixteen below the arms, but Ave does not directly state this relationship.

There are four good angels and four sibling evil angels below the arm of each lesser cross. The letters that make up the names of the good and evil angels in the eastern subquarter of the Watchtower of the East are highlighted below in bold type.

r	Z	i	l	a
a	r	d	Z	a
c	z	o	n	s
T	o	i	T	t
S	i	g	a	s
f	m	o	n	d

When the names of the angels below the arms of the lesser crosses are written with four letters, they are good angels, but when they are written with only three letters, they are evil angels. Thus they form two distinct sets of angels, but since both good and evil angels derive from the same letters, they should be understood as related, each pair composed of a good and an evil twin.

THE GOOD ANGELS

The names of the good angels are derived by reading across each row from left to right. In the example, the good angels of the subquarter of the east on the Watchtower of the East are Czns, Tott, Sias and Fmnd. To greatly increase the effectiveness of their function, they may be made into names of five letters by including the letters in the column of the lesser cross: Czons, Toitt, Sigas, Fmond.

Each group of four good angels in the subquarter of a Watchtower has its own particular function. The function of the four angels in the example is healing. By adding the letters in the stem of the lesser cross to the names, their power of healing becomes enhanced. Ave says concerning the four good angels in the subquarter of the east on the Watchtower of the East: "If it be an incurable disease (in the judgment of man) then adde the letter that standeth against the name, and make him up five: then he cureth miraculously."¹¹

Dee understood Ave's words to mean the letter in the column of the lesser cross should be added to the names, and in his Liber Scientiae he gives the names of the good angels with five letters based on this assumption. I should point out, however, that the directions of the angel are not altogether clear. It is possible that Ave intended that the letter in the Black Cross that occupies the same row as the name of a good angel should be added to the front of the name of the angel to intensify its power. If this is done, the four good angels whose names are of five letters would be Xczns, Atott, Rsias and Pfmnd. In giving the names of the good angels, I have adhered to Dee's understanding of Ave's directions, but I wanted to point out that another interpretation is possible.

The four good angels of each subquarter are invoked to visible appearance within the crystal, or evoked within the ritual chamber, by the name of God of six letters that lies on the column of the lesser cross in the same subquarter, reading from top to bottom. In the example, the divine name that invokes (or evokes) is Idoigo. This same group of four good angels is commanded by the name of God of five letters written on the arm of the lesser cross, reading left to right. In the example, the divine name that commands is Ardza. Speaking about the angel Czns, Ave tells Dee: "It is one of the 4 angels that serve to that crosse, which are ruled by this name Idoigo. It is the name of God, of six letters: Look in the crosse that descendeth, In that name [Idoigo] they appear, by the name [Ardza] that is in the crosse [Transversary] they do that they are commanded."

As is true of the Dispositors, each group of four good angels on a Watchtower has its own specific function. The good angels in the subquarters of the east rule over medicine. Ave tells Dee: "Those 4 be of Physick." When their names are increased to five letters, their healing power is miraculous.

The angels in the subquarters of the south are concerned with metals and mining. About them Ave says:

"They have power over Metals, to find them, to gather them together, and to use them." In enumerating the uses of the Great Table, Ave has also listed as one of their functions "The congelations, and vertues of Stones." By this, precious and semiprecious jewels should be understood.

The good angels in the subquarters of the west give knowledge and command of the elemental spirits. The first angel of the four rules the air, the second the water, the third the earth, and the fourth "the life, or fire of things that live." In his list of uses for the Great Table, Ave says concerning the power of this group of good angels: "The knowledge of all elemental Creatures, amongst you. How many kindes there are, and for what use they were created. Those that live in the air, by themselves. Those that live in the waters, by themselves. Those that dwell in the earth, by themselves. The property of the fire which is the secret life of all things."

The good angels in the subquarters of the north have the power of transformations. Ave defines this office in Latin, saying "Transmutatio formalis, sed non essentialis," which means that the change is one of outward form but not of essential nature. These angels can change a spoon into a fork, or make a beggar appear to be a king, but they cannot transform lead into gold (which must have disappointed Kelley!). They can, however, change a lump of coal into a diamond, since this is a transformation of form and not essence (both are carbon).

The four classes of good angels are the same on each of the four Watchtowers, but those on the Watchtower of the East act in the eastern part of the world, those angels who perform the same function on the Watchtower of the South act in the southern part of the world, and so for the rest.

The Good Angels on the Original Great Table

On the table of the good angels, the letters extracted from the pillars of the lesser crosses to increase the number of letters in each name from four to five are indicated in boldfaced type.

THE EVIL ANGELS

If only the first two letters in the name of each good angel are taken, and to the front of them is prefixed the letter in the Black Cross that occupies the same row, the name of an evil angel is created. These evil angels always have names of three letters, as Ave tells Dee: "Every name, sounding of three letters, beginning out of that line [of the Black Cross], is the name of a Devil, or wicked Angel, as well from the right, as from the left...."

When describing to Dee the four evil angels of the subquarter of the east on the Watchtower of the East, Ave says:

Ave: But if thou wilt send sickness, then take two of the letters, and adde the letter of the Crosse [Dee: the black crosse] to that, as in the second, a T o.

[Dee: This a, is of the crosse of union, or the black crosse.]

Ave: Then he is a wicked power, and bringeth in disease: and when thou callest him, call him by the name of god, backward: for unto him, so, he is a god: and so constrain him backward, as Ogiodi.

Dee: I think the Constraint must be, by the name of the Transversary backward pronounced, as of Ardza, is backward, azdra: For ogiodi, should but cause him to appear by the order of Idoigo, used for the 4 good Angels.¹²

The meaning of this passage is that the evil angels are evoked or called to visible appearance by the name of God in the pillar of the lesser cross for their particular subquarter read backward, from bottom to top. They are commanded by the name of God in the arm of the cross read backward, from right to left. Because they are evil, these inverted names of God are divine to them, and have power over them.

There is some confusion in the angelic transcript over whether the sixteen evil angels native to each Watchtower should even be used in Enochian magic. Ave refers to them when he speaks about sending sickness, and also in connection with obtaining money in the form of coins:

Ave: These [evil angels of the southern subquarter] can give money coined, in Gold or Silver.

Dee: Which these?

These wicked ones mean you?

Ave: I.

The other give no money coined, but the metal.

Dee: You mean the good.

Ave: I.¹³

This suggests that at least some of the evil angels have a legitimate function in Enochian magic. However, a little further on in their conversation Ave strongly contradicts this assumption, much to Kelley's disgust:

Dee: As concerning the wicked here, Shall I call or summon them all, as I do the good ones in the name of God?

Ave: No man calleth upon the name of God in the wicked: They are servants and vile slaves.

Dee: We call upon the name of Jesus in the expulging of devils, saying in the name of Jesus, etc.

Ave: That In, is against the wicked. No just man calleth upon the name of God, to allure the devil.

Dee: Then they are not to be named in the first summoning or invitation.

Ave: At no time to be called.

Kelley: How then shall we proceed with them?

Ave: When the Earth lieth opened unto your eyes, and when the Angels of Light, shall offer the passages of the Earth, unto the entrance of your senses (chiefly of seeing) Then shall you see the Treasures of the Earth, as you go: And the caves of the Hills shall not be unknown unto you: Unto these, you may say, Arise, be gone, Thou art of destruction and of the places of darknesse: These are provided for the use of man. So shalt thou use the wicked, and no otherwise.

Dee: This is as concerning the natural Mines of the Earth.

Ave: Not so, for they have nothing to do with the natural Mines of the Earth, but, with that which is corrupted with man.

Dee: As concerning the coined they have power to bring it.

Ave: So they may: that they keep, and no other.

Dee: How shall we know what they keep, and what they keep not?

Ave: Read my former words; for thou dost not understand them.

Dee: I read it: beginning at the first line on this side, when the Angels of Light, etc.

I mean of coined money that they keep not; How shall we do to serve our necessities with it?

Ave: The good Angels are Ministers for that purpose. The Angels of the 4 angles shall make the Earth open unto you, and shall serve your necessities from the 4 parts of the Earth.¹⁴

This is not exactly a clear statement on the part of the angel. He seems to be saying that although the evil angels can be used to cause sickness and obtain coined money, they should not be named except to banish them from the clay of human flesh. Dee did not understand that Ave was speaking about the dark places of the human body, not the mines of the Earth.

The offices of the evil angels are substantially the same as those of their good brethren, but their areas of influence are perverted to evil purposes. For example, the good angels of the eastern subquarters cure disease and teach medicine, while the evil angels bring sickness and death. The good angels of the southern subquarters teach the finding and use of metals, while their evil twins teach counterfeiting and the wicked uses of money, such as gambling. The good angels of the western subquarters teach the knowledge of elemental spirits, while the evil angels teach the uses of these spirits for perverse or hurtful ends. The good angels of the northern subquarters teach transformations of form, while the evil angels teach the art of illusions and trickery of the senses.

The table of the evil angels (opposite) shows their offices and the inverted divine names of the lesser crosses by which they are summoned and commanded as they appear on the Original Great Table of the Watchtowers.

As you can see, it is possible to extract another set of sixty-four evil angels by combining the letters in the column of the Black Cross with the pairs of letters in the same row that stand on the right side of the lesser crosses. In the eastern subquarter of the Watchtower of the East, for example, the cacodemons are Xcz, Ato, Rsi and Pfm, but with this method of extraction they might just as easily be Xns, Att, Ras and Pnd. Dee makes no suggestion that this possibility ever occurred to him, nor do the Enochian angels refer to it. I merely mention it here as a point of interest.

THE QUESTIONS THAT WENT UNANSWERED

The explanation given by Ave concerning the parts and uses of the Great Table is incomplete. Nowhere does he mention the associations on the Table with the Trumpeters of Kelley's Great Vision. Neither does he explain the link between the Table and the five Princes in each Watchtower who hold up the train of the King. The relationship between the letters on the beam of the Black Cross (what Dee calls the "Transversary") and the Watchtowers is not set forth. About the multitude of spirits that Kelley saw, as Dee says, "standing after the sixteen Angels next the Gate," Ave says only "They be Ministers and servants."¹⁵

The Evil Angels on the Original Great Table

Dee made several pointed inquiries about these and several other more general matters, but each time he was put off by the angels, who clearly had no intention of revealing these mysteries to him. Since they did not wish Dee to actually use Enochian magic in his lifetime (despite their intimations to the contrary), they may have withheld this essential information to prevent him from defying their order that he await permission to use the magic.

THE PRINCES

After considering the matter, it seems very likely to me that the four ranks of five Princes who hold up the trains of the Kings in Kelley's Vision are equivalent to the four rows of letters in the Tablet of Union. Each letter in the Tablet of Union stands for a Prince. The four rows in the Tablet are probably assigned to the Watchtowers in the same curious way that the Watchtowers are numbered on the Original Great Table.

1. Watchtower of the East: e x a r p
2. Watchtower of the South: h c o m a
3. Watchtower of the North: n a n t a
4. Watchtower of the West: b i t o m

By the familiar process of Enochian permutation, the single letter that stands for the name of each Prince may be extended into a five-letter name that is derived from the row of letters to which it belongs.

This arrangement of the Princes on the Great Table (opposite) is based on my personal speculation. I have not encountered it elsewhere, nor have I seen any other conjectures as to what the figures of the Princes in Kelley's Vision may signify. It does seem very suggestive that there are five Princes in each Watchtower, and that each row of the Tablet of Union has five letters.

1.	EAST	2.	SOUTH
Princes of the East	Exarp Xarpe Arpex Rpexa Pexar	Princes of the South	Hcoma Comah Omahc Mahco Ahcom
3.	NORTH	4.	WEST
Princes of the North	Nanta Antan Ntana Tanan Anant	Princes of the West	Bitom Itomb Tombi Ombit Mbita

The Princes on the Great Table

THE TRUMPETERS

Regarding the other mystery, the meaning of the single Trumpeter with his strange horn of six openings arranged in the shape of a pyramid or (seen from the front) a triangle, my guess is that this refers to the letters at the intersections of the five crosses in each Watchtower. Every lesser cross has a single letter at its intersection, but the Great Cross that runs through the middle of the Watchtower is double, and has two letters at its intersection.

These six letters, gathered together, would make a single name. One reasonable way to gather them is to take them in a clockwise circle around the Watchtower beginning with the lesser cross of the eastern subquarter, and ending at the center with the two letters of the Great Cross. This is the same pattern by which the name of the King is derived. The following four names of six letters would result:

1. Watchtower of the East: D l o i a h
2. Watchtower of the South: N n p b a l
3. Watchtower of the North: O a z o a a
4. Watchtower of the West: L e a a s l

Again, this is speculation unsupported by any statement of the angels. The letters at the intersections of the crosses are surely of significance in the scheme of Enochian magic, but what this significance may be remains unknown.

"THE LETTERS OF THE TRANSVERSARY"

Ave explains the use of the letters in the column of the Black Cross upon the Great Table in detail. They seem to embody the divine energy that vitalizes the lesser angels and demons, when added to their names. The rays of the Black Cross symbolize the four rivers that flow out of the throne of God in Paradise (and in New Jerusalem, which is Paradise returned to the Earth). However, Ave says nothing at all about the letters in the arm of the Black Cross.

Dee was curious as to why the three geographical regions or genii of the tenth Aether (Lexarph, Comanan, Tabitom) had been chosen to form the letters of the Black Cross. Ave refused to enlighten him.

Dee: I think a mystery did depend upon the choice of the three names, Lexarph, Comanan, and Tabitom.

Ave: That is not to our purpose."

Dee persists, as this matter is obviously of the greatest importance. Later in the same conversation he asks:

Dee: Of the Letters in the Transversary of the wicked their black Crosse, I know no use, as of motivat; nan, etc.

Ave: Thou shalt know, when thou writest thy book."

This was only another way of putting Dee off the question. Dee was nothing if not persistent. Five days later he got another chance to ask Ave the same question:

Dee: Of the letters in the Transversary, I would know your will.

Ave: They are, as the other, but for a peculiar practice."

This is the only clue we get concerning the letters in the arm of the Black Cross, but it is a useful hint. It appears that the letters of the arm are to be added to the front of angel names extracted by reading the letters in the subquarters of the Great Table in columns. The names extracted from the pillars of the lesser crosses would probably be divine names by which the others are invoked, reading down the pillars in the case of good angels and up the pillars in the case of evil angels. The divine names would have seven letters, the names of the good angels six letters (five plus the intensifier in the arm of the lesser cross), and the names of the evil angels five letters. The good angels of the columns may be commanded by reading the names on the arms of the associated lesser crosses from left to right, while the evil angels of the columns are commanded by reading the names on the arms of the lesser crosses from right to left.

THE GOOD ANGELS OF THE COLUMNS

For what this speculation may be worth, I have arranged the conjectured names of the good angels of the columns, along with their invoking God names, in the table on page 216. Their functions are unknown. As is true of all the other tables in this chapter, it is based on the Original Great Table, and would be different for

In the final table I have extracted the names of the conjectured evil angels of the columns from the Original Great Table, along with the inverted names of God by which they may be invoked. Evil Angels of the Columns on the Original Great Table which is so often referred to by the Enochian angels in their conversations with Dee and Kelley. This might be the reason Ave refused to explain the function of the columns and the beam of the Black Cross to Dee.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

The Enochian Keys

THE TRANSMISSION OF THE KEYS

The last word of the First Key, or Call, was transmitted to Dee through Kelley by the angel Nalvage on the morning of April 13, 1584. The Keys were revealed backward to prevent Dee from inadvertently using them as invocations when repeating them:

Nalvage: Unto this Doctrine belongeth the perfect knowledge and remembrance of the mysticall Creatures. How therefore shall I inform you, which know them not?

Dee: Mean you as Babyon, Boboyel, etc.

Nalvage: The Characters, or Letters of the Tables.

Dee: You mean the mystical Letters, wherein the holy book is promised to be written: and if the book be so written and laid open before us, and then you will from Letter to Letter point, and we to record your instructions: Then I trust we shall sufficiently understand, and learn your instructions.

Nalvage: Also in receiving of the calls, this is to be noted: that they are to be uttered of me, backward: and of you, in practise, forward.

Dee: I understand it, for the efficacy of them; else, all things called would appear: and so hinder our proceeding in learning.

The Keys correspond in number to the forty-nine large letter-number squares of Dee's Book of Enoch, save that the first table in the book has no Key. Nalvage explains to Dee:

I finde the Soul of man hath no portion in this first Table. It is the Image of the son of God, in the bosome of his father, before all the worlds. It comprehendeth his incarnation, passion, and return to judgement: which he himself, in flesh, knoweth not; all the rest are of understanding. The exact Center excepted.¹

The first unexpressed Call would seem to correspond with the small cross at the end of the magic square of the names of the seven angels who burn as flames before the throne of heavenly Christ (Revelation 4:5). If this is so, then the other forty-eight Calls probably correspond with the individual letters in this square, moving through the square from back to front. This is only conjecture on my part, however.

The Keys were delivered backward letter by letter (at least in the initial stage), and out of their proper sequence. This was a torturous process that must have sorely tried the patience and endurance of both Dee and Kelley:

86.

A (Two thousand and fourteen, in the sixth Table, is) D 7003. In the thirteenth Table is I.

A in the 21th Table. 11406 downward.

I in the last Table, one lesse then Number. A word, Jaida you shall understand, what that word is before the Sun go down. Jaida is the last word of the call.

85.

H 49. ascending T 49. descending. A 909. directly. O simply.

H 2029. directly, call it Hoath.

84.

225. From the low angle on the right side. Continuing in the same and next square. D 225. [The same number repeated].

A In the thirteenth Table, 740. ascending in his square.

In the square ascending.
Call it Mad.²

In this painful and confusing manner Nalvage revealed the last three Enochian words of the First Key of the forty-eight that are expressed. Apparently (though it is far from certain) the angel pointed to letters with a rod on a round crystal table on which he was standing. Kelley saw this in the showstone and reported the position of the pointer to Dee, who then looked up the corresponding letters on his own written tables. As Kelley worked, the crystal table of Nalvage became clearer: "His Table now appeareth very evidently to me, as that I could paint it all."³

THE KEYS AND THE GREAT TABLE

It is my conviction, based on the overall structure of the Great Table, that the Keys from the Third to the Eighteenth unfold themselves upon the Table in four overlapping clockwise circles (see the diagram on the next page). Each circle begins in a subquarter of the Eastern Watchtower. Each passes through the middle of the lesser cross of the corresponding subquarters on the other three Watchtowers. The circles are numbered according to the numbering of the quadrants and subquadrants—that is to say, the first circle begins in the eastern, or first, subquarter of the Watchtower of the East; the second begins in the southern, or second, subquarter; the third begins in the northern, or third, subquarter; and the fourth circle begins in the western, or fourth, subquarter.

Four Cycles of the Keys on the Great Table

The first two Keys probably relate to the pillar and beam of the central Black Cross on the Great Table. The unexpressed primordial Key that corresponds with the first of the forty-nine Tables of Enoch may relate to the center of the Black Cross. It should be designated by a zero, similar to the use of zero for the first card of the Tarot (the Fool).

This relationship of the Keys to the Great Table is never clearly stated by the angels, but may be deduced from internal evidence in the Keys. On the Watchtowers, the three rays of each Great Cross are explicitly given to the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost of the Christian trinity. I suspect that the pillar, beam, and center of the Black Cross are also linked with the trinity. The Father is probably assigned the pillar of the Black Cross, and the First Key. The Son is probably assigned the beam of the Black Cross, and the Second Key. The Holy Spirit, who is the unseen Mother of many of the Enochian angels, is probably assigned the intersection of the Black Cross, which is a dimensionless point, and the unexpressed primordial Key that has nothing directly to do with the human race or the Earth.

In the biblical metaphor of New Jerusalem, which is so intimately linked with Enochian magic, the Father and Son are combined in the figure of heavenly Christ, who has the white hair of an old man (just as the hair of Moses turned white while he communed with God and received the ten Commandments). In Revelation, the heavenly Christ is described both as a king who sits in authority and passes judgments, and as a mounted conquering prince who wields a two-edged sword of retribution. The Holy Ghost is represented by the throne on which heavenly Christ sits at the exact center of New Jerusalem. From the throne flow the four rivers of Paradise, corresponding to the four arms of the Black Cross.

It is usual in Enochian magic to progress backwards from the end to the beginning. This was the course followed by Aleister Crowley when he worked the invocations of the thirty Aethers. He began with the thirtieth and ended with the first. It is possible that in the final apocalypse working one of the eighteen distinct Keys is to be vibrated each day, beginning with the eighteenth and working backward to the first. In this way, the magician would progress four times counterclockwise around the Great Table, beginning in the north and ending in the east (the process by which the table of clay was revealed to Dee and Kelley in the initial transmission of the Watchtowers), then would follow the two arms of the Black Cross to the center of the four Watchtowers, where lies the fountain of Holy Spirit. It is through this fountain of Spirit that the thirty Aethers are to be accessed. The intersection of the Great Cross is the doorway into the Great Table of the Watchtowers.

THE AUTHOR OF THE ENOCHIAN KEYS

The Enochian Keys are clearly ritual invocations (or evocations, depending on whether the spirits to whom they are applied are called in, or called out). Yet in discussing the Book of Spirits, the angel Ave tells Dee that he must write the invocations for the Book himself, since invocation is a function of the free will and fervent heat of the human soul, and angels have no part in it. When Dee presses Ave for more details, the angel says "I know not: for I dwell not in the soul of man."

If the angels cannot write invocations, and if the Keys are invocations, then who wrote the Keys? And why? It seems redundant that Dee should have to write a complete set of invocations to contact and bind the angels of the Watchtowers when he has already been given a complete set of invocations by the angels themselves.

The function of the Keys must be different from the function of Dee's own set of invocations, which was intended to initially call the angels of the Great Table during an eighteen-day working. It may be that Dee's invocations were also to be used in regularly summoning the angels. Ave talks about a book that is only to be used on one day, but this cannot refer to the Book of Spirits that contained Dee's invocations, which was to be used for at least eighteen days. As I have indicated, the book of one day probably is the Book of Silvered Leaves, which was (I believe) to be employed to record the seals and signatures of the invoked angels. No limit is placed on the use of Dee's own invocations.

It is usual for modern Enochian magicians to vibrate the Keys to summon the angels of the Watchtowers for everyday ritual work. This was the Golden Dawn practice. The founders of the Golden Dawn did not understand the need for the magician to compose an original set of invocations to establish initial contact with the angels. In the Golden Dawn, only the Keys were used to invoke or evoke the angels.

Perhaps the Keys have a higher and more specific purpose than everyday invocation. If they were not composed by the angels, but rather someone above the angels, they must have been written by the Father of Heaven, or by heavenly Christ the Son, or by the Mother of the angels who refers to herself only by the title I AM. They may be the text of the unrecorded apocalypse working, which I have postulated as the dark and secret heart of the Enochian communications.

Enochian magicians who employ the Keys casually for personal reasons may be unwittingly debasing them and abusing their power. Of course, if this is so, only the smallest fraction of the power of the Keys would be released during this awkward and inappropriate application. It would be akin to using a hundred-ton hydraulic press to hammer in a nail.

TEXT OF THE KEYS

The Enochian versions of the Keys were revealed before the English translations, although in some cases the English was revealed along with the Enochian. In Casaubon the initial recording of the Keys is, to say the least, confused. Toward the end of the process, fragments of one Key are mixed with fragments of another. Fortunately, the English translations later provided by Nalvage are much clearer.

Dee recorded the text of the Keys and its translation in a much more readable form in his manuscript 48 Claves Angelicae,⁵ and it is this manuscript version and its printed transcripts that I have followed in the corrected text of the Keys that appears here. I have adhered to Dee's own practice of writing the Enochian in rows from left to right, with the English translation directly above each word.

Some of the Enochian words are written in capitals by Dee. These are the power words, the actually triggers that bring about the visual apparition of the angels. It will be noticed that two forms of the Enochian word for "move" are used, ZACAR and ZACARE. ZACAR appears much more frequently. In my opinion the lower case "e" appended to the end of the word is intended merely as an aid to pronunciation. The hyphenated Enochian words are compound words that are written as single words in Dee's manuscript. I have inserted the hyphens to make it easier to understand their composition. For the sake of clarity, I have removed the hyphens that Dee put into single words (apparently as an aid to pronunciation). The Enochian words in square brackets have been inserted by me to fill in obvious gaps in the Enochian text. Purists may prefer to ignore them.

It has been observed⁶ that the Enochian language is extraordinarily compact, that one word in Enochian often signified an entire phrase in English. This fact has been used to support sceptics' claims that Enochian is not a real language. If we look at a French word in a French-English dictionary and compare its size with the size of the English definition that accompanies it, this is hardly evidence that French is not a language. Also, it should be noted that Dee was often writing the definitions or descriptions of difficult Enochian words, not merely their translations. Probably no adequate translation exists in English for many of these words.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

The Spirits of the Thirty Aethers

THE PRINCES OF THE AIRS

The names of the ninety-one Princes, who are the tutelary daemons or genii of the regions of the world, were delivered to Dee through Kelley by the angels Gabriel and Nalvage on May 21 and 22, 1584, at Cracow. Gabriel presided over the process, and Nalvage did the actual work. It was this hierarchy of geographical spirits that held the greatest promise of practical utility for Dee, who hoped to use them to achieve political advantages for his sovereign, Elizabeth I. This desire was not to be realized, however, because Dee was never granted permission to invoke them.

Although the names and sigils of these spirits are clearly set forth, along with the angels by which they are ruled and their esoteric associations, they constitute one of the most neglected aspects of Enochian magic. They were ignored by the Golden Dawn and by Aleister Crowley. This neglect continues through to the present day, perhaps because few Enochian magicians know what to do with them.

The thirty Aethers, or Airs, are described by the angels as concentric spheres surrounding the Earth. Each is divided into three parts, except the area closest to the Earth, which is divided into four. These parts are inhabited by ninety-one spirits whom Naivage refers to as "Princes and spiritual Governours." These Princes are all spirits of elemental Air, but each rules a particular region on the surface of the Earth.

Their habitations or Aethers lie between the surface of the Earth and the spiritual fires of the firmament. However, it is a trifle simplistic to conceive of them as occupying physical space. Dimensions or frequencies of vibration are more useful models for these Aethers.

The Thirty Aethers

They lie mingled, yet one above the other, just as the colors of the rainbow are all contained in normal sunlight but may be separated and distinguished by their particular wavelengths.

THE HIERARCHY OF THE AETHERS

The Princes of the regions appear to be receptive rather than active. They are the spiritual identities that reside in, animate, and give particular qualities to their regions. They are ruled by the twelve angels of the twelve tribes of Israel, and by the numerous ministering spirits of those angels, who convey the specific intentions of the angels of the tribes to the regional Princes and cause those intentions to be realized.

The twelve angels of the tribes are, in their turn, ruled by the seven angels of light who stand before the throne of God. These angels are the lamps burning before the throne in Revelation 4:5, and also the seven stars in the right hand of heavenly Christ in Revelation 1:16. Their manifest expression is the seven traditional planets of astrology—the Moon, Mercury, Venus, the Sun, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

This information was set forth concisely but very clearly by Nalvage just before he revealed the names of the ninety-one Princes and their ruling angels of the twelve tribes to Kelley:

There are 30 Calls yet to come. Those 30 are the Calls of Ninety-one Princes and spiritual Governours, unto whom the Earth is delivered as a portion. These bring in and again dispose the Kings and all the Governments upon the Earth, and vary the Natures of things with the variation of every moment; Unto whom, the providence of the eternal Judgement, is already opened. These are generally governed by the twelve Angels of the 12 Tribes: which are also governed by the 7 which stand before the presence of God. Let him that can see look up; and let him that can here, attend; for this is wisdom. They are all spirits of the Air: not rejected, but dignified; and they dwell and have their habitation in the air diversly, and in sundry places: for their mansions are not alike, neither are their powers equal. Understand therefore, that from the fire to the earth, there are 30 places or abidings: one above and beneath another: wherein these aforesaid Creatures have their aboad, for a time.¹

The number ninety-one seems oddly unbalanced, but it is based on the formula $7 \times 12 + 7 = 91$. Seven is the number of the heptarchical Kings and their Princes, while twelve is the number of the angels of the tribes of Israel. In astrology, seven is the number of the planets and twelve is the number of the signs and their houses. It is emphasized by Nalvage, who even goes so far as to make a pun at the end of his speech, that the angels of the Aethers act within the constraints of time. The Princes "vary the Natures of things with the variation of every moment." It is these angels that are responsible for the transformations of the Earth from moment to moment, and for the constantly changing play of thoughts within the human mind.

USE OF THE AETHERS

The geographical genii of each Aether are to be invoked by the Call of the Thirty Aethers, with the name of their particular Aether inserted into the parentheses near the beginning of the Call. This was the practice followed by Aleister Crowley during his 1909 trek through Algeria (though Crowley merely invoked the Airs, not the Princes). First, however, it is probably necessary to perform a general ritual working that involves the vibration of the eighteen distinct Keys, one per night, in reverse order: the Eighteenth Key on the first night, the Seventeenth Key on the second, and so on.

As was pointed out in the previous chapter, the Keys are associated with the directions of the Earth in four sets of four, with each set working its way in one complete circle around the Earth. The Eighteenth Key should be vibrated to the north, the Seventeenth to the west, the Sixteenth to the south, the Fifteenth to the east, and so on. This pattern should continue to the Second Key, which relates to the beam of the Black

Cross on the Great Table of the Watchtowers (the northeast by southwest axis), and the First Key, which relates to the pillar of the Black Cross (the southeast by northwest axis). The unexpressed primordial Key of the Holy Ghost or Great Mother, which is not an explicit part of the working, relates to the intersection of the Black Cross, the fountain of Spirit beneath the throne of New Jerusalem.

After this initial working of the Keys is successfully completed, the Aethers may be tuned in or "keyed" by vibrating the Call of the Thirty Aethers. Then the angels of the tribes may be invoked and commanded by the names of God that lie on the beams of the Great Crosses of the four Watchtowers. Each angel is ruled by the name of God associated with its particular point of the compass.

For example, the second Prince of the third Air, ZOM, is Virooli, the tutelary genius of Thracia (Thrace). He is ruled by the angel Alpudus, who is the angel of the tribe of Issachar. This angel resides in and is invoked from the west-northwest. Alpudus has 3,660 good ministering spirits who serve him. He is invoked and ruled by PDOCE, which is the name of God on the banner of west-northwest and one of the names on the line of Spirit in the Watchtower of the North (on the Original Great Table).

The ritual application of the angel of a tribe to the genius of a region of the Earth is a kind of spiritual copulation that is performed to engender the desired purpose of the Enochian magician. The genius of the place, who is manifestly embodied by his sigil, acts as the receptive medium. The angel of the tribe, acting through his ministers, is the catalyst by which that medium is shaped and quickened.

It should be understood that the tutelary angel of a particular place represents not merely the physical place itself, but also the living spirit of that place. Every region of the Earth has its own distinct character and its own unique power. Through this branch of Enochian magic the spiritual powers of the nations and regions can be harnessed and directed for ritual ends. For example, the spirit of England, symbolized by the goddess Britannia and the hero John Bull, is completely different in its virtues from the spirit of the United States, symbolized by the goddess America and the hero Uncle Sam.

It may be that the full Apocalypse working (if such a thing even exists) will be conducted in this way:

- Vibrating the nineteenth Key for each of the thirty Aethers on thirty successive nights from the First Air to the Thirtieth Air
- Vibrating each of the first eighteen Keys in reverse order, also on successive nights
- Vibrating the primordial, unwritten Key that relates to the center of being
- A final jubilee day of attainment

In this way the Apocalypse working would span fifty days, which is the same period of time the angels say that Enoch toiled. The movement would be from the outer reaches to the center of the Earth. All this is speculation, of course.

The Table of Sigils: 46-91

of good ministers under the angels of the tribes, the direction of the compass where each tribal angel resides, and the Enochian banner name of God associated with that direction. The numbers of the Princes may be used to locate their sigils on the grid of the Original Great Table of the Watchtowers. To convert the sigil display on the Original Great Table into a sigil display on my own Restored Great Table, simply invert the quarters of the west and north (transpose the lower right with the lower left).

Bear in mind that there are minor variations in the lettering between the Original Great Table and the Revised Great Table of Raphael. My Restored Great Table uses the lettering of the Table of Raphael. The sigils of the Princes of the regions are the same shape on all three versions of the Great Table, but some of the names of the Princes are spelled with slight differences depending on whether the Original or the Revised (and Restored) Tables are used.

To locate a particular sigil on the Original Great Table, take note of the number of the Prince, then find this number on the sigil display near the start of this chapter. The sigil closest to the number is the sigil of the Prince. Compare the sigil display with the lettered version of the Original Great Table in Chapter Twelve. You will be able to trace out the individual letters in the name on the Original Table by following the arrow of the sigil. Each sigil begins with a cross and ends with an arrowhead.

If you wish to locate the name of a Prince on my Restored Great Table, first determine which Watchtower the sigil occupies by comparing the quarters of my Restored Table in Chapter Ten with the quarters of the Original Table. Position that sigil on the Restored Table, and trace out the arrow of its name as before. You will see that some names have slight variations in spelling.

It is evident that the names of the angels of the twelve tribes of Israel are each intended to contain seven letters. However, in Dee's manuscript Lavavoth (the angel of the tribe of Gad) is written with eight letters. This occurs because the final letter in the name is the Hebrew letter Tau, which is written in English Th. Tau is on occasion alternatively transliterated by T, so I have used T to stand for this Hebrew letter in order to give the name of the angel seven letters. The name should be pronounced "Lavavoth."

There are ninety-one Princes of the regions of the Earth, but ninety-two sigils on the Great Table. One of the sigils is not named by the angels. It occurs at the bottom of the MPH, ARSL, GAIOL Watchtower, which on the Original Great Table is the Watchtower of the West (lower right quarter). Laxdizi, the name of this extra spirit, can easily be extracted from its sigil.

This supernummary sigil has caused some confusion. In the magical system of the Aurum Solis, a British occult society with a tradition similar to that of the Golden Dawn, this sigil is numbered 65.² But the sixty-fifth Prince is named Paraoan (Paoaoan on the Restored Table), and the letters of his name are not to be found in this sigil. This error appears to have arisen from a misunderstanding of the nature of Paraoan's sigil, which is not one unbroken line on the Great Table, but is composed of three two-letter segments from three of the Watchtowers, and a single letter from the fourth: PA;RA;OA;N (all the letters are capitals). If you examine the sigil grid of the Original Great Table, you will find these short segments and single cell marked with the number 65.

This sigil puzzled Dee, who inquired about it to Ave.

Dee: You had me chuse out of the Tables the Characters of fewest Letters, and I found them to be OA RA JA and L, you said they are eight, you said there are eight in four: I know not what this meaneth.

Ave: You must make up the name Paraoan.

Dee: What shall become of the L aversed?

Ave: It may be N, or L.

Dee: What must I now do with that name?

Ave: In Exarph there wanteth an L which L is of more force then the N and therefore it is set in the Tables. As far as that N stretcheth in the Character, so far shall that Countrey be consumed with fire, and swallowed in Hell, as Sodom was for wickednesse.

Dee's marginal note: So is not one letter superfluous, or wanting in the Tables.²

Five days later, Dee again made inquiry concerning this curious name, but received little satisfaction:

Dee: I beseech you say somewhat of the N in Paraoan, of which you said, so far as that stretched, should sink to hell.

Ave: Every letter in Paraoan, is a living fire: but all of one quality and of one Creation: but unto N is delivered a viol of Destruction, according to that part that he is of Paraoan the Governour.

Dee: It may please you to name that Place, City, or Country, under that N.

Ave: Ask Nalvage, and he will tell you.⁴

Dee did not have the letters of what he calls the "Characters of fewest Letters" correctly gathered, but seems to have understood the explanation of the angel. The three sigil segments of two letters make up the first six letters in the name Paraoan on the Original Table. Ave tells Dee that the final letter in the name may be either the single inverted N or the single inverted L on the Watchtower MPH, ARSL, GAIOL in the western quarter of the Original Great Table. However, the L has greater occult potency, and therefore should be attached at the front of the sigil of the twenty-eighth Prince, whose name is L;exarph. The final six letters of this sigil are to be found at the top of the pillar of the Black Cross (and also at the bottom, since the same letters are inverted there).

The Black Cross, as the name implies, was drawn with solid black ink by Dee in his diagram of the ninety-one sigils of the Princes on the Great Table.⁵ Consequently, Dee could not illustrate the three sigils that are located upon the upper half of the pillar and the right side of the beam of the Black Cross, as I have done in the illustration at the head of this chapter. The sigil of the twenty-eighth Prince, L;exarph, is located on the top of the pillar. The sigil of the twenty-ninth Prince, Comanan, wraps around the corner of the southern quarter of the Table and passes through the center of the Black Cross. The sigil of the thirtieth Prince, Tabitom, lies on the right arm of the beam of the Black Cross. Since the letters that make up these names also occur in reversed order on the lower half of the pillar and left arm of the beam, these names may be found wrapping around the northern quarter of the Table.

Because Dee did not represent these three sigils on the Black Cross or number the sigils in his diagram, it was an easy matter to misunderstand the use of the three two-letter segments and two single letter cells that occur on the Great Table. Many of Dee's sigils contain minor mistakes in form. I have corrected these errors in the sigil display at the head of this chapter. Unfortunately, I can offer no insight into the use of the ninety-second sigil of the spirit whose name is Laxdizi. Dee accurately drew the sigil of this spirit on his grid, but did not include its name in his list of Princes of the Aethers.

THE REGIONS OF THE EARTH

After conveying the names of the Princes of the Aethers, Nalvage indicated places on the surface of the Earth to which they correspond. He began by simply pointing to the region ruled by each spirit on a globe of the Earth in the depths of the showstone. Dee protested that this way was too confusing, so the angel adopted a different approach:

Kelley: There appeareth a great thing like a Globe, turning upon two axell-trees.

Nalvage: Turn to the first Air.

Dee: I have done.

Nalvage: The Earth in the first ayre, is this.

Kelley: Pointing on that Globe to it.

Dee: We beseech you to bound or determine the Countries or Portions of the Earth, by their uttermost Longitudes and Latitudes, or by some other certain manner.

Nalvage: Our manner is, not as it is of worldlings: We determine not places after the forms of legs, or as leaves are: neither we can imagin any thing after the fashion of an horn: as those that are Cosmographers do.

Notwithstanding the Angel of the Lord appeared unto Ptolomie, and opened unto him the parts of the Earth: but some he was commanded to secret: and those are Northward under your Pole. But unto you, the very true names of the World in her Creation are delivered.⁴

Nalvage went on to name the geographical name of the region under each of the Princes of the Aethers. Dee had considerable difficulty understanding the location of some of these places, but was occasionally assisted by Kelley's vision of the places or their inhabitants.

Nalvage: The third [of the seventh Aether], Phalagon.

Dee: I never heard of it.

Kelley: It is toward the North, where the veines of Gold; and such people appear as before were noted. On this side them a great way appear men with swinish snouts, their visage is so strouted out; but to be perceived to be of humane visage. The women have about their privities very long hair down to their knees. The men have things on their shoulders of beasts skins, so instead of a Jerkin or a Mandillion.⁵

In the course of naming the regions of the Earth, Nalvage also showed Kelley visions of Noah's ark in Armenia and the Garden of Eden. Paradise is apparently overseen by the second Prince of the eighteenth Aether.

Nalvage: The second [of the eighteenth Air]:

Kelley: Now appear many Crocodiles, long necked, scaled on the body, with long tails.

Nalvage: Coxlant.

Kelley: A great place appeareth, covered about with fire. Many great serpents appeare of 200 foot. It appeareth very Eastward. No people appear here.

There cometh from Heaven like a Mist, and covereth a great place about 300 mile long, like a Park, enclosed with fire. It is on a high ground. There come four Rivers out of it, one East, another West, another North, and another South. The pales, or enclosure of it seem to be Arches, beset most richly with precious stones. In the Gate of it stand three men like us, one is in a long Gown with many pleats, the other like in a Cassek. The third in the rough skin of a beast. In the name of Jesus: Is this the Paradise that Adam was banished out of?

Nalvage: The very same; from hence he was turned out into the earth. This is the true Vale of Josaphat.

Dee: Will you give me leave?

Nalvage: Say on.

Dee: It should seem this must be on the earth, not in the aire.

Nalvage: It is upon the earth.

Dee: You said that from hence he was turned out into the earth.

Nalvage: The curse of God in Adam caused the earth, whereinto he was cast to be accursed. For, if Adam had after his fall tarried in Paradise, his wickednesse would have altered the innocency of the place. Therefore is Paradise distinguished from the earth, in respect of her purity: because the earth is defiled, and corrupted with man. The earth is said to be sinfull in respect of the sin of man.

Dee: Till 45 degrees, both Northerly and Southerly, all is known in the most part of the world: But of any such place there is no knowledge nor likelihood by any History of these days, or of old time.

Nalvage: Therefore this is cunning, and the wisdom of God. There dwelleth flesh in it that shall never die, which were taken up for a testimony of Truth.⁹

Dee was not a man to be easily deceived concerning geography, since it was one of his primary subjects of study. While in England, he had frequently been consulted by the leading explorers and navigators of the day concerning the fabled Northwest and Northeast Passages as well as the geography of Asia and the New World. English mariners followed his charts when they went sailing into unknown waters. His skepticism concerning a physical Eden is obvious, but he did not argue the point further with Nalvage.

PTOLEMY AND AGRIPPA

Dee was perfectly aware that the names of the places of the Earth were those recorded in the Tetrabiblos of the Greek astronomer and astrologer Ptolemy. Nalvage himself had stated as much before beginning to name the places. According to Nalvage, the common names for the regions had been revealed to Ptolemy by the "Angel of the Lord," but not the names of the places near the north pole. However, Nalvage promised to Dee and Kelley something greater, "the very true names of the World in her Creation."

Kelley did not understand Nalvage's reference to Ptolemy, but he did vaguely recognize the names. After the angel completed the list and allowed the men to rest overnight, Kelley followed his thread of memory and was able to look up the names in his private library of magical books. He was enraged by what he regarded as a rank deception on the part of the angels, and at first refused to resume the scrying session.

Dee: After half an hour and lesse, he came speedily out of his Study, and brought in his hand one Volume of Cornelius Agrippa his works, and in one Chapter of that Book he read the names of Countries and Provinces collected out of Ptolomeus (as the Author there noteth) Whereupon he inferred, that our spiritual Instructors were Coseners to give us a description of the World, taken out of other Books: and therefore he would have no more to do with them. I replied, and said, I am very glad that you have a Book of your own, wherein these Geographical names are expressed, such as (for the most part) our Instructors had delivered unto us: and that, according to the Tenor and form of my request to him, so to have them expressed: for our most perfect information, by those known names; to understand those 91 unknown and unheard of names, of seven letters every one: whereby they (our Instructors I mean) are very greatly to be thanked, and to be deemed (in all reasonable mens judgements) most friendly, and far from cosenage, or abusing us: And farther I said, that I myself, had here set down on a paper all the 91 names together orderly, as we received them, and that I had here brought the description (Gerardus [Mercator's] Universal Chart of the World) Geographical of the whole earthly Globe: and also Pomponius Mela set forth in English with the Chartes thereunto belonging, fairly described by hand: To the intent that he might see the verity of their words yesterday delivered unto us: for the performance of my request made to them..."

Kelley was not mollified. He refused to have anything more to do with the angels for five days.

The reference Kelley made to Agrippa concerns Book One, Chapter Thirty-One of The Three Books of Occult Philosophy. Agrippa here summarizes part of the third chapter of the second book of Ptolemy's Tetrabiblos, where the regions of the world are categorized under the ruling influence of the stars. Agrippa introduces his brief chapter by saying, "Moreover the whole orb of the Earth is distributed by kingdoms and provinces to the planets, and signs." He then groups the nations of the classical world under each planet and the signs of the zodiac it rules. This list corresponds in many respects with the list of places given by Nalvage.

In closing, Agrippa writes:

These we have in this manner gathered from Ptolemy's opinion, to which according to the writings of other astrologers many more may be added. But he which knows how to compare these divisions of provinces according to the divisions of the stars, with the ministry of the ruling intelligences, and blessings of the tribes of Israel, the lots of the apostles, and typical seals of the sacred Scripture, shall be able to obtain great and prophetic oracles concerning every religion, of things to come."

The list of places given by Nalvage is more extensive than the lists in Agrippa and Ptolemy. It is difficult to determine which text served Nalvage as a source, if either. These names were common in ancient geographies.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

The Enochian Invocations of John Dee

"MAKE YOU BUT INVOCATIONS TO SOW THE SEED"

Dee was anxious to learn the details of the initial eighteen-day ritual working by which he would gain access to the ninety-one Princes of the Thirty Aethers, but he was never actually given this information. Ave did tell him that before he could undertake this extended initial working it would be necessary for him to make a Book of Spirits containing the names of the angels and spirits on the Great Table of the Watchtowers.

Ave: You have the corn, and you have the ground: Make you but invocations to sow the seed, and the fruit shall be plentiful.

Dee: As concerning our usage in the 4 dayes [and] in the 14 dayes, we would gladly have some information.

Ave: You would know to reape, before your corn be sown.

Dee: As concerning a fit place and time to call, and other circumstances, we would learn somewhat.

Ave: You would know where and when to call, before your invocations bear witnesses of your readinesse.

Dee: Then they must be written in verbis conceptis, in formal words.

Ave: I—a very easie matter.

Dee: What is the Book you mean that I should write?

Ave: The Book consisteth [1] of Invocation of the names of God, and [2] of the Angels, by the names of God: Their offices are manifest. You did desire to be fed with spoones, and so you are.¹

This is not a very detailed description, but at least it is something to work with, and more practical information than the angels often gave in response to Dee's questions.

Previously, Ave had informed Dee that after the book had been written out he must invoke the God of Hosts (Dee interpreted this to mean Jehovah Sabaoth) for four days, using the twelve names of God that are found on the lines of Spirit in the four Watchtowers. Then for fourteen days Dee must call the angels "by Petition, and by the name of God, unto the which they are obedient." On the fifteenth day, Dee and Kelley were to clothe themselves in white linen and "so have the apparition, use, and practice of the Creatures."

Dee actually created this Book of Spirits, or at least, he created the pattern from which the book was to be made. It appears in his Latin manuscript Liber Scientiae Auxilli et Victoriae Terrestris (British Library Sloane MS 3191). It is reproduced in English in Geoffrey James's The Enochian Magic of Dr. John Dee, which I strongly recommend to anyone seriously interested in studying Enochian magic. Dee's Book of Spirits consists of these invocations:

1) The Fundamental Obeisance, which is the invocation of the twelve names of God that are written on the lines of Spirit of the four Watchtowers of the Great Table.

2) Six Seniors of the east whose names are written on the great cross of the Watchtower of the east.

3) Six Seniors of the south.

4) Six Seniors of the west.

5) Six Seniors of the north.

—:—

6) Four good angels of the east who are skilled and powerful in medicine and curing diseases.

7) Four good angels of the south powerful in medicine.

8) Four good angels of the west powerful in medicine.

9) Four good angels of the north powerful in medicine.

—:—

10) Four good angels of the east who are skilled and powerful in metals and precious jewels.

11) Four good angels of the south powerful in metals and precious jewels.

12) Four good angels of the west powerful in metals and precious jewels.

13) Four good angels of the north powerful in metals and precious jewels.

—:—

14) Four good angels of the east who are skilled and powerful in transformations.

15) Four good angels of the south powerful in transformations.

16) Four good angels of the west powerful in transformations.

17) Four good angels of the north powerful in transformations.

—:—

18) Four good angels of the east, each of whom knows the living creatures in one element, and their use.

19) Four good angels of the south knowing the living creatures of one element, and their use.

20) Four good angels of the west knowing the living creatures of one element, and their use.

21) Four good angels of the north knowing the living creatures of one element, and their use.

—:—

22) Four Dispositors of the east who are skilled and powerful in the mixing together of natural substances.

23) Four Dispositors of the south powerful in natural substances.

24) Four Dispositors of the west powerful in natural substances.

25) Four Dispositors of the north powerful in natural substances.

—:—

26) Four Dispositors of the east who are skilled and powerful in transporting from place to place.

27) Four Dispositors of the south powerful in transporting.

28) Four Dispositors of the west powerful in transporting.

29) Four Dispositors of the north powerful in transporting.

—:—

30) Four Dispositors of the east who are skilled and powerful in the mechanical arts.

31) Four Dispositors of the south powerful in mechanical arts.

32) Four Dispositors of the west powerful in mechanical arts.

33) Four Dispositors of the north powerful in mechanical arts.

34) Four Dispositors of the east who are skilled and powerful in the discovery of the secrets of men.

35) Four Dispositors of the south powerful in the discovery of secrets.

36) Four Dispositors of the west powerful in the discovery of secrets.

37) Four Dispositors of the north powerful in the discovery of secrets.

These divisions of the angels can be most clearly seen in this table, which is reproduced from Chapter Thirteen. It shows the relative positions of these angels on the quarters of a Watchtower. This interrelation is the same on all four Watchtowers.

East 1.	South 2.
Dispositors: Knitting Together	Dispositors: Transportation
Good Angels: Teach Medicine and Heal the Sick	Good Angels: Precious Metals and Jewels
Evil Angels: Cause Sickness and Death	Evil Angels: Counterfeiting and Gambling
North 3.	West 4.
Dispositors: Arts and Crafts	Dispositors: Secrets of Men
Good Angels: Transformations of Form, not Essence	Good Angels: Knowledge of All Elemental Spirits
Evil Angels: Illusions and Deceptions	Evil Angels: Evil and Base Uses of Elementals

Offices of the Angels on Any Watchtower

FOUR DAYS AND FOURTEEN DAYS

Unfortunately, the invocations in Dee's Book of Spirits do not total eighteen. If we take them together in groups of angels linked by function, they total ten. Yet Ave states that the period of invocation must be eighteen days, and must be divided into two parts of four days followed by fourteen days.

The first four days are to be devoted to the invocation of the twelve names of God on the lines of Spirit in the Watchtowers.

Ave: Thou hast three names of God, out of the line of the holy Ghost, in the principall Crosse of the first Angle, so has thou three in the second, etc.

Four dayes (after your book is made, that is to say, written) must you onely call upon those names of God, or on the God of Hosts, in those names.

And 14 dayes after you shall (in this, or on some convenient place) Call the Angels by Petition, and by the name of God, unto the which they are obedient.⁷

Elsewhere Ave tells Dee:

Ave: One book of perfect paper. One labour of a few dayes.

The calling them together, and the yielding of their promise, the repetition of the names of God, are sufficient.

I have given you Corn: I have given you also ground. Desire God to give you ability to till.⁸

Obviously the names of God in each Watchtower are to be invoked on four individual days that open the eighteen-day working, yet Dee grouped all twelve names in a single opening invocation. It is evident that Dee did not understand Ave's explicit instruction concerning the names of God on the lines of Spirit. Ave further makes plain that the working is divided into two distinct parts: the invocation of the names of God, and the invocation of the angels by the names of God.

"AT NO TIME TO BE CALLED"

It is not so clear to see how the remaining angels may be divided into fourteen groups, with each group receiving one invocation to be voiced on a separate day. Dee gives thirty-six invocations for the Seniors, good angels, and Dispositors. He does not provide any invocations for the evil angels whose names have only three letters, even though he lists these names beside the names of the good angels from which they are extracted. He was expressly forbidden to invoke the evil angels by Ave.

Dee: Then they [the evil angels] are not to be named in the first summoning or invitation.

Ave: At no time to be called.⁹

This is unequivocal and cannot be casually disregarded. Therefore, it becomes necessary to divide the Seniors, Dispositors, and good angels into fourteen groups, each group to be invoked on its own day during the initial eighteen-day working of invocation. Since the angels never actually say how this is to be done, it is impossible to be certain about it. Dee seems to have completely missed the necessity of making this division—at least, he never mentions it in his writings. I cannot be sure the system of division presented here is correct—all I can say is that it is sensible and workable.

THE INVOCATIONS OF THE ANGELS

In my opinion, it is necessary to divide the Seniors into six groups of four, with each group containing a Senior from all four Watchtowers. This selection should probably be made clockwise (following the order in which the names of the Seniors were delivered by Ave) with the first group composed of the names in the left side of the lines of Spirit of the Great Crosses of the Watchtowers, the second group of the names in the upper part of the lines of the Son, the third group of the names in the upper part of the lines of the Father, the fourth group of the names in the right side of the lines of Spirit, the fifth group of the names in the lower part of the lines of the Father, and the sixth group of the names in the lower part of the lines of the Son.

The Dispositors (or good angels) whose names lie above the arms of the lesser crosses should come next, since they appear to be next in authority. These sixty-four angels are divided into four groups of sixteen angels, each group of which contains four angels from each Watchtower. The first group names the sixteen Dispositors of the subquarters of the east, the second the sixteen Dispositors of the subquarters of the south, the third the sixteen Dispositors of the subquarters of the west, and the fourth the sixteen Dispositors of the subquarters of the north.

The same system of division is followed to divide the sixty-four good angels into four groups of sixteen angels, each group of which contains four good angels from each Watchtower.

For each of these groups an invocation is written that contains the names of God or the angels in the group. Each invocation is voiced during one day of the eighteen-day working. Ave says nothing about how many times each invocation is to be repeated, but from other statements it is likely that each invocation is to be repeated in a consecrated place three times: once at sunrise, once at noon, and once at sunset.

If the system of division I have suggested is adopted, it results in the following eighteen invocations:

- 1) God Names of the eastern Watchtower.
- 2) God Names of the southern Watchtower.
- 3) God Names of the western Watchtower.
- 4) God Names of the northern Watchtower.
- 5) Seniors of the left side of the lines of Spirit.
- 6) Seniors of the top half of the lines of the Son.
- 7) Seniors of the top half of the lines of the Father.
- 8) Seniors of the right of the lines of Spirit.
- 9) Seniors of the bottom of the lines of the Father.
- 10) Seniors of the bottom of the lines of the Son.

- 11) Dispositors of the mixing of natural substances.
- 12) Dispositors of transportation from place to place.
- 13) Dispositors of the mechanical arts.
- 14) Dispositors of the discovery of human secrets.
- 15) Good angels of medicine.
- 16) Good angels of metals and precious jewels.
- 17) Good angels of transformations.
- 18) Good angels of the four elements.

THE INVOCATION OF THE THIRTY AETHERS

Although the angels never say so, it may be that a similar working of thirty days is to be conducted following the eighteen-day working. This would serve to establish communication with the angels of the Thirty Aethers by means of thirty invocations, each spoken three times on its appointed day. Both the working of eighteen days and the working of thirty days would be consummated or fulfilled on the days immediately following the workings, so that the entire period of invocation would occupy fifty days.

Dee seems never to have imagined combining the eighteen-day invocation explicitly described by the angel Ave with another invocation period of thirty days. Yet if he was to have the use of the angels of the thirty Aethers, it makes good magical sense for him to first establish communication with them and secure their cooperation through an opening invocation working. There is no reason to suppose that the employment of the angels of the Aethers follows any different process than the employment of the other angels of the Watchtowers.

THE ROLE OF THE ENOCHIAN KEYS

There are eighteen distinct Enochian Keys, and these Keys obviously relate to the subquarters of the Great Table. However, it is unclear whether these Keys are to be voiced during the eighteen-day working that establishes contact with the Enochian angels. At first consideration, this would seem probable. However, the distinct Keys naturally fall into a division of five parts: 2 + 4 + 4 + 4 + 4. It is not clear how this division can be related to the division of the invocations into 4 + 14 that was defined by Ave, or my own conjectured division of 4 + 6 + 4 + 4.

It is possible to relate the eighteen distinct Keys to the eighteen classes of spirits invoked in the initial working by inverting the order of the Keys, placing the Seniors at the end of the working, and dividing the six groups of Seniors into four and two. If this is done, the Keys 18, 17, 16 and 15 may be linked with the four invocations of the names of God; the Keys 14, 13, 12 and 11 may be linked with the four groups of Dispositors; the Keys 10, 9, 8 and 7 may be linked with the four groups of good angels; the Keys 6, 5, 4 and 3 may be linked with the four groups of Seniors from the upper parts of the lines of the Son, the upper parts of the lines of the Father, the lower parts of the lines of the Son, and the lower parts of the lines of the Father, respectively; and, finally, the Keys 2 and 1 may be linked with the groups of Seniors from the left side of the lines of Spirit and from the right side of the lines of Spirit, respectively.

I offer this association of the Keys with the groups of the names of God and angels on the Great Table as a matter of interest to more advanced Enochian magicians, but I am not happy with it. It is my personal view that the Keys are individually associated with the beam and pillar of the Black Cross (Keys 1 and 2), and with the sixteen subquarters of the Great Table (Keys 3 to 18). If this is true, then the Keys are not to be voiced in the initial eighteen-day working that establishes contact with the angels, but are (perhaps) to be used later to command specific sets of angels on individual subquarters of the Great Table as illustrated on page 222.

For example, Key 4 would be used to invoke specifically the Dispositors and good angels on the eastern subquarter of the Watchtower of the South. Key 13 would be used to invoke the Dispositors and good angels on the northern subquarter of the Watchtower of the West. And so for the rest.

The Seniors (if, indeed, it is ever necessary to invoke the Seniors) would probably be invoked by Keys 1 and 2. The First Key, related by me to the pillar of the Black Cross, would also relate to the double pillars of the Great Crosses on the individual Watchtowers, and to the four Seniors whose names are written on each double pillar (the lines of the Son and the Father). The Second Key, related by me to the beam of the Black Cross, would also relate to the beams of the Great Crosses on the individual Watchtowers, and to the two Seniors whose names are written on each beam (the lines of the Holy Spirit).

To understand this assignment, see the illustration in Chapter Fourteen that shows the numbers of the Keys assigned to the sixteen subquarters of the Great Table in four circles of four. It may well be incorrect, but since the angels left no explicit correspondence between the Keys and the angels on the Great Table, we are forced to invent our own systems. Such improvisation was done by the Golden Dawn, as I shall explain in Chapter Seventeen. The correspondence between the Keys and the angels on the Watchtowers represents one of the most original aspects of Golden Dawn Enochian magic.

THE APOCALYPSE WORKING

As I have stated elsewhere, it is also my opinion that the forty-eight expressed Keys (and the first, unexpressed Key) are intended by the angels to be used in a great working, probably of fifty days duration, designed to initiate the period of destructive transformation that is generally known as the apocalypse. This may be linked with the eighteen-day invocation of the angels of the Great Table, as I suggested in my book Tetragrammaton, or it may be a completely separate working.

On this subject, it is impossible to be certain. The whole matter of the Apocalypse Working, as I have called it, is murky and is likely to remain so, because it was never explicitly discussed between Dee and the angels. Indeed, many Enochian magicians would probably say that no such Apocalypse Working exists. I put forward the concept based on my own study of the Enochian transcripts, and I believe there is considerable implicit evidence to suggest that the angels intended Enochian magic, and specifically the Enochian Keys, to serve as a trigger for the apocalypse. But this is primarily a personal conviction. You will not find unequivocal references to an Apocalypse working given anywhere by Dee or the angels.

THE FORM OF INVOCATION

When composing the words of the invocations to the angels, Dee was forced to draw upon his background knowledge of Christian and Hebrew prayers, supplemented by the invocations which appear in the medieval grimoires of magic. Kelley may have aided him in this composition, since the alchemist was a practicing ritual magician and had actually used the invocations in the grimoires. Dee also exhibits a knowledge of legal terminology in his invocations, which are worded in such a way that no loopholes are left open to the angels. He must have been familiar with legends of Black Pacts and other tales in which spirits take advantage of ambiguities in the wording of the contract. Since Kelley had some knowledge of property law he may have helped Dee in this area also.

As I mentioned in Chapter Fourteen, the angels were unable to provide Dee with a pattern for his invocations. Invocation, Ave informs Dee, is a faculty of human nature that the angels do not possess.

Dee: As for the form of our Petition or Invitation of the good Angels, What sort should it be of?

Ave: A short and brief speech.

Dee: We beseech you to give us an example: we would have a confidence, it should be of more effect.

Ave: I may not.

Kelley: And why?

Ave: Invocation proceedeth of the good will of man, and of the heat and fervency of the spirit: And therefore is prayer of such effect with God.

Dee: We beseech you, shall we use one form to all?

Ave: Every one, after a divers form.

Dee: If the minde do dictate or prompt a divers form, you mean.

Ave: I know not: for I dwell not in the soul of man.'

According to Ave, invocation arises from human free will and ecstatic inspiration. It is a creative process. Angels cannot create. They are instruments, or extensions, of the will of God. The human power to compose invocations and the human power to assign names (used by Adam in the Garden of Eden—see Genesis 2:19–20) have a similar source—the spark of divine fire that lies within every human being.

THE PRAYER OF ENOCH

The angels did provide a model invocation that Dee was free to follow when composing his own set of original invocations. This was the prayer spoken by Enoch to God during the fifty days Enoch spent creating his magical tables of stone. Although Dee chose not to follow the pattern of this prayer, it clearly was intended by the angels to have an application in Enochian magic, although they never explicitly said this to Dee. It may have been intended as a model for the Apocalypse Working.

Since the prayer of Enoch, delivered by Ave on July 7, 1584, is of such great importance in the matter of Enochian invocation, I will reproduce it here.

Dee: Afterward, [Ave] he came again, and (after a pause) said as followeth.

Ave: My brother, I see thou dost not understand the mystery of this Book, or work thou hast in hand. But I told thee, it was the knowledge that God delivered unto Enoch. I said also, that Enoch laboured 50 days. Notwithstanding, that thy labour be not frustrate, and void of fruit, Be it unto thee, as thou hast done.

Dee: Lord I did the best that I could conceive of it.

Ave: I will tell thee, what the labour of Enoch was for those fifty days.

Dee: O Lord I thank thee.

Ave: He made (as thou hast done, thy book) Tables, of Serpasan and plain stone: as the Angel of the Lord appointed him; saying, tell me (O Lord) the number of the dayes that I shall labour in. It was answered him 50.

Then he groaned within himself, saying, Lord God the Fountain of true wisdom, thou that openest the secrets of thy own self unto man, thou knowest mine imperfection, and my inward darknesse: How can I (therefore) speak unto them that speak not after the voice of man; or worthily call on thy name, considering that my imagination is variable and fruitlesse, and unknown to my self? Shall the Sands seem to invite the Mountains: or can the small Rivers entertain the wonderful and unknown waves?

Can the vessel of fear, fragility, or that is of a determined proportion, lift up himself, heave up his hands, or gather the Sun into his bosom? Lord it cannot be: Lord my imperfection is great: Lord I am lesse than sand: Lord, thy good Angels and Creatures excell me far: our proportion is not alike; our sense agreeth not: Notwithstanding I am comforted; For that we have all one God, all one beginning from thee, that we respect thee a Creatour: Therefore will I call upon thy name, and in thee, I will become mighty. Thou shalt light me, and I will become a Seer; I will see thy Creatures, and will magnifie thee amongst them. Those that come unto thee have the same gate, and through the same gate, descend, such as thou sendest. Behold, I offer my house, my labour, my heart and soul, If it will please thy Angels to dwell with me, and I with them; to rejoyce with me, that I may rejoyce with them; to minister unto me, that I may magnifie thy name. Then, lo the Tables (which I have provided, and according to thy will, prepared) I offer unto thee, and unto thy holy Angels, desiring them, in and through thy holy names: That as thou art their light, and comfortest them, so they, in thee will be my light and comfort. Lord they prescribe not laws unto thee, so it is not meet that I prescribe laws unto them: What it pleaseth thee to offer, they receive; So what it pleaseth them to offer unto me, will I also receive. Behold I say (O Lord) If I shall call upon them in thy name, Be it unto me in mercy, as unto the servant of the Highest. Let them also manifest unto me, How, by what words, and at what time, I shall call them. O Lord, Is there any that measure the heavens, that is mortal? How, therefore, can the heavens enter into mans imagination? Thy creatures are the Glory of thy countenance: Hereby thou glorifiest all things, which Glory excelleth and (O Lord) is far above my understanding. It is great wisdom, to speak and talke according to understanding with Kings; But to command Kings by a subjected commandment, is not wisdom, unlesse it come from thee. Behold Lord, How shall I therefore ascend into the heavens? The air will not carry me, but resisteth my folly. I fall down, for I am of the earth. Therefore, O thou very Light and true Comfort, that canst, and mayst, and dost command the heavens: Behold I offer these Tables unto thee, Command them as it pleaseth thee: and O you Ministers, and true lights of understanding, Governing this earthly frame, and the elements wherein we live, Do for me as for the servant of the Lord: and unto whom it hath pleased the Lord to talk of you.

Behold, Lord, thou hast appointed me 50 times; Thrice 50 times will I lift my hands unto thee. Be it unto me as it pleaseth thee, and thy holy Ministers. I require nothing but thee, and through thee, and for thy honour and glory: But I hope I shall be satisfied, and shall not die, (as thou hast promised) until thou gather the clouds together, and judge all things: when in a moment I shall be changed and dwell with thee for ever.

These words, were thrice a dayes talk betwixt Enoch and God: In the end of 50 dayes, there appeared unto him, which are not now to be manifested nor spoken of: he enjoyed the fruit of God his promise, and received the benefit of his faith. Here may the wise learn wisdom: for what doth man that is not corruptible?

When Ave tells Dee "be it unto thee, as thou hast done," he is saying that even though Dee's version of the Book of Spirits is incorrect, the angels will acknowledge it so that Dee's sincere efforts to construct the book will not have been wasted.

THE JUBILEE

The number of Enoch's tables is not stated in the prayer. Presumably they are the same as the forty-eight number/letter squares that make up Dee's Book of Enoch, plus the first occult table that was too holy to reveal to Dee. The last day of the fifty was probably the day of fulfillment, when Enoch's work of the previous forty-nine was brought to fruition by God. Concerning the number fifty, Cornelius Agrippa writes:

The number fifty signifies remission of sins, of servitudes, and also liberty. According to the [Jewish] Law, on the fiftieth year they did remit debts, and everyone did return to his own possessions. Hence by the year of Jubilee [see Leviticus 25:10], and by the psalm of repentance [psalm 50 of the Vulgate] it shows a sign of indulgency, and repentance. The Law also, and the Holy Ghost are declared in the same: for the fiftieth day after Israel's going forth out of Egypt, the Law was given to Moses in Mount Sinai: the fiftieth day after the resurrection, the Holy Ghost came down upon the apostles in Mount Sion; whence also it is called the number of grace, and attributed to the Holy Ghost.⁷

Just as God gave Moses the tablets of the commandments on the fiftieth day, so are the tables of Enoch to be perfected on the fiftieth day of his ritual working. Just as the Holy Ghost descended upon the apostles of Christ fifty days after the resurrection, so are the tables of Enoch to be activated and empowered by the holy Spirit on the fiftieth day.

There seems to be a connection between the number of times Enoch speaks his prayer to God, and the "hundred and fifty Lions, and spirits of wickednesse, error, and deceit" that God sends among the unrighteous people to sow confusion as punishment for their misuse of Enoch's wisdom. However, there is not enough space in this book to consider this matter at length.

"LORD I AM LESSE THAN SAND"

Two things to notice about Enoch's prayer are his abasement of himself before God ("Lord my imperfection is great, Lord I am lesse than sand"), and his stated intention not to attempt to command the angels to perform other than their appointed offices: "Lord they prescribe not laws unto thee, so it is not meet that I prescribe laws unto them: What it pleaseth thee to offer, they receive; So what it pleaseth them to offer unto me, will I also receive." By taking this approach Enoch ensures that his magic will never be in violation of divine law. He places himself firmly below the angels in the hierarchy of intelligent beings.

At first impression, this appears contrary to much of the magical practice of the Western world, which has in large part descended from the magic of ancient Egypt through the philosophers and magicians of the Greeks and Romans. The ancient Egyptians believed themselves able to command not only spirits, but gods as well. (This power did not extend to the First Mover, however.) The gods commanded by the Egyptians were capable of independent actions. It was a case of their will being matched against the will of the magician.

The angels of Enoch are not independent beings, but mere messengers or agents of the God of Hosts. Thus, in commanding the angels Enoch would have been in the uncomfortable position of attempting to defy the will of God, since any action the angels might commit that was not of their office would be in defiance of God's will. Conversely, there was no need for Enoch to command the angels to perform their offices, since they would do this in any case.

This raises the question, what good are the tables of Enoch (and by extension, the tables of Dee) if they can only cause the angels to do what they would do anyway? Although the angels perform their natural offices, tables or no tables, presumably through the use of the tables it is possible to call down that angelic grace. For example, an angel of good fortune will always produce good fortune since this is its appointed office, but the magician can control where that good fortune occurs, whether in his or her life or the life of another person.

It was probably the human arrogance of attempting to use the magic of Enoch for base personal ends in violation of the natural offices of the angels that provoked God to sow the Earth with the 150 spirits of deceit who taught goetic magic. Through the proliferation of goetic magic the original wisdom of Enoch was gradually forgotten and lost from the world. At any rate, this is the myth presented to Dee and Kelley by the angels.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

Enochian Magic in the Golden Dawn

FRAÜLEIN SPRENGEL AND THE CIPHER MANUSCRIPT

The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn was a secret Rosicrucian society, modeled after Freemasonry, that flourished in England at the end of the Victorian era. It was founded in London in 1888 by three Freemasons: Samuel Liddell "MacGregor" Mathers, Dr. William Wynn Westcott, and Dr. William Robert Woodman. Woodman died in 1891, leaving the Golden Dawn to be run by Westcott and Mathers. Westcott was the solid, respectable cornerstone of the Order; Mathers its brilliant but erratic guiding star.

The genesis of the Order is said to be Woodman's discovery in 1887 of a brief occult manuscript in cipher, found in a book shop between the pages of a book. When translated, the cipher contained the outline of five esoteric Masonic rituals and a letter by a German Rosicrucian adept calling herself Fräulein Sprengel. Westcott enlisted the aid of Mathers to expand the rituals, and wrote to Sprengel, who authorized him to found an English branch of the German occult order Die Goldene Dämmerung. At least, this is the story. A more likely explanation is that the cipher manuscript was a forgery, and that Westcott cooked up the original rituals, with or without the help of Mathers.

Nevertheless, the Golden Dawn was an important and unusual organization for two reasons. First, it taught a complete system of practical ritual magic solidly based in the history of Western occultism. Second, it admitted women members as equals. In both these innovations, daring for the day, it was influenced by the Theosophical Society founded by Helena Petrovna Blavatsky in New York in 1875.

"THE EXTRAORDINARILY DEVELOPED SYSTEM"

An important part of the advanced teachings of the Golden Dawn was Enochian magic—probably the result of research carried out by Mathers in the reading room of the British Museum Library. It is impossible to be certain about the authors of many Golden Dawn papers because they circulated anonymously among members of the order and were copied and recopied by hand. There may well have been other contributors. Since Enochian words of power appear in the mysterious cipher document,¹ it is evident that Mathers was working on Enochian magic prior to 1887 (presuming the cipher manuscript to be Westcott's forgery, and presuming it to have been forged prior to the establishment of the Isis-Urania Temple).

Israel Regardie, who published the order papers of the Golden Dawn between 1938–40, and who was, along with his teacher Aleister Crowley, one of the two men most responsible for the continuing dominance of Golden Dawn magic in modern Western occultism, regarded Enochian magic as one of the greatest achievements of the Golden Dawn:

So far as we are able to make out, however, the System originated by means of the ceremonial skrying of Dr. John Dee and Sir Edward Kelly towards the close of the 16th century. The original diaries of Dr. John Dee, recording the development of the system, may be found in Sloane Manuscripts 3189–3191 in the British Museum. But this stands out very clearly, that in these diaries is a rudimentary scheme which bears only the most distant relation to the extraordinarily developed system in use by the Order. Whoever was responsible for the Order scheme of the Angelic Tablets—whether it was Mathers and Westcott or the German Rosicrucian Adepts from whom the former are supposed to have obtained their knowledge—was possessed of an ingenuity and an understanding of Magic such as never was in the possession either of Dee or Kelly.²

As you will have gathered from the preceding chapters, this is a very unjustified slur against Dee and Kelly, who understood very clearly those portions of Enochian magic which the angels chose to reveal. Regardie is not to be blamed for this attitude. His knowledge of Dee's manuscripts appears to have been quite limited, despite his claim to have obtained "a good deal of information" about "Enochiana" through private meditation and studies at the British Museum. Crowley, Regardie's mentor in magic, suffered from the same shallow understanding of Dee's magical diaries, and also boasted of a much more extensive experience with the Enochian system than he actually possessed.

WHAT THE SYSTEM CONTAINS

The Enochian magic of the Golden Dawn is almost entirely based on the English and Enochian texts of the Enochian Keys, along with a curious compound version of the four Watchtowers arranged in the pattern they form on the Great Table of Raphael. The Black Cross is not used by the Golden Dawn to join the Watchtowers together into a single Great Table. Instead, the Watchtowers are treated as separate entities, and the letters in the Black Cross are gathered into the small magic square that appears in Casaubon,¹ which is called in the Golden Dawn the Tablet of Union.

The Keys are used to invoke or evoke the angels whose names appear written on the four Watchtowers. The methods for extracting the names of these angels, and the names of power that summon and commend the angels, are accurately presented (for the most part) by the Golden Dawn. The names of the Thirty Aethers, or Airs, also appear in the Order papers, but not the names or sigils of the ninety-one geographical spirits, or Princes, who rule the regions of the Earth. That omission is probably why Crowley evoked the Aethers, but not the tutelary genii of the Aethers.⁴

WHAT THE SYSTEM OMITTS

Omitted from the Enochian magic of the Golden Dawn is any direct mention of the mystical heptarchy of planetary angels, along with their tables and sigils, which form the underlying basis of all Enochian magic. No mention is made of the Table of Practice or the rest of the ritual furniture of the Table, which are derived from the heptarchical system. Nor is anything said about the central importance of a scrying stone in Enochian magic. Westcott does refer to the Sigillum Aemeth in passing when writing about the seals of the Watchtowers, saying: "This 'Liber AEmeth sive Sigillum Dei' that is the Book of Truth, or the Seal of God, entereth not into the knowledge of a Zelator Adeptus Minor" (nor, we may suspect, into the knowledge of anyone else in the Golden Dawn at that time, save possibly Mathers and Westcott).

Less surprising is the silence of the Golden Dawn concerning the Enochian Book of Spirits, which is never clearly described in Casaubon (probably the primary source for Golden Dawn Enochian magic). There is no awareness in the Golden Dawn of the necessity for making initial contact with the angels of the Great Table through an eighteen-day ritual that employs original invocations composed by the magician. The angels are simply summoned by means of the Keys.

A notable void in the Enochian magic of the Order is the silence concerning Kelley's Great Vision of the Watchtowers, and the golden talisman constructed by Dee that depicts this vision. Neither is anything written about the Vision of the Round House, although this may be forgiven since the importance of this vision is still not understood by Enochian scholars. It should also be mentioned that the Enochian alphabet used by the Golden Dawn is faulty in several respects. Unfortunately, the influence of the Order has been so profound over the last hundred years that these defects are universally reproduced in books about Enochian magic. As I mentioned earlier, I have corrected the alphabet in the present work.

In view of these many omissions, the reader may be forgiven for wondering why Regardie was so impressed with the Enochian system of the Golden Dawn. The great virtue of this system is its consistency. Faced with many gaps in his knowledge of the Enochian magic received by Dee and Kelley, Mathers was forced to supply his own material. It was also necessary for him to fully integrate his personal system of Enochian magic into the magic of the Golden Dawn, which he was undoubtedly in the process of creating at the time he researched Enochian magic.

THE MODEL OF THE PENTAGRAM

The primary model used by Mathers to structure the Enochian system of the Golden Dawn was the relationship between the four elements and the four lower points of the pentagram, which is used in Golden Dawn magic to invoke or banish elemental forces. The assignment of the elements to the pentagram, in turn, was conditioned by the elemental associations of the four Fixed signs of the zodiac. These zodiac associations are very ancient, and served as the basis for the Golden Dawn understanding of the elements. If the lower points of the pentagram are imagined to form a square, this may be laid over the wheel of the zodiac to achieve the following Golden Dawn arrangement.

Mathers' Model of the Pentagram

Mathers and his associates made the fundamental mistake of linking the four Watchtowers to the four elements in the relationship that appears on the four lower points of the Golden Dawn pentagram and in the Fixed signs of the zodiac. He chose the ordering of the Watchtowers upon the Revised Great Table of Raphael as his starting point and simply laid the square of the elements on top of the Watchtowers.

The existence of a second, earlier version of the Great Table, where the Watchtowers occupy different quarters, was never mentioned in the Golden Dawn documents. Mathers must have known about the Original Table, since he gathered all the letter variations that appear in the five extant examples of the Great Table and incorporated them into the Golden Dawn Great Table. As a result, some cells of the Golden Dawn Great Table have two letters, some have three, and some have four.

The version of the Golden Dawn Watchtowers (they cannot really be called a Great Table since they are unconnected) presented on pages 290–291 is what appears in Regardie's Golden Dawn. I have allowed the inaccuracies in lettering and capitalization to stand. It is interesting to speculate what the original members of the Golden Dawn made of the apparently random capital letters in the tables. The ninety-one spirits of the Aethers, whose seven-letter names are capitalized by the angels on the Watchtowers, are never enumerated. Westcott merely writes: "Of the letters on the Tables, some be written as capitals. These are the initial letters of certain Angels' names drawn forth by another method, not now explained, and the offices of these do not concern a Z[elator] A[deptus] M[inor]."⁶

There is also no notice made by Mathers of letters on the Watchtowers that are inverted right to left in Dee's transcript. These held the highest importance for the angels, but exactly what that importance was is never clearly stated (except that the inverted letters at the ends

THE SEALS OF THE WATCHTOWERS

The Golden Dawn developed the four seals of the quarters of the Great Table, described by Kelley just prior to the reception of the Watchtowers, into stylized, multi-colored emblems for the Watchtowers, while retaining the essential features of the symbols. This was a useful and perceptive innovation. These seals are painted large just above the separate tables of the Watchtowers that adorned Golden Dawn temples, each Watchtower in its Golden Dawn elemental colors.¹²

The outer rim and central T on the seal of the Golden Dawn Watchtower of Air is colored yellow; the background is mauve. The outer rim and central cross, along with the letters and numbers around the cross, on the seal of the Watchtower of Water is blue; the background is orange. The outer rim on the seal of the Watchtower of Fire is red; moving from the center outward the concentric circles of the figure are colored green, red, green, red, green; clockwise from the top the twelve flames around the figure are red, yellow, mauve, red, yellow, mauve, red, yellow, mauve, red, yellow, mauve; the background is green. The outer rim on the seal of the Watchtower of Earth is black; clockwise from the top the arms of the cross are colored citrine, olive, black, russet; the center of the cross and the background are both white.

Golden Dawn Seals of the Watchtowers

"ELEMENTAL KINGS OF THE ENTIRE TABLE"

From the pattern of each of these seals, a name of power was extracted from the outermost letter ring on Dee's wax Sigillum Aemeth. Each name begins at the capital T with the small 4 above it at the top of Sigillum Aemeth and proceeds by jumps, either clockwise or counterclockwise, with odd letters simply inserted where this was found necessary. Regardie wrote: "The Names yielded by the analysis of the Sigils are to be considered as the Elemental Kings of the entire Tablet."¹³ He added that each King who bears one of these names is "purely and intrinsically an elemental force" and should be treated with caution.

The elemental King of the Golden Dawn Watchtower of Air is Tahaoelog. The actual letter formation of his name is shown here.

4	22	20	18	1
Th	h	a	o	8	og

This is extracted simply by beginning at the top of the circle of letters and numbers around the rim of Sigillum

Aemeth and counting four spaces clockwise for each letter or letter group. Notice that vowels have been inserted into the name to make it easier to pronounce.

The King of the Watchtower of Water is Thahebyobeaatanun. The extraction of this name is not nearly so simple as the last, but I will give the Golden Dawn explanation, for what it is worth:

From b.4.6.h grouped about a cross, note that T equals t, (the Cross equals th), is obtained: Cross to h, then b.4., then 6.b., and continue 6:

4 22 b y 6 6 a t 14
Th h 4 14 b A 5 9 nⁿ

yielding the name Thahebyobeaatanun for the Water Tablet.

(Four moves from T gives 22.h. b.4. is specially put. y.14 moves to 22 from t. Then 6.b. is special. From 6.b. it is all plain moving by 6 to right [Wynn Westcott]).¹⁴

The first part of Westcott's explanation is clear enough. However, I'm not sure what he means by "y.14 moves to 22 from t." The square containing y/14 is actually 21 spaces from the uppermost 4/T. The "6.b." is apparently just inserted. However, from the square containing 6/A, the rest proceed clockwise by jumps of six.

The King of the Watchtower of Earth is Thahaaothe. The letters that make up his name are given in this order:

4 22 11 a o t h
Th h A 5 10 11

It is not so obvious how this name is extracted. The Golden Dawn text says: "From the plain Cross, which equals Th4, proceed counting in each case forward as by numbers given." The meaning, poorly expressed, is that you count 4 clockwise from the uppermost capital

T (which is regarded as th). This places you at the square that contains 22/h. You then count 22 clockwise from this square, which places you at the square containing 11/A. You count 11 from this square, which places you at the square containing a/5. Then you must bend back to avoid crossing the uppermost T and count from this square counterclockwise 5 squares, which places you at o/10. Count 10 squares counterclockwise, and you reach t/11. Then count 11 squares counterclockwise to reach the h.

The King of the Watchtower of Fire is Ohooohaatan. The letters in his name are represented in this way:

6 o o 22 H 6 t n
w h 8 17 o 12 A 9 n

The W under the 6 is not really a W at all, but is intended to represent the Greek letter Omega, which appears just to the left of the uppermost capital T on the outer ring of the Sigillum Aemeth. You proceed clockwise by jumps of twelve in each case to reach the following letter-number combination. The rationale for this is that the Golden Dawn seal of the Watchtower of Fire has twelve rays radiating out from it (Dee's seal has eleven or nine rays). This time there is no taboo about crossing the 6/W that began the name.

ENOCHIAN CHESS IN THE GOLDEN DAWN

The most interesting idiosyncrasy of Golden Dawn Enochian magic was the invention of Enochian chess. It was probably a purely theoretical exercise. Regardie asserts in The Golden Dawn that he never encountered a member who was willing to play a game with him, although some adepts made "fulsome praises of its remarkable divinatory capacity."¹⁵ He further says that the chess pieces he saw were unmounted, and that this was "a clear indication that they had never and could never have been employed."

The board was formed of the sixteen squares of the good angels in each subquarter of a generic Watchtower. The squares of the Great Cross and lesser crosses were simply removed. This resulted in a board of sixty-four squares, the same number as on a regular chess board. Each of these squares was divided with a cross into four triangles, and each triangle painted its associated elemental color (yellow, blue, black and red).

The pieces are Egyptian god forms. A full set numbered twenty men and sixteen pawns (the four kings had no pawn). The game was to be played by four players seated on the four sides of the board. Each received a queen, knight, rook, bishop and king, as well as four pawns to stand before them. The king occupied the corner square, which he shared with his bishop. The elemental association of each set of forces is indicated by colored bases. The forces of the king of air have yellow bases, those of the king of water blue bases, those of the king of earth black bases, and those of the king of fire red bases.

The men move the same way they do in regular chess, with a few idiosyncrasies. The queen can move only three squares in any direction, but she may jump over intervening pieces like the knight. There is no castling. There is no use of en passant for the pawns, which move only a single square (they do not have the option of a two-square move at the start). When a pawn reaches the end of its rank, it is promoted to the rank of the piece it guarded (the bishop's pawn is made a bishop of the same element, for example), even if that piece is still in play. Presumably, additional pieces are needed.

The players play in teams of two, or two players play using two elemental forces that are in harmony with each other (fire and air; water and earth). When stalemate occurs, the player who is stalemated loses his turn until the stalemate is removed. When one player on a team is checkmated, he loses his move and his partner continues to play in an effort to free him from the checkmate. When both players on a team are checkmated simultaneously, they lose and the game is over.

I have simplified the description of Enochian chess that is given in the Golden Dawn. It has numerous weird little quirks which, I am quite certain, would make it impossible to actually play in any satisfactory manner. Since it has nothing whatsoever to do with genuine Enochian magic, except by its name, there is no point in devoting much space to it.

TRUE ENOCHIAN CHESS

True Enochian chess (yet to be invented) would be three-dimensional and would play on the four Watchtowers arranged at four levels. It would employ the Enochian angels whose names appear on the Great Table as men. Each force should probably consist of the King, six Seniors, and sixteen Dispositors, with the sixteen good angels serving as pawns. The Great Table would have to be conceived as though it were wrapped back upon itself into a sphere, so that a player could move off the left edge of the eastern quarter and onto the right edge of the southern quadrant, or off the bottom edge of the northern quarter and onto the top edge of the eastern quarter.

You are invited to fill in the rest of the rules. I warn you, however, this will be no easy task. It is a fairly simple matter to devise a concept for a board game such as chess. This is all the Enochian chess of the Golden Dawn is—a concept. It is a far more difficult challenge to come up with a set of rules that allows the game to be played as an equal contest to a satisfying conclusion within an agreeable length of time.

APPENDIX A

Enochian Book of Spirits

A RECONSTRUCTED ENOCHIAN BOOK OF SPIRITS

In this appendix, I have attempted to reconstruct the Book of Spirits that is to be used to summon and establish a communication with the angels of the Great Table during the initial eighteen-day working. I have used the structure of the Original Great Table of the Watchtowers as the basis for these invocations because I am presenting the original Enochian magic of Dee and Kelley. Anyone who has understood the exposition of the Great Table previously given can, with little difficulty, alter the text and ordering of the invocations and the spelling of the spirit names to reflect the structure of my own Restored Great Table or (though I do not recommend it) the structure of the Great Table of Raphael.

In this work, I have placed the third cycle of the Dispositors and good angels on the northern subquarters. It would seem more rational to place the cycles successively in a circle clockwise, east, south, west, north. However, it is clear from the Original Table and the Vision of the Round House that the angels intended the cycles of the subquarters to be arranged in two rows in the order east, south, north, west. This in spite of the fact that the individual subquarters of each cycle around the Great Table are unfolded in the order east, south, west, north.

This contradiction between the way the cycles are unfolded around the Great Table (east, south, north, west) and the way the individual subquarters in each cycle are unfolded (east, south, west, north) makes no sense to me. However, I have decided not to second guess the angels on this matter. The arrangement of the subquarters and their four cycles of four are presented as they were delivered by Ave to Dee. For a better understanding of this distinction, see the diagram of the four cycles of the Keys in Chapter Fourteen, which shows the same arrangement.

It should be noted that the Enochian letter Van stands for both U and V in English. Therefore these English letters may be interchanged in the names of the angels where this aids the pronunciation of the names. If you compare the names of the angels below with the letters on the Original Great Table (which I have not altered, except to correct errors) you will see when I have made this substitution. Generally, I have substituted U in place of V when there is no adjacent vowel or when the ease of vibrating the name is greatly improved.

These invocations should be written or typed out by the magician on clean paper, and then bound into the form of a book. Alternatively, they may be written by hand in a new bound journal of blank pages. It is also a good idea to include a table containing all the names of God and the angels in each invocation before the text of that invocation, as Dee did in his own version of the Book of Spirits. One of the reasons is that it allows the inclusion in the book of the names of the evil angels, or cacodemons, formed of three letters. These names are composed of two letters from under the left arms of the lesser crosses coupled with a prefatory letter from the Black Cross on the same line of the Great

Table. The names of these demons are not to be voiced in the invocations, but the angels do not expressly forbid that they be written in the book. Dee included them in his tables.

It is usually the practice in ritual magic to memorize the text of invocations prior to the ritual in which they are to be used. This is always the best course. However, these Enochian invocations are quite complex. Since the Book of Spirits obviously was intended to play a central role in the invocations, it will be acceptable to the angels if the magician reads the text from the book he or she has made. In either case, the book should always be present during the invocations. Each invocation is read three times on its own day: once at sunrise, once at noon, and once at sunset.

These readings must be done in a holy place, a place that has been ritually cleansed and consecrated to its purpose. A flame should be kept burning on the Table of Practice during the invocations. The Table may be used as an altar during ritual as well as a support for the scrying stone. The magician should be dressed in clean white linen, and be physically and mentally pure in the magical sense. A cleansing prayer is recommended before each speaking of an invocation.

A large representation of the Great Table of the Watchtowers that corresponds with the structure of the invocations should also be present. You may wish to adopt the Golden Dawn practice of dividing the Great Table into individual Watchtowers and hanging these on the walls of the ritual chamber in the four directions. Or you may prefer to use my own Enochian cube, a cubic representation of the Great Table that I suggested for Gerald and Betty Schueler's The Angels' Message to Humanity. See the Schuelers' book for a description of its making. If the cube is employed, it should be placed on the Table of Practice during the invocations.

It may be that the Book of Spirits is to be used only during the eighteen days of the initial invocation. Its primary purpose is to call forth the angels so that they can be induced to write their sigils or signatures in the Book of Silvered Leaves, using the body of the magician as their writing instrument. On this subject the angel Ave tells Dee:

Ave: You must never use the [linen] Garment after, but that once onely, neither the book.

Kelley: In what end is the book made then, if it be not to be used after.

Dee: It is made for to be used that day onely.¹

Notice that it is Dee who says the book is to be used only on the nineteenth day of the working, not Ave. The angel says the book and the special linen garment are to be used only once, but this may mean only during the period of the working. Certainly it would seem necessary to refer to the invocations in the Book of Spirits on successive days. Perhaps the linen garment that is worn on the day of consummation may also be worn on the eighteen days of invocation, but never after the working is concluded.

Nor it is completely clear which book Ave refers to, although Dee and Kelley seem to assume that the angel is talking about the Book of Spirits. Ave may mean that the Book of Silvered Leaves is to be used only once, at the time the invoked angels imprint their sigils upon it. If this is so, then no restriction is placed by the angels on the use of the Book of Spirits.

You will find it easier to comprehend the overall pattern of the Book of Spirits in this appendix if you refer to the table near the beginning of Chapter Thirteen, which shows the offices of the various classes of angels on a Watchtower. These groups and their works are the same on all four Watchtowers, but the angels of each Watchtower only function in the corresponding quarter of the Earth.

Some Neopagan practitioners may object to the overtly Christian content of these invocations. They are free to compose their own set of invocations that do not mention the Hebrew names of God or the name of Christ. However, they should consider that Enochian magic functions within the context of Christianity and makes extensive use of Christian, Gnostic, and Kabbalistic symbolism. Indeed, it is scarcely possible to understand Enochian magic without a knowledge of the myths and magic of the Old and New Testaments, as I have demonstrated in my book Tetragrammaton. I used as my models Dee's own invocations in Liber Scientiae and the prayer of Enoch delivered to Dee by the angel Ave, which I quoted in full in Chapter Sixteen. These paradigms are responsible for the Christian tone.

In composing the following original invocations, I hope that I have managed to do a better job than Dee, and that Ave would not tell me, as he told Dee, "My brother, I see thou dost not understand the mystery of this Book." However, only time and repeated use will prove the worth, or lack of worth, of these invocations.

ANGELS OF THE FIRST DAY

INVOCATION OF THE FIRST DAY: BANNERS OF THE EAST

Adonai Sabaoth, Lord of Hosts, the fountain of true wisdom, who opens the mysteries of being and not being, who knows the imperfections and inner darkness of men, I, _____, a fragile vessel of the making of your hands, stand here before you and call upon your name. I am less than the sand before your mountain. I am less than the torrents in the springtime before the wonderful and unknown waves of your sea. Yet I call upon your name, and in your name I am become mighty.

Light my soul and make me a seer of visions, that I may see your creatures who are the glory of your countenance. I will praise your names and magnify your works among them. Those who lift their hearts to you in the east ascend by one gate, and through that gate descend your appointed messengers, for we have all one God, all one beginning from you, and all acknowledge you the sole Creator.

I offer and dedicate this table of the Watchtower of the East unto you, and unto your holy angels whose names appear inscribed upon this table and written in this book, desiring their presence in and through your holy names of the east, ORO, IBAH, AOZPI, and your other names having dominion in the east. Let it please your angels to dwell with me, that I may dwell with them; to rejoice with me, that I may rejoice with them; to minister unto me, that I may magnify your names among them.

As you are the light and comfort to your angels, so are they my light and comfort in your names; as it pleases them to receive what you offer, so also I receive with pleasure what they offer unto me; even as they prescribe no laws unto you, O Lord, so shall I prescribe no laws unto them.

Let them manifest to me in the eastern regions at whatever time or circumstance, and by whatever words, I call them. So also let them depart when I bid them depart. ORISON OF THE NINETEENTH DAY

O Lord of Hosts, is there any creature that measures the heavens, that is mortal? Can a frail and fearful vessel of flesh lift itself up, heave up its hands, or gather the Sun to its bosom? How shall I therefore ascend into the spheres? The air will not carry me, but mocks my folly. I fall down, for I am the clay of the earth. How, therefore, can the light of heaven enter into man's imagination?

Notwithstanding, I am comforted. In your name I am become mighty. You who are the light of truth and savior of the world can, and shall, and do, command the heavens and all its hosts as it pleases you. I require nothing but by you, and through you, for your greater honor and glory. What it pleases you to offer me, I receive. Behold, I pledge my possessions, my labor, my heart and soul for the fulfillment of this work.

These consecrated tables, shaped and prepared according to your will, I offer up to you and to your holy angels, desiring their attendance in and through your names of power. Command them as you will, O Lord. May it please your angels to dwell with me, that I may dwell with them; to rejoice with me, that I may rejoice with them; to minister unto me, that I may magnify your name. As you are their light and comfort, so they will be my light and comfort; as they receive what it pleases you to offer, so I will receive what it pleases them to offer; as they prescribe no laws to you, so shall I prescribe no laws to them. Yet when I call upon them in your name, O Lord, be it unto me in mercy as unto the servant of the Highest.

I am become a seer in the light of your countenance. I see your shining angels and magnify your name among them. Adonai Sabaoth, I _____ call upon the power of your name. In the power of your mighty name this work of invocation is well and truly fulfilled. Amen. Amen. Amen.

APPENDIX B

The Vision of the Round House

MONDAY, JANUARY 14, 1585, AT PRAGUE

Kelley: Here is, Dee, one with a Vail afore his face, as it were, a Hair Cloth of Ash-colour: I know him not yet: I see a Garden full of fruit, of divers sorts. In the midst of it is a place higher then the rest. On that place standeth a round House, it hath four corners [within] and 4 Windows: and every Window is round, and hath 4 round partitions, round also. It hath 4 Doores, and at the East Door is one step, at the South 2 steps, and at the North 3, and at the West Door, 4 steps: The first Door is white, like Chrystal, transparent: The South Door is red of an high colour, transparent. The North Door is bright black, not to be through seen, as the rest. The West is green, like an Emerauld Stone: So is the South Door like a Ruby. The Doores be all plain. The House within (as it may be judged by the transparent Doores) seemeth to be white, and empty.

He that hath his face covered, openeth the East Door; and all the House seemeth to be on fire, like a furnace. The fire within doth weve, and move about the House, and by the rooffe. Now he openeth the West Door, and there appeareth, as if all the House were a fountain full of water. And there run divers streames, in the same one water, whereof, one doth go and come, as if it ebbed and flowed; which stream doth go about all the rest, by the sides of the House, that is, as if it were the Ocean sea compassing the World. The next stream, within that, moveth from the 4 sides ward, and make (in manner) 4 Triangles, or rather Cones, of water, whose vertices rest cut off (as it were) by the middle stream of water which occupieth the middle or Center of the House, and is in circular form invironed.

An other manner of stream there is, which commeth from the 4 corners of an innermost square: and so run diametraliter or contradictorie wise, toward that circular middle stream.

The middle stream seemeth to issue out at the very Center of the place, and to mount up, and making an arch of his course, doth seem to fall circulariter in one circumference.

Kelley: The fire also had diversity in it.

Dee: I would you had noted the diversity of the fires also.

Levanael: Those that learn truly, learn by parts.

Kelley: The colour of the water in the Center, is most pure white.

The waters of that Saint Andrews Crosse, are like a water somewhat Saffronish coloured. The waters of the Triangles, are somewhat like a watrish blew, which appeareth most, in the top of the arches of their flowing:

For all spring otherwise.

The uttermost water, is of Quick-silver shew, as if it were somewhat mortified.

Dee: In the figure following, you may gather a better and more easie understanding of this Description of the water streams.

Casaubon's Marginal Note: Here is a blank, or void space in the Original Copie: but no figure. (I have inserted my own illustrations into the voids in Dee's manuscript—D.T.)

Currents of Water in the Round House

Kelley: Now he openeth the Fire Door againe: And the fire appeareth in a square place. And there appeare 4 fires filling the whole place, leaving nothing vacuum.

One of these fires seemeth to rise from the Center of the place; and to go in low arches to the 4 corners of the House.

The House seemeth to have 14 foot long in every side.

The arches of these fires seem to come from a trunk of fire, which riseth from about the Center: and seemeth to be 4 foot over in the Diameter.

This Trunk seemeth to be high three quarters of the height of the place; The place seemeth to be as high as it is broad.

On the top of this fiery trunk, seemeth the fire to be in form of a fiery Globe, having 6 foot, his Diameter, which fire reverberateth and rolleth in it self.

From the sides of the Trunk (between the said Globe and the foresaid Arches,) goeth up fire Triangularly, filling all; saving that which remaineth filled, by the flames of fire, which ariseth from the Globe to the 4 corners of the House, filling all the place above the Globe.

Dee: As by the figure annexed, more plainly may appear.

Currents of Fire in the Round House

Kelley: Note The colour of the fire of the 4 arches, is very red: The rest are very pure, Aerial, candent, etc.

The Motion of the trunk fire is swiftest.

The Original Center of all these fires, seemeth to be very little.

Now he openeth the red Door.

The House seemeth darkish, of colour of the smoak of a Wax Candle being put out.

Levanael: By it self, it is not, but by the Sunne, it is clear.

Kelley: It hath 4 motions in it also: every one moving more swiftly then the other: All from the middle of the House. Three of them move arch-wise to the sides.

The first and second arise to half the height of the place.

The third occupieth the other half.

The fourth goeth upright to the top of the House.

The second his space (that he striketh against on the Wall) is doubled to the space of the Wall, against which the first smiteth.

Casaubon's Marginal Note: Here is a blank, or void space in the Original Copie: but no figure.

Currents of Air in the Round House

Kelley: Now he openeth the black bright Door; and the House there seemeth full of black dust, like Gun-powder colour, or somewhat of Leadish colour.

Now he seemeth to goe down, faire and softly from the House, down the little Hill, and from thence goeth by a water side, to a Rockish Mountain.

He speaketh.

Levanael: Ascend. I am now ready for you: Bring out your Mattocks, Spades, and Shovels. Enig è veri eri.

Kelley: Now come out of that Rock, seven lean men, with Spades, and Shovels, and Mattocks, etc.

Levanael: Follow me.

Kelley: Now they be come up to the foresaid Hill.

Levanael: Come on, Dig till you finde.

Kelley: Every one standeth distinctly one from another, and they dig on the foresaid Hill, which before seemed covered with Earth and Grasse: But now it appeareth to be a Rock, and they dig that the Fire flieth out again of their stroakes, and some have broken their Mattocks, some their Spades, all except two, one with a Shovel, an other with a Pickax.

Workmen: O Lord we labour in vain.

Levanael: So you are sure to do, unlesse you have better Toolles.

Workmen: Alas we labour in vain.

One of them: This is long of you.

Levanael: I had you provide Instruments to labour with, but you asked not me, wherein you should labour. Therefore have you digged away that which you saw, and have repulse with that you know not.

A dark man thou art, and hidden away from men, and so are thy doings.

Kelley: They stood gazing one on another.

Levanael: Have you not better Instruments? Go, provide your selves, and return.

Kelley: They runne a great pace to the foresaid Rocky Cave from whence they came out first. Now they come againe with great Beetles of Iron, and Wedges. They knock their Wedges (as we use in Wood) and so break off great Slakes of Stone, like Slate, and throw it down the Hill.

One of them: What a thing is this, that this Wedg is broken?

Another: We are in worse case then ever we were.

Kelley: Their Wedges are broken, the most part, and the Fire flieth out of the Stone in great abundance.

Levanael: The nature of this Stone is not to cleave: Therefore if you have no other Instruments you must cease.

Kelley: They are in great disquietness among themselves.

Levanael: Those that go a Journey, provide them Cloathes against all weathers: He that is worthy of the Name of a Conqueror, carrieth with him all Engines: Where the Bridges be broken down, he stayeth not, because he is prepared: Behold, he hath victuals for time to come, and his Study is as well the event, as is the mean. So should true Labourers do: considering what they work in. For the Earth is a Monster with many faces: and the receptacle of all variety. Go home, stand not idle. Provide by Arts for the hardnesse of Nature, for the one Sifter weepeth without the other.

Kelley: They go away speedily.

Levanael: They have their Tooles to harden, and their Steeles to temper. It will be more than an hour space before they return. Therefore may you spend the time in your necessity, and use the time of day as you are acquainted or wonted. I also must over-see them, or else their labour will be without fruit.

Kelley: Now he is gone.

Dee's note: The same day, after dinner we returned to our former purpose for God his Service, to his Honour and Glory.

Kelley: He is here. Now the Labourers be comming out; They have Wedges made long and sharp: and Pickaxes with three pikes very short.

Workers: Our trust is, that these tool will serve.

Kelley: They fall to work. They make like square holes, and put in their wedges, and break up the rock or blackish stone (like yron-mine, or Magnes stone) in roundish lumps as big as a two-peny loaf, about two or three inches thick. They pick or dig round about the hole first, and so after use their wedges. The Pickaxes have three heads, each pick thereof bigger then the other. The first is as big as one finger: the second as two: the third as broad as four fingers. And so after the first digging they fetch three or four cakes or pieces out of one hole, and then they go to another. Now one of them is faln into the ground; up to the arm-pits. Now another is faln in, to the knees. Now the house standing thereon beginneth to shake, and waver from one side to the other. Now the men be gotten out of the holes they stuck in.

Levanael: Make an end of your labour.

One of the Workman to the Guide: It behoveth you to find a remedy, or to let us understand what remedy we shall finde, that you may descend thence: for lo, the peril you stand in, is great: for this Rock was nothing else but a shell, whose kernel is a bottomlesse lake, and a myre quickened with some shut up water.

Levanael: You come hither as Labourers, therefore make an end of your work, and stand not idle. If the house, fall, and I sink, then is your labour at an end. For the end of your labour is the fulfilling of my will, and the promise which you have made me.

One of them: We are ready to do our promise; but we are more ready to provide that you may be amongst us; so you may be free from danger.

Levanael: O you of little wit; are you not ashamed? which of you have dwelt within the secrets of this Hill? yea, which of you intendeth to fulfil his promise? Judge not a thing whereof you have no skill, neither be slack in that you have to do: for the one hath his reward of idleness, and the other is condemned of rashness: For why? It springeth on her mother ignorance.

They say: If we work, it is against reason. Neither do our tools answer to this labour. Therefore we had rather be idle, then to labour about nothing: for to labour in vain, is to do nothing.

If we were determined to work, how should we perform out determination, since the Instruments of working want?

Levanael: Gather up the pieces of your spades, that is wood, and may be joyned together: The older and the baser they are, the fitter they are to turn up such soile.

Kelley: There commeth a Smith by with a budget full of nails.

One of them to the Smith: What hast thou there?

Smith: Nails.

Kelley: They be like Horshooe-nails.

Levanael: Thou cam'st in good time, leave thy nails behind thee, and at thy return I will pay thee for them. See, God is not unmindful of us, for nails are the fittest things to further your work. Joyn therefore your spades and shovels together, and labour.

Kelley: Now they are mending their spades and shovels, the iron of them being all off and broken.

Now they work, and throw away the earth like dirty sand, and the skurf of the earth sticketh to their spades and shovels.

One goeth behinde, and maketh a trench to let the water out from the sand.

One of them: How now! Have we found harvest in the midst of winter?

Levanael: Why: what have you there?

One of them: Marry, either Alablaster or Salt.

Kelley: Now one of them knocketh a piece off with his shovel-end, and reacheth it up to his Guide.

Levanael: Did I not tell you, that the Earth hath many faces?

Kelley: They work now easily, and cut up like Salt or Alablaster.

Now they have digged all the hill away, even to the house. Now the house seemeth builded upon that white stuff.

One of them: If we dig any further, we shall undermine the house.

Levanael: Go to your business.

Kelley: They work.

Levanael: Soft, soft. Now labour with your hands as softly as may be. Stand aside.

Kelley: Now he taketh one of the irons of their spades, and seemeth himself to pare the sides of the Foundation under the house, and it seemeth to be a vessel of transparent glasse, and having fire within it.

Levanael: The fear of the Lord is a burning fire, consumeth not, but rectifieth the body; the old dross it wipeth away, and the daily influxion of the flesh and sin it separateth from the soul.

Behold (I say) he liveth not, but unto whom life is given: neither is their any joy, but it is ascending: for the end of joy is glory; but glory is the consummation of desire, and the beginning of felicity. No man entereth into joy, but by life: neither is there any life, but in the fear of God.

Whosoever therefore hath the fear of God, let him draw neer, and come hither. Number exceedeth not, but by unities. Neither is there any multiplication but by order. For the root of number is one. And things that ascend are dignified by order. Out of this vessel go four vents ascending into that Rock, which is the Root, which is this building.

It is said, Behold: let my spirit enter in, let there be Separation made within the house of the North, that the earth may be divided into her members. Cursed be that body, that is not divided, according to proportion, answering to the Division. For she hath yet not cast off the shape of darknesse.

Kelley: There runneth up fire into the house, from out of the round glasse vessel under the foundation of the house. And that fire maketh a great noise (through the black bright or marble door to be hard only.) Now that North door is mightily thrown open, and there appear in the house like kernels of apples, and slime appeareth, and water thinner then slime, and there appeareth pure water, else. Now there commeth together stuff like yellow earth, which the fire wrought out of the black earth: And the pure water runneth into that yellow stuff.

Levanael: Of that take a part.

Kelley: The fire returneth back again among the stuff in that house, and there appear of all Creatures some.

Levanael: Here is Creation, and it is the first.

Kelley: Now he taketh a lump of the earth lying by, which was thrown up, and he breaketh it into six pieces like round Balls.

He taketh a thing like a vessel of iron, and putteth into it that mixture of yellow earth and water. And it looketh now like grasse mingled with water.

Levanael: Thou art strong, and wilt beget a strong Child.

Kelley: Now he putteth out the earth which he put in, and it is a lump of gold. He giveth it him that standeth by.

Levanael: So are the seeds of the earth.

Kelley: Now he taketh the second, and putteth it in.

Levanael: Corruption is a thief, for he hath robbed thee of thy best Ornaments, for thou art weaker in the second.

Kelley: He taketh it out, and it is as if it were pure silver.

Levanael: Where there is double theft, poverth insueth. But, notwithstanding, Thou art true; for thou givest unto every thing as much as he desireth: Thou openest the greatest hability and strength of thy power, not such as it hath been, but such as it is.

Kelley: Now he putteth in the third Ball.

Levanael: Thou must tarry, for thou art of an harder digestion, since thou art the third, Content thy self, for thou art not an Inheritor.

Kelley: He taketh it out, and giveth unto one of them that standeth by, that is a red metal like copper.

Now he taketh up another of the Balls, and holdeth it in his hand.

Levanael: Behold, thy mother, Heat is gone, and the enemy of life entreth; for he that passeth his middle age, decayeth, and draweth to an end.

Behold, thou shalt find a Step-mother, for thou cam'st out of time.

Kelley: Now he putteth it into the vessel.

Levanael: Let cold cover thy face, let the North truly beget thee, for thou art an enemy to thy predecessors. But thou are of great vertue, for of thy excrement shall vertue receive dignity. And thy vertue shall be a garland to Nature; for thou shalt be visible when the other are silent: the Seas shall not hinder thy vertue, notwithstanding, thy vertue shall differ with the Seas: For as they differ, so shalt thou.

Kelley: Now he taketh it out. It is a ragged thing like Smiths cynder of iron, and it hath holes in it, as if it were spongy.

Now he taketh up another Ball of the earth: he putteth it in.

Levanael: Thou are tractable and like unto an obedient daughter: But thou shalt be the fifth in the second and an Instrument to the first.

Kelley: Now he taketh it out, it is like unto a white whetstone, as he shaped it at the putting in, it is like Tynne.

Now he taketh up another Ball, and putteth it in.

Levanael: Thou art the last that hath in himself and by himself his being: Behold thy face is like unto wax, but thy inward bowels are like unto the anger of a Serpent: Many shall have thee, but shall not know thee.

One of them by said: Will you give me nothing?

Kelley: A great cloud covereth them all, the stone and all.¹

Reprinted in facsimile by The Antonine Publishing Co., Glasgow, 1974, page 174.

This work is a reproduction of a portion of Dee's magical diaries, along with plates of some of the more important Enochian symbols such as the Table of Practice and the Golden Talisman. It should be noted that the pagination in this work is faulty. The pages jump (for no obvious reason) from 256 to 353, and continue at this higher level. 4. Ibid., p. 67. Dee is not explicit, saying only of this spirit: "thou preservest me (through the mercy of God) from the power of the wicked: and wast with me in extremity. Thou wast with me thoroughly." The reference is perhaps to the events of September 23, 1583. When Dee and Kelley were disembarking from a Danish flyboat into a small fishing boat, the rigging of the fishing boat became entangled with that of the flyboat and caused the lighter craft to take on water. Kelley bailed the boat using a gauntlet and was able to keep it from foundering in the rough sea until they made land at Queenborough, Kent (see Casaubon, p. 33). This incident took place a year after the reception of the Heptarchia, but perhaps the portion of Dee's manuscript that contains the reference to the spirit Mares was written at a later date.

5. In British Library Sloane MS 3191. Dee has taken extreme care to reproduce both the Enochian language version (in Latin characters) and the English translation of the Keys in a meticulous printed script.

6. Complete Enochian Dictionary, p. 35.

7. It is my strong opinion that the direction in the Thirteenth Key should be west, not south. No mistake was made by Dee and Kelley in transcribing this word, because the English correctly matches the Enochian. "Babagen" does indeed mean south. However, as I have shown in my book Tetragrammaton (p. 219) this direction violates the sequence previously and subsequently adhered to in the Keys.

Beginning with the Third Key, each Key is associated with a direction in four cycles around the Earth that being in the east and move clockwise: 3rd-east, 4th-south, 5th-west, 6th-north; 7th-east, 8th-south, 9th-west, 10th-north; 11th-east, 12th-south, 13th-west (should be), 14th-north; 15th-east, 16th-south, 17th-west, 18th-north.

I advise anyone working with the Keys to change "Swords of the south" to "Swords of the north," and "babagen" to "sobel."
